'FORBID WAR,' APPEAL OF WILSON

JOIN TO BEAT ROOSEVELT AND HUGHES

G. O. P. Alliance for Root First, Mid-Western Men Second.

HAS 500 DELEGATES.

COL. ROOSEVELT GIVES HIS VIEWS

On page 5 of "The Tribune" today is an article by Theodore Roosevelt—the first of a series of five to be published during the next ten days. This article urges nationalizing the United States and deals with the country's needs.

Col. Roosevelt being an avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, this series of articles will be read with especial interest, as presenting the principles upon which he seeks the nomination.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

A combination has been formed—carrying into it between 525 and 540 Republican national delegates—that precludes the nomination of either Theodore Roosevelt or Justice Hughes.

This is the information that reaches The Tribune from highest possible sources. It is receiving circumstantial corroboration with the arrival of each state leader and delegate.

It is a combination that can be shattered, apparently, only by a stampede to Justice Hughes, that must be of sufficient proportions to nominate him on the second ballot.

ONLY CHANCE FOR T. R.

Col. Roosevelt's own nomination is now held to be improbable by the engineers of the combination and only possible at the end of a protracted deadlock forced by the failure of the alleged combination to agree within its own ranks if it shall have succeeded in the avowed policy of eliminating Hughes not later than the second ballot.

Elihu Root is the first choice of the active leaders who have perfected this combination through a year of careful maneuvers. Their second choice is Theodore E. Burton, Charles W. Fairbanks, or Lawrence Y. Sherman, not necessarily in this order.

John W. Weeks figures strongly, but the thoroughly posted men do not believe that he can command sufficient strength to land him within striking distance of the nomination. Philander C. Knox will have certain consideration as a dark horse.

SWEEP TO HUGHES PERILS.

The immediate policy is to stop a sweep to Hughes that will give to him the nomination at the outset of the balloting. The secondary policy is to nominate one of the first four men named in the preceding paragraph.

It is probably true that the managers of this combination look for substantial aid from Col. Roosevelt in sideswiping the Hughes boom. If the movement toward the justice gets to anything like landslide proportions, the hope is deeply founded that the colonel will say something that will put the justice out of commission as a winner.

SOUTH UNINSTRUCTED.

For the first time in many Republican national conventions, the delegations from the south come in without instructions. Nearly all are in the combination. Former Postmaster Gen. Hitchcock has picked out delegates here and there, who will be for Hughes, if all surface indications are borne out. Roosevelt has the entire state of Georgia, if his list of delegates is seated, with scattering delegates in other southern states.

All that the leader of each southern state wants is to land with the nominee. All that he has at stake is the federal patronage with a Republican administration in power at Washington.

This is an essential factor in the framework of the combination, undoubtedly. It is upon this theory that the first ballot table, printed herewith, is constructed by The Tribune.

ROOT TO LEAD FIELD.

The tabulation, upon the hypothesis that the states in the combination and not bound to favorite sons, will be cut up

J. J. Hill Undergoes Operation; Report Condition Serious

Mayo Brothers Use Knife Quickly After Rushed Trip on Special.

RELAPSE IS SUDDEN

St. Paul, Minn., May 27.—James J. Hill, railroad builder and capitalist, lay in a serious condition at his Summit avenue residence tonight, after having undergone an operation this afternoon.

Eminent surgeons and physicians, nurses, members of the Hill family, and a few close friends kept vigil through the night. Archbishop John Ireland, long time friend of the "empire builder," was among those who visited the sickroom.

Dr. James F. Gilfillan, on leaving the Hill residence at 11 o'clock tonight, made the following statement:

"Mr. Hill is doing very nicely. There is no fever, and I do not anticipate any danger. Of course, it will take two or three days to determine what good the operation has done. It was not a major operation, and in a younger patient little would be thought of it.

"Mr. Hill is suffering with a carbuncle on his thigh, the result of bowel trouble."

Relapse Is Sudden.

Although Mr. Hill has remained in retirement at his residence for ten days, it was only two or three days ago that the public became aware that he was seriously ill.

It was at first reported he was suffering from a minor indisposition.

Yesterday, however, Louis Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad, made a hurried trip to Rochester, Minn., aboard a special train to bring to St. Paul Dr. William J. Mayo. Dr. Mayo arrived and held a consultation with Dr. Gilfillan and returned to Rochester last night. At that time it was said that no operation would be performed.

Two Mayos Are Called.

Today, however, Dr. Mayo, accompanied by his brother, Charles H. Mayo, made a second fast trip from Rochester to St. Paul by special train.

When the special train pulled into the railroad yards, Louis W. Hill, his sister, Miss Clara Hill; George T. Slade, vice president of the Northern Pacific railroad, James J. Hill's son-in-law, with Mr. Hill's personal secretary, were waiting with several automobiles.

Within a short time it was announced that an operation had been performed upon Mr. Hill. Infection in the patient's thigh had been opened and drained.

MADAME JANE DIEULAFOY DIES IN PARIS RESIDENCE.

Woman Soldier, Scientist, and Explorer Expires—Served in Battles of Franco-Prussian War.

PARIS, May 27.—Mme. Jane Dieulafoy, author, explorer, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and possessor of the unique privilege, accorded by the French government, of wearing male apparel, is dead.

Mme. Dieulafoy was born in Toulouse and was not yet out of her teens when she married Marcel Auguste Dieulafoy, a young engineer. He went to the front during the Franco-Prussian war and took his bride with him. She disguised herself as a man in the regulation French uniform and fought by her husband's side.

Both returned unscathed from the battlefields, and for a decade little was heard of the adventurous young woman. In that time her husband established a high reputation as an engineer and archeologist, and in the '80s was commissioned to go to Asia for archeological research.

It was a dangerous and arduous task, but Mme. Dieulafoy accompanied him. She spent several years in Chaldea and Persia, sharing his work and perils. They were rewarded by discovering the ruins of the palaces of Darius and Artaxerxes, and brought back bas reliefs which were placed in the Louvre.

After returning to France Mme. Dieulafoy, who had become accustomed during er travels to the constant wearing of a man's costume, received authorization to appear in public in this apparel.

DADY ORDERS POLICE TO HOLD ORPET COUNSEL

Lawyer Seeks Witness in Toledo After Hearing Amazing Tale.

SUICIDE THREAT TOLD.

State's Attorney Ralph Dady of Lake county yesterday telegraphed to the authorities of Toledo asking them to arrest Joseph Hartmann and Kenneath Hawkins, law partner of James H. Wilkerson, senior counsel in the defense of Will Orpet, on trial in Waukegan for the murder of Marion Lambert.

This amazing request on the part of the Lake county prosecutor reached the Ohio city too late. Hawkins and Hartmann arrived in Toledo on Tuesday and returned to Chicago the following day.

They had gone to Toledo to search for a young woman to whom, it is said, Marion Lambert confided she would commit suicide if Orpet deserted her for Celeste Youker. The testimony of this woman—if she exists—was calculated by the defense to clear Orpet of the charge of murder.

The defense was told that the woman had left the state under mysterious circumstances a few days after Marion Lambert died of cyanide of potassium in the snow in Helm's woods last February.

Mr. Wilkerson and his associates in Orpet's defense are making a careful investigation of the circumstances under which she disappeared. They have not yet succeeded in locating her. She was to have appeared in Mr. Wilkerson's office by appointment through Hartman yesterday, but did not.

There was a suspicion on Mr. Wilkerson's part that she did not exist, or at least that the story as told by Hartman might be a plot to discredit the defense. Although determined to investigate it on behalf of his client, Mr. Wilkerson's aids did not overlook the possibility of a "plant."

Hartmann says he is the young woman's cousin. He put the lawyers for the defense on the trail of the missing witness. Hawkins and Hartmann learned in Toledo that the woman had been living in the Ohio city since shortly after the Lambert tragedy, but recently had come to Chicago.

DADY'S TIP PUZZLES.

How State's Attorney Dady learned of the visit of Hawkins and Hartmann to Toledo is a mystery. As soon as he did learn of it, he wired Prosecutor John C. Dalton of Toledo to arrest the two men. The Toledo prosecutor sent an assistant to the Boody house, where Hawkins and Hartmann had stayed, but they had checked out and left town.

State's Attorney Dady, it is said, also communicated over the long distance telephone with the clerk of the Boody house and asked him to assist in locating Hartmann and Hawkins. To the hotel clerk Mr. Dady made no explanation concerning his surprising eagerness to find the pair.

Mr. Dady last night declined to discuss his action in asking the arrest of Mr. Wilkerson's law partner and his companion in the Ohio city, except to say they were wanted as witnesses in the Orpet trial.

ACTION SURPRISES HANNA.

"I am greatly surprised at Dady's action," said Leslie P. Hanna, associated with Mr. Wilkerson and Ralph Potter in Orpet's defense. "I can't understand why he should want Hawkins arrested. He is a high class young man. I do not know Hartmann."

Mr. Dady was seen a second time and told of Mr. Hanna's statement.

"He can't understand, eh?" said Mr. Dady. "What were Hawkins and Hartmann doing in Toledo? Ask Hanna that. Hawkins is back in Chicago now. Ask him who Hartmann is."

Mr. Hawkins would say nothing about the affair. Mr. Wilkerson made this brief statement:

"Hawkins went to Toledo with Hartmann under my instructions to find a witness who, Hartmann had claimed in an interview in my office, had left the state a few days after the Lambert tragedy."

Further than this, Mr. Wilkerson would make no comment. An investigation

Pesterin' Police Chaperon Farmer and $10,000 Roll

Dapper Person Melts Away as "Cops" Meet Man on Banker's Tip.

SAVED FROM PLOT?

If ever a man got good and mad at a bunch of smart aleck city coppers, it was George W. Cowle of Decatur, Ill., last night.

Cowle, past 70, and mellowed by years of hard work as a farmer, got in from his home town at 6 p. m. with $10,000 in new greenbacks in an old leather bag and walked straight into the arms of Detective Sergeants Hobbs and Walsh of the South Clark street station.

Haled to what he insisted on terming the lockup, he spent an industrious two hours telling the minions of the law what he thought of a lot of pestiferous busybodies who wouldn't let a man spend his own money the way he wanted to. Then he went to bed, still protestingly in possession of his $10,000 and a well developed, ingrowing grouch.

May Have Prevented Murder.

Cowle won't admit it, but the police believe they have headed off a plot to rob and possibly murder the aged farmer.

Two weeks ago, according to his own story, a man named Evans introduced himself as a long lost nephew of Cowle's wife, now dead, invited the farmer to Kansas City, and told him of a farm near Bloomington to be had for $10,000, though it was "worth $20,000."

"This Evans is a fine feller," said Cowle. "Travelin' real estate man. Just goes around th' country buyin' an' sellin'."

Bargain Looks Alluring.

Cowles "happened" to have just $10,000 in a bank at Moweaqua, Ill. The bargain looked alluring. Two days ago he turned his money into a New York draft and came to Chicago, where Evans rented room in Forty-seventh street. But the Chicago bankers wouldn't cash the draft, so Cowle went back to Decatur to get his money.

At the Decatur bank, where the farmer is well known, the cashier didn't like the looks of things. He followed Cowle to his train, told the conductor his suspicions, and then wired the Chicago police.

Police on the Job.

The police were right on the job. So was a dapper young man of businesslike appearance. When he spied Cowle alighting from the train he stepped forward eagerly. When he spied the detectives he ducked. The detectives, being busy with Cowle, didn't have time to catch him.

While Cowle was giving the folks at the station his opinion of meddlers in general and Chicago policemen in particular other detectives were rushed out to the room on Forty-seventh stret. "Mr. Evans" had been there, it appeared, waiting for his uncle, but had just received a telephone call and hurried out with a traveling bag.

Try to Trace "Con Men."

Capt. Evans of the identification bureau was sent for and questioned the aged farmer at length in the hope of getting descriptions that would fit some "con men" known to the police.

While he was at it the desk sergeant at the station was called on the phone half a dozen times by a man who threatened prosecution and wanted to know "what in thunder you people mean by holding my uncle." Tracing the calls yielded no results. And the "nephew" didn't appear to claim his lost relative. Cowle, however, was still belligerent.

"D——d outrage!" he said. "Man can't spend his money the way he wants to. Big deal on all spoiled now. Gosh blamed pernickity ijjits!"

Still bellicose, Cowle was taken to a hotel, where he spent the night under the watchful eyes of a detective.

FIRE KILLS 4, HURTS 2 AT PENN COLLEGE, IOWA.

Falling Bell Crushes Walls and Victims Are Buried in Debris—Loss Put at $100,000.

Oskaloosa, Ia., May 27.—Fire which early today destroyed the administration building of Penn college here took a toll of four lives.

The bodies of Robert H. Williams, 35, financial agent of the college and state secretary of the Prohibition party, and Harry Oakley, 22, a freshman, were recovered soon after the flames were brought under control.

According to the chief of police two additional dead are George Raber, a railroad fireman, and an unidentified man. They were in a party of half a dozen who were carrying books from the library when the four ton bell in the cupola fell through the building, splitting and collapsing its front walls.

George Minear and Howard Kelley, students who were injured by the falling wall, probably will recover, physicians say tonight. The dead and injured all are residents of this city.

College officials tonight declared that the loss will total approximately $100,000.

METHODIST ANTI-DIVORCE RULES MADE MORE STRICT.

Ministers Who Perform Second Marriages Now Must Answer to Conference.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 27.—A Methodist minister who officiates at the marriage of a divorced person in violation of the rules of the church is guilty of an act of maladministration and may be compelled to answer charges before his conference, according to an amendment to the discipline of the church adopted unanimously today by the general conference. The church has always recognized only one ground for divorce and has permitted remarriage only of the innocent party, but no penalty has ever existed.

ONE 'GOOD TIME' ON STOLEN DIAMONDS YOUTH'S UNDOING

Casper Schmitz Comes to Grief in Joliet After Robbing Express Companies.

A riotous career of spending and showering diamonds on all his relatives came to an untimely end for Casper Schmitz, a 22 year old clerk, in Joliet last night.

The youth's penchant for having "just one good time" had led him into the hands of the Joliet police. If he had been more circumspect, according to his own story, he would still be enjoying himself. Being caught, he told the police, he was ready to confess and said he had stolen more than $5,000 worth of diamonds a week ago while working in Chicago for the Adams Express company.

The jewels, he said, were consigned to Spaulding & Co. and "hadn't been missed because he was working as a substitute driver during a strike and the office was all mixed up." Forty diamonds of various sizes were found in his possession.

40,000 BOSTONIANS MARCH IN PREPAREDNESS PARADE.

Greatest Street Demonstration Ever Seen in Hub—Gov. McCall and Gen. Wood View It.

Boston, Mass., May 27.—Boston sentiment for national preparedness found expression today in the greatest street demonstration that this city of conventions and parades ever has witnessed.

Forty thousand men and women by actual count marched under the American colors over a route of three miles, while perhaps a million others who made a holiday of the occasion applauded the paraders.

Virtually every phase of the city's official and civic life, commercial, professional, and social, was represented. Patriotic societies, social and business clubs, churches, colleges, and schools had contingents in the line. Of the marchers 5,000 were women.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—President Wilson, in an address before the League to Enforce Peace, tonight indicated in a guarded way that he is seriously considering the offering of his services as mediator in the European war and outlined to some extent the basis upon which he thinks the warring nations should make their agreement.

His statement was taken by many of those who heard him to mean that Mr. Wilson may in due time offer his services as a peacemaker on his own initiative instead of waiting until he has received a formal request to do so from one or more of the belligerents, a point by which he has guided his attitude regarding mediation in the past.

AMERICA MUST TAKE PART.

There were two sentences in the address which were taken to indicate the president's intention. They follow:

The desire of the whole world now turns eagerly toward the hope of peace and there is just reason why we should take our part in the counsel upon this great theme. It is right that I, as spokesman of our government, should attempt to give expression to what I believe to be the thought and purpose of the people of the United States in this vital matter.

Our own rights as a nation, the privileges and property of our own people have been profoundly affected. We are not mere disconnected lookers-on. The longer the war lasts the more deeply do we become concerned that it should be brought to an end and the world permitted to resume its normal life and course again.

BROAD PRINCIPLE OF WAR.

Mr. Wilson laid down a broad principle of right upon which he would seek to have the world guided.

He first stated that "every people has the right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live."

He asserted that the small states have the right to enjoy the same respect for their sovereignty and territorial integrity as the larger, and said that the world has the right to be free from every disturbance that has its origin in aggression.

Applying this to Europe, his hearers gathered that Mr. Wilson favors the restoration of Belgium, the independence of Poland, and permission for the little states to select their own form of government.

PLANS TO ENFORCE PEACE.

The president's suggestions regarding the method of avoiding war in the future may be summed up thus:

The settlement by arbitration or other means, except force, which may be agreed upon by the nations party to a quarrel.

Universal association of the nations of the world to guarantee to all the free use of the seas.

Agreement by the world league

DIES IN FLORIST'S SHOP.

Mrs. A. I. Simmons, Wife of Proprietor, Thought Victim of Heart Disease.

of nations to prevent any war in violation of treaty pledges or begun without submission of the causes to the judgment of the world.

President Wilson was introduced by former President William H. Taft, who is head of the League to Enforce Peace, and many of the nation's most notable men heard him speak. Other speakers were President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, Shailer Mathews, president of the federal council of churches, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Whole World Looks Forward.

"When the invitation to be here tonight came to me," Mr. Wilson said, "I was glad to accept it—not because it offered me an opportunity to discuss the program of the league—that you will, I am sure, not expect of me—but because the desire of the whole world now turns eagerly, more and more eagerly, toward the hope of peace, and there is just reason why we should take our part in counsel upon this great theme.

"It is right that I, as spokesman of our government, should attempt to give expression to what I believe to be the thought and purpose of the people of the United States in this vital matter.

"This great war that broke so suddenly upon the world two years ago, and which has swept within its flame so great a part of the civilized world, has affected us profoundly, and we are not only at liberty, it is perhaps our duty, to speak very frankly of it and of the great interests of civilization which it affects.

Not Interested in Source.

"With its causes and its objects we are not concerned. The obscure fountains from which its stupendous flood has burst forth we are not interested to search for or explore. But so great a flood, spread far and wide to every quarter of the globe, has of necessity engulfed many a fair province of right that lies very near to us. Our own rights as a nation, the liberties, the privileges, and the property of our people have been profoundly affected. We are not mere disconnected lookers on.

"The longer the war lasts the more deeply do we become concerned that it should be brought to an end and the world be permitted to resume its normal life and course again. And when it does come to an end we shall be as much concerned as the nations at war to see peace assume an aspect of permanence, give promise of days from which the anxiety of uncertainty shall be lifted, bring some assurance that peace and war shall always hereafter be reckoned part of the common interest of mankind.

"We are participants whether we would or not in the life of the world. The interests of all nations are our own also We are partners with the rest. What affects mankind is inevitably our affair as well as the affair of the nations of Europe and of Asia.

Might Have Checked Spread.

"One observation on the causes of th present war we are at liberty to make, and to make it may throw some light for ward upon the future as well as back ward upon the past. It is plain that this war could have come only as it did, suddenly and out of secret councils, without warning to the world, without discussion, without any of the deliberate movements of counsel with which it would seem natural to approach so stupendous a contest.

"It is probable that if it had been forseen just what would happen, just what alliances would be formed, just what forces arrayed against one another, those who brought the great contest on would have been glad to substitute conference for force.

"If we, ourselves, had been afforded some opportunity to apprise the belligerents of the attitude which it would be our duty to take, of the policies and practices against which we would feel bound to use all our moral and economic strength, and in certain circumstances even our physical strength also, our own contribution to the counsel which might have averted the struggle would have been considered worth weighing and regarding.

World Agreement Only Hope.

"And the lesson which the shock of being taken by surprise in a matter so deeply vital to all the nations of the world has made poignantly clear is that the peace of the world must henceforth depend upon a new and more wholesome diplomacy.

"Only when the great nations of the world have reached some sort of agreement as to what they hold to the fundamental to their common interest and as to some feasible method of acting in concert when any nation or group of nations seek to disturb those fundamental things, can we feel that civilization is at last in a way of justifying its existence and claiming to be finally established. It is clear that nations must in the future be governed by the same high code of honor that we demand of individuals.

"We must, indeed, in the very same breath with which we avow this conviction, admit that we have ourselves upon occasion in the past been offenders against the law of diplomacy which we thus forecast; but our conviction is not the less clear, but rather the more clear on that account. If this war has accomplished nothing else for the benefit of the world, it has at least disclosed a great moral necessity and set forward the thinking of the statesmen of the world by a whole age.

"Repeated utterances of the leading statesmen of most of the great nations now engaged in war have made it plain that their thought has come to this, that the principle of public right must henceforth take precedence over the individual interests of particular nations, and that the nations of the world must in some way band themselves together to see that that right prevails as against any sort of selfish aggression; that henceforth alliance must not be set up against alliance, understanding against understanding, but that there must be a common agreement for a common object, and that at the heart of that common object must lie the inviolable rights of peoples and of mankind.

"The nations of the world have become each other's neighbors. It is to their interest that they should understand each other. In order that they may understand each other it is imperative that they should agree to cooperate in a common cause and that they should so act that the guiding principle of that common cause shall be even handed and impartial justice.

"This is undoubtedly the thought of America. This is what we ourselves will say when there comes proper occasion to say it.

Three Fundamental Beliefs.

"In the dealings of nations with one another arbitrary force must be rejected and we must move forward to the thought of the modern world, the thought of which peace is the very atmosphere. That thought constitutes a chief part of the passionate conviction of America.

"We believe these fundamental things:

"First, that every people has a right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live. Like other nations, we have ourselves no doubt once and again offended against that principle when for a little while controlled by selfish passion, as our franker historians have been honorable enough to admit; but it has become more and more our rule of life and action.

"Second—That the small states of the world have a right to enjoy the same respect for their sovereignty and for their territorial integrity that great and powerful nations expect and insist upon. And,

"Third—That the world has a right to be free from every disturbance of its peace that has its origin in aggression and disregard of the rights of peoples and nations.

"So sincerely do we believe in these things that I am sure that I speak the mind and wish of the people of America when I say that the United States is willing to become a partner in any feasible association of nations formed in order to realize these objects and make them secure against violation.

Want Nothing of Others?

"There is nothing that the United States wants for itself that any other nation has. We are willing, on the contrary, to limit ourselves along with them to a prescribed course of duty and respect for the rights of others which will check any selfish passion of our own, as it will check any aggressive impulse of theirs.

"If it should ever be our privilege to suggest or initiate a movement for peace among the nations now at war I am sure that the people of the United States would wish their government to move along these lines:

"First, such a settlement with regard to their own immediate interests as the belligerents may agree upon. We have nothing material of any kind to ask for ourselves, and are quite aware that we are in no sense or degree parties to the present quarrel. Our interest is only in peace and its future guarantees.

"Second, an universal association of the nations to maintain the inviolate security of the highway of the seas for the common and unhindered use of all the nations of the world, and to prevent any war begun either contrary to treaty covenants or without warning, and full submission of the causes to the opinion of the world, a virtual guarantee of territorial integrity and political independence.

On Eve of Great Reform.

"But I didn't come here, let me repeat, to discuss a program. I came only to avow a creed and give expression to the confidence I feel that the world is even now upon the eve of a great consummation, when some common force will be brought into existence which shall safeguard right as the first and most fundamental interest of all peoples and all governments, when coercion shall be summoned not to the service of political ambition or selfish hostility, but to the service of a comomn order, a common justice, and a common peace. God grant that the dawn of that day of frank dealing and of settled peace, concord, and cooperation may be near at hand."

RAIL SURGEONS FOR DEFENSE

Medical Men of Two Roads Organize and Are Ready to Go if War Comes.

Railway surgeons of the Illinois Central and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railways have organized for preparedness.

In the event of war they would offer their services to the government in a body. W. L. Park, vice president of the Illinois Central, made this announcement yesterday at the closing session of the railway medical men's convention at the Hotel La Salle.

"Our road is highly in favor of building up a defensive organization in time of peace," he said. "We are considering our lines in a new light, too—that of their military efficiency and utility in case the country were invaded. In the future all our improvement plans will take the military angle into consideration."

HOME FROM THE BALKAN STATES

Wife and Daughters of U. S. Minister Return After Having Been Marooned Since Outbreak of War.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Vopicka and Daughters Elsie and Clara

Mrs. Charles J. Vopicka, wife of the United States minister to the Balkan states, and her two daughters, Elsie and Clara, who have been marooned in Europe since the outbreak of the European war, reached Chicago yesterday after a month's trying trip from Bucharest, Roumania.

When drivers of sleighs between Tornea, Finland, and Haparanda, Sweden, refused to make the trip across the frozen Gulf of Bothnia Mrs. Vopicka and her daughters, determined to reach home, made the trip on foot.

There were tears in Mrs. Vopicka's eyes as she stepped from a Pennsylvania train and greeted old friends who had gathered to meet her. She went directly to her residence at 3251 Washington boulevard.

"It was the most nerve racking trip I ever made, though every one was as nice to us as they possibly could be on the way," she said. "We went first to Odessa and then there was a tiresome journey of seventy-two hours by rail to Petrograd. Then we went to Finland and crossed to Sweden, finally reaching Stockholm. We took the Danish steamer Frederick VIII. from Christiania, Norway, and had a fine ten days' trip with only one day's delay at Kirkwall."

Mrs. Vopicka and her daughters declared there was little suffering in Bulgaria, Roumania, or Russia when they left and that food seemed fairly plentiful in all three countries.

GERARD EXPECTS AN EARLY PEACE; AMERICA TO AID

BERLIN, May 26, via London, May 27.—United States Ambassador James Gerard is convinced that peace is in sight, according to an interview published in a Munich paper from its Berlin correspondent. Mr. Gerard is quoted as saying: "Nothing can shake my confidence that peace is on its way."

The ambassador referred to the settlement of the differences of the United States and Germany as preparing the way for President Wilson to take up the question of peace.

"President Wilson," he said, "has much greater freedom of action now to deal with the immense world problem which will determine the future attitude of nearly all the countries of the globe.

"It is useless to discuss at this moment the question as to whether President Wilson's intermediation is desirable or probable. In this instance facts alone must speak, and one of the most important facts is that the neutrals are probably as much interested in bringing about an early peace as the belligerents.

America Needs Peace.

"America urgently needs peace and for this reason alone the American government is under an obligation to its citizens to do and support everything that serves the cause of peace.

"I am optimistic regarding the progress already made of the idea that the war should be ended, even among belligerent nations. The wise and moderate words of the German chancellor regarding Germany's readiness to make peace had probably their strongest echo in America and strengthen the impression that Germany will take all further steps calmly and with confidence."

Referring to the recent crisis in German-American relations the ambassador said:

"I hardly know from what quarter the present good relations between the United States and Germany could be disturbed. The establishment of good relations with Germany is one of the most important factors of the diplomatic situation now confronting the United States."

France Holds Up Peace?

VIENNA, May 27.—France is the only belligerent now standing in the way of an early peace, according to reliable sources here.

England is willing to quit the war without attempting an offensive on the western front. French statesmen, however, are bending every effort to keep the British in line for a final test of military strength against the kaiser. Russia, Belgium, and Italy are ready to make peace.

France is determined to carry on the war throughout the summer, because, from the military standpoint, her situation is the most desperate of any of the allies, excepting Serbia.

The French, according to information reaching Vienna, fear that Germany may not relinquish all the rich industrial region of northern France.

LINING THEM UP FOR NATION'S BIGGEST PARADE

An advisory staff to Maj. Gen. E. C. Young, grand marshal of the parade, was named yesterday. It includes Charles C. Healey, chief of police; Maj. John Bauder, police drillmaster; J. A. Rossiter of the city map department, Col. Le Roy T. Steward of the postoffice, William Weatherwax of the traction lines, and S. J. Larned of the Chicago Telephone company.

The Cook county civil service commission will issue a call to all county employes tomorrow, urging them to march. The county board is expected to close the county building on preparedness day.

The board of directors of the Union League club notified the parade committee yesterday that the club will have a big delegation in the line of march. "It is the patriotic duty of every good citizen to take part in this demonstration," says the club's circular to its members.

Thirty big automobile trucks, each carrying high powered searchlights and floodlights, will be stationed along Michigan avenue during the night parade.

At a meeting last night in the First National Bank building of the camp commanders of the Sons of Veterans a committee consisting of Royal N. Allen, Philip P. J. Kuhn, and Louis W. McCall was appointed to make arrangements to get all members of the organization to march.

FORMS CHURCH CADET CORPS

Father Luttrell of St. Thomas Aquinas Organizes Company of Boys for Drill.

Sixty boys have been organized into a company of cadets at St. Thomas Aquinas' Catholic church, Washington boulevard and Laramie avenue. Father Luttrell, pastor of the church, directed the organization and commended the military drill as being a benefit mentally, morally, and physically.

The boys who form the cadet organization will be under personal supervision of Father Luttrell's assistant, Father Nolan. Lieut. Richard A. Mayer, formerly connected with Northwestern Military and Naval academy at Lake Geneva, will be in charge of the drill work.

LABOR RALLIES TO PARADE CALL 80,000 STRONG

Simon O'Donnell Confers with Committee—Gompers the Moving Spirit.

Simon O'Donnell, president of the Chicago Building Trades Council, conferred with the preparedness parade committee at its headquarters in the Monadnock building yesterday and assured the parade leaders of the enthusiastic coöperation of the council's 80,000 members.

The committee gave the labor leader a cordial welcome, for the action of his organization Friday night in voting to join the parade was in direct opposition to that of the Chicago Federation of Labor, which repudiated the demonstration a week ago. The enlisting of the labor men insures representation from virtually the only element in Chicago which had previously hesitated to join the marchers.

Invited to Honor Post.

O'Donnell was invited to march with the parade committee as the labor unions' representative, but decided to join his own executive board among the leaders of the division devoted to the building interests.

Because of the shortness of time—the parade is only six days away now—he issued a general call to the members of the building trades council to join organizations of marchers in any part of the city. He will meet the parade committee again Wednesday morning to perfect plans for the participation of the labor men.

Urges All Workers to Join.

"The Building Trades council is heartily in favor of the parade idea," said Mr. O'Donnell. "We are urging the workmen to join their respective divisions in the parade—those of the architects, heating, and plumbing supply men, building contractors, and building material interests. Workers should get in touch with their contractors at once for enrollment. We'll give them notice of the assembly points later.

"Every Chicagoan should get together on this parade. I'm going to march if it's the last thing I do."

President Gompers declared this approval of the parade plan is shared by the other national federation officials.

"Preparedness and militarism should be defined," he said. "As for preparedness, every man ought to be able to defend himself individually. Collectively every man ought to be willing to defend his republic."

Gompers Lines Them Up.

It develops that it really was Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who set the final stamp of approval on the preparedness demonstration as far as the labor unions were concerned. When a TRIBUNE reporter asked Mr. Gompers on Friday what he thought of the parade he said: "I'll let you know later."

The action of the building trades council was his answer. A considerable degree of interest now centers in the question as to what action the Chicago federation may take at its meeting today.

Chairman John T. Stockton of the parade committee said in the afternoon that prompt and liberal response has been made to the appeal for funds which appeared in the morning papers. Many contributions had been received when the offices closed, but more are needed.

Last Call by Committee.

The parade headquarters will be closed today, but tomorrow will be a busy time at the offices. The committee has issued a "last call" announcing that all organizations must report their plans for entering the line of march by 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

This action was made necessary by the enormous number of enrollments which piled in during the week, making the task of designating mobilization points and hours for starting a staggering one. Gen. Young, the grand marshal, and his aids have been working on the problem day and night.

Mrs. Chase Names Aids.

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, chairman of the "patriotic women's" division, has appointed the following aids to form units in the various organizations of which they are members:

Mrs. Howard Elting, Saddle and Cycle club.
Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Onwentsia club.
Mrs. Marvin Pool, Midlothian club.
Mrs. Harmon Bailey, Junior league.
Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Casino.
Miss Helvetia Orr, Bandbox firm.
Mrs. Clifford C. Chickering, Kenwood club.
Mrs. Frederick Upham, Woman's Athletic club.
Mrs. James Keeley, Friday club and Parents' league.
Miss Genevieve Mott, Highland Park.
Mrs. Robert Peacock, South Shore Country club.

At a morning meeting in Judge Charles A. McDonald's courtroom the "rookies" of the Fort Sheridan training camp voted to march, about 400 strong. The men will hold a preliminary drill early this week. Lieut. Harry Hill of the First cavalry I. N. G., assured the Chicago "rookies" that about fifty men from last year's camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., will be in line with them. The citizens soldiers have been assigned a prominent place in the parade immediately behind the civil war and Spanish-American war veterans. Judge McDonald was appointed marshal of the training camps division.

Midway Students Turn Out.

President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago has officially authorized the participation of a big contingent of students and faculty members representing the various departments of the university. Preparedness day is also "alumni day" at the university—an event which is part of the institution's celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary—and it is expected that representatives from nearly all the colleges in the United States will be present and join the marchers.

Bishop Samuel Fallows, chairman of the ministers' organization committee, received many additional enrollments during the day from leading Chicago clergymen. Among those announced they will march were the Rev. James S. Stone of St. James' Episcopal church, the Rev. John Timothy Stone of the Fourth Presbyterian church, the Rev. John Nicely of the Crerar Memorial Baptist church, the Rev. A. S. C. Clarke of the Second Presbyterian church, Evanston; the Rev. Alex. Allson Jr. of the Hyde Park Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Duncan C. Milner of the Ravenswod Presbyterian church.

GOMPERS ON "PREPARE"

Labor Leader Says Man Who Won't Fight for Republic Is Unworthy of Citizenship.

"I believe that a man who wouldn't fight for the republic of America in time of need isn't worthy to be in the republic."

So stated Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, when asked by "The Tribune" for an expression of opinion regarding the forthcoming Preparedness parade.

"It is human to be prepared for any emergency," said Mr. Gompers. "The only difficulty lies in a demarcation from preparedness into militarism. I believe that we should be prepared industrially, politically and nationally. Let our preparedness be for defense and not aggression. I have no word of fault to find with the movement here, and it is my belief that a man who wouldn't fight for the republic of America in time of need isn't worthy to be in the republic."

WASHINGTON TO PARADE.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—The national capital got in line today for a preparedness parade similar to that which will take place in Chicago next week. A committee has taken charge of the arrangements and announced the parade will be on Flag day, June 14.

President Wilson has given his approval to the demonstration and it is possible that he will review the marchers.

"We believe that this is the logical time for the citizens of the national capital to speak in the matter of preparedness," Chairman William F. Gude said.

FIRST AIDS OF RED CROSS ORGANIZE FOR PARADE.

Mrs. Doane Calls on Illinois Members to Meet Tomorrow to Formu for Service Saturday.

Organization of the First Aids of the American Red Cross in Illinois is one of the immediate outgrowths of the preparedness parade.

When J. J. O'Connor, director of the central division and secretary of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, issued a call yesterday for first aids to assist the nurses and doctors of the eighteen or more emergency relief stations to be opened up along the route it was found that there was not a complete list of these first aids, who are to assist the nurses. The result was the appointment of Mrs. Philip Schuyler Doane as official organizer.

"I wish THE TRIBUNE would issue a call in my name," said Mrs. Doane, "for the assemblage of all first aids in Illinois, or at least representatives of each class, in room 732 Monadnock building at 11 o'clock Monday morning."

SENN STUDENT WRITES WINNING DEFENSE ESSAY

Joseph N. Lustig Awarded John R. Thompson Prize by Col. Foreman.

Col. Milton J. Foreman, who acted as judge in the contest for high school pupils for the best answers to the question, "Why should the United States be prepared?" awarded first prize to Joseph N. Lustig, 4739 North Albany avenue, a member of the class of 1919 in the Senn High school. The prizes were offered by John R. Thompson.

The Prize Winner.

The prize essay reads:

"If we are to retain among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station which the laws of nature and of nature's God have assigned to us; if we are to defend against the world the sacred principles of liberty and independence for which as a nation we have fought and struggled since our very birth; if we are to command the dignity and respect, and enforce the rights and privileges to which as a world power we are justly entitled; yea, if we would preserve our very existence as a self-governing people, we must PREPARE.

"The horrors of war are indeed to be dreaded. The destruction of life and property, the ruination of homes, the corruption of ideals and the crippling of commerce and industry are only a few of its immediate consequences; while the pernicious and demoralizing influence of war becomes a marked factor in the future history of the contesting nations.

"Duty commands us to get ready. Duty to our mothers, our wives, and our children. Duty to our homes, ourselves, our God and our country. Let us answer duty's call.

"Let us make our army and our navy the largest and the best in the world. Let us adopt a system of military training in the schools, that our youths may be fired with unbounded patriotism and love for their country. Let us demonstrate to our citizens the true spirit and meaning of Americanism.

"If we will do these things, and do them with efficiency typical of Americans, we will have but performed our duty of insuring to each and every one of us the inalienable rights acknowledged to be ours and of assuring to the country at large peace and prosperity."

Other Prize Winners.

Second prize was awarded to Franklin G. Klock, 3313 Southport avenue, of Lane; third prize, Arthur E. Cowley, 6646 Perry avenue, Parker; fourth prize, Louise Mohrmann, 2713 Florence avenue, Waller.

Honorable mention was given David Adler, Hyde Park; George R. Dubois, Chicago Latin; Clarence Johnson, Waller, and Gertrude Ohnesorge, Waller.

WOMEN WILL GET FULL HEARING ON SUFFRAGE ISSUE

G. O. P. Committee Will Listen to Both Sides, Chairman Hilles Says.

Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, dug himself out of the trench he has been occupying since his arrival in Chicago Wednesday and announced that the resolutions committee of the national convention undoubtedly will grant a full hearing to both sides of the woman suffrage issue.

"We will consider the suffrage question deeply," Chairman Hilles is quoted as having said in an interview with the United Press.

Mr. Hilles is a delegate to the convention from New York. The quoted interview was accepted in some quarters as indicating that he might be the member of the platform making committee.

Contests Personal Fights.

As to the fifty-four contests that will go before the national committee for settlement Thursday, Chairman Hilles is quoted as having said:

"So far as I know the contests pending before the committee do not involve Col. Theodore Roosevelt. They are, as I understand it, personal fights."

Chairman Hilles was presented with an ivory gavel by W. A. Gilmore, one of the two delegates from Alaska. The gavel is carved from a walrus tusk and will be used by Chairman Hilles in calling the convention to order next week.

Headquarters for Gov. Martin G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania will be opened Wednesday at the Auditorium hotel, it was announced yesterday. National Committeeman Henry G. Wasson of Pittsburgh will be in charge. This information tended to place a crimp in the story that reached Chicago Friday that the Pennsylvania delegation would be united on the first ballot for Philander C. Knox.

Roosevelt Quarters Opened.

Roosevelt headquarters were added to Candidates' row at the Congress. Lawrence Graham and Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan and assistant secretary of the navy in the Roosevelt administration, formed the first contingent. George von L. Meyer, former secretary of the navy, will be here tomorrow to take command.

It was announced that these headquarters are to be devoted entirely to the nomination of the colonel by the Republican convention and have nothing to do with the Progressive convention.

Changes in National Committee.

Seven members of the executive committee of the national committee have been reelected, according to Chairman Hilles. The body is comprised of eleven members. Those who have been reelected are Adams of Iowa, Estabrook of New Hampshire, Marlow of Montana, Martin of Virginia, Perkins of Washington, Warren of Michigan, and Williams of Oregon.

Of the fifty-three members of the full committee only few changes have been reported so far. In Alabama and Connecticut and Indiana, Mr. Barker, Judge Henney, and Goodrich declined reelection. In Missouri and North Carolina Neidringhaus and E. C. Duncan will be succeeded by Babler and Duncan, respectively. In North Dakota Gunder Olson has been elected to succeed T. F. Marshall. In South Dakota W. C. Cook was chosen in the primaries in C. H. Burke's place. In Tennessee Senator Newell Sanders retired. William H. Crocker will succeed P. A. Stanton in California.

In all twenty members, constituting a majority of the committee, have been reelected, and no action has been taken in sixteen other states. Important among the latter are Delaware, Illinois, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

THE CONVENTION VORTEX

Notes on Things Being Done and Those Doing Them in the Big Campaign Game.

T. Coleman Du Pont of Delaware will be the first of the presidential candidates to get to Chicago. He will be here tomorrow and will open his headquarters at the Congress.

All living former chairmen of the Republican national committee have been invited to occupy front row seats on the platform. They are Gen. James S. Clarkson of Iowa, George B. Cortelyou of New York, Harry S. New of Indiana, Frank H. Hitchcock of New York, and Victor Rosewater of Nebraska.

William Pitt Kellogg, former governor and United States senator of Louisiana and the only surviving member of the electoral college that elected Lincoln in 1860, will share convention honors with Addison G. Proctor of St. Joseph, Mich., said to be the only living delegate of the Chicago convention that nominated Lincoln. The national committee has invited both men. Robert T. Lincoln and his wife have received special invitations.

Twenty-seven of the fifty-three members of the present Republican national committee already have been re-elected either by direct primary, state convention, or delegation caucus. Chairman Hilles called attention to the fact that at least a majority of the new committee will consist of old members. "I believe it is a practical indorsement of the manner in which the party affairs have been administered," he said.

Sergt. at Arms William F. Stone announced that on Wednesday, June 7, the opening day of the convention, the Coliseum doors will be opened at 9:30 a. m. The convention is scheduled to be called to order at 11 a. m.

Patrick H. O'Donnell, representing the Friends of Irish Freedom, announced he will ask the Republican resolutions committee for three planks: Insistence by America, if it is one of the arbitrators in making European peace, that Ireland be considered as a distinct nation in the negotiations; treaties among the nations prohibiting the exportation of war munitions; restoration of American ship tolls, and exclusion from the Panama region of all distation by foreign powers.

NORTH CAROLINA CONTEST TOO LATE, REYNOLDS HOLDS.

Row Likely Will Come Up Before Credentials Committee—T. R. Friend Rumored Back of Dispute.

Eleventh hour effort to contest the entire delegation from North Carolina, including four delegates at large, and seventeen district delegates, failed to make any headway at the offices of the Republican national committee. Secretary J. B. Reynolds announced that the would-be contestants had failed to observe the rule that required notice of contest to be filed not less than twenty days before the convention.

Therefore, he said, the North Carolina contest will not be considered by the national committee, unless the committee itself decides to waive the rule and hear the trouble when it begins sessions next Thursday.

There is nothing to prevent the belligerents from carrying their fight before the credentials committee, Mr. Reynolds explained, and that is the probable action.

One rumor had it that the contesting delegates would be solidly for the colonel, if they were seated.

SULLIVAN MEN IN EARNEST IN VICE PRESIDENTIAL BOOM.

Coincident with the flat assertion by his aids that Roger C. Sullivan is in dead earnest in his attempt to land the Democratic nomination for vice president, Senator James Hamilton Lewis came to Chicago yesterday. Mr. Sullivan has been credited with stopping several ambitious political plans of Lewis recently, and the senator was reported to be here for the purpose of putting a few spokes in the Sullivan chariot wheels.

"Not at all, my dear boy, not at all," Senator Lewis said when asked if he had come at this time to oppose Sullivan. "You know that all I know of Mr. Sullivan's ambitions I read in a newspaper some time ago. I am here to speak at the Polish meeting Sunday evening and to march with the Spanish-American war veterans on Tuesday."

George E. Brennan, D. J. Egan and others asserted that everything possible will be done to put Mr. Sullivan on the Democratic national ticket.

GERMAN EDITORS WARN THE G. O. P. ON T. R. AND ROOT

Take Stand Against New Yorkers as Moose Decide to Name Colonel Early.

With Moose leaders ready to play their trump card—the nomination of Col. Roosevelt—right at the jump and hold the action as a club over the Republican convention, German newspaper editors yesterday served notice on the Republican chiefs that they will not stand for Col. Roosevelt or Elihu Root.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the German Newspaper Publishers' Association of the United States at the Kaiserhof hotel, in which Bernard Ritter, son of the late Herman Ritter, was active, it was decided to submit their protest formally to the Republican convention.

A resolution will be sent to the Republican managers setting forth the unbending opposition of the German editors to both T. R. and Root and stating that aside from these two the Germans have no favorite candidate. The request will be made that it be read to the convention.

German newspaper publishers from all sections of the country willl be here for the Republican convention, and they will do all in their power to help stop any stampede for the two New York men. They are particularly interested in defeating T. R. The plain threat will be made to the g. o. p. chiefs that they can expect nothing from the German-Americans if they allow the nomination of the colonel.

Moose Decide on Plans.

Meantime the Progressive leaders have the stage all set for a "surprise"—the nomination of T. R. in the Auditorium convention, probably the second day, and possibly the first.

The "practical psychology" of this move is to give the Republicans an ocular demonstration of the fact that T. R. is a candidate, regularly nominated by the Moose party, and as such probably must remain a candidate on that ticket unless assimilated by the Republican convention.

It is planned to turn convention row and the nearby hotels into a bedlam of hurrahing for T. R. during the time intervening between his nomination in the Moose convention and the calling of the roll in the Coliseum convention.

Colonel Here Tomorrow.

Leading Chicago Progressives yesterday laid plans to receive Col. Roosevelt when he arrives in Chicago tomorrow, en route to Kansas City. Arriving at the La Salle street station at 4 o'clock, the colonel will be met not only by representatives of the Roosevelt Nonpartisan league and the Roosevelt Republican committee, but by an informally constituted committee of Progressives.

Among the local Moose who have signified their intention of greeting the colonel at the station or the Hotel La Salle, to which he will be driven upon his arrival, are Harold L. Ickes, national committeeman; Raymond Robins, temporary chairman of the Progressive convention; George F. Porter, chairman of the convention committee; Ellsworth M. Board, Dr. Arthur D. Bevan, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Antoinette Funk, Hamlin Garland, Emerson Hough, Lawrence Heyworth, James L. Houghteling Jr., La Verne W. Noyes, William B. Manierre, Verne E. Joy, Julian Mason, John T. McCutcheon, Frederick S. Oliver, John C. Shaffer, Miss Harriett Vittum, Miss Edith Wyatt, and Mrs. John F. Bass.

After a conference at the Hotel La Salle with Committeeman Ickes, Oscar King Davis, secretary of the national committee, and Frank P. Corrick of Nebraska, sergeant at arms of the convention, Col. Roosevelt will drive about the city with Mr. Ickes. He will dine alone with his secretary, John McGrath, at the hotel before leaving Chicago at 8 o'clock over the Santa Fe.

'RURAL' AIDS OF SHERMAN MEET

Lay Plans at Springfield Roundup to Stick to Senator Until Finish.

Springfield, Ill., May 27.—[Special.]—There was a notable gathering of Illinois Republicans in Springfield this evening when the "rural" delegates to the national convention met at the Leland hotel to organize for the convention fight which is to be made in behalf of Senator Sherman.

With the delegates and alternates from the districts outside of Chicago were a number of wheelhorse volunteers, including some of the men who assisted in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. They are to aid in arranging for the demonstration of Illinoisans which is to feature the Sherman convention campaign.

The organization was effected after a luncheon tonight, at which James Jefferson, chairman of the local Sherman committee, acted as toastmaster. More than 200 men from the downstate districts, representing every faction of the party, were at tables.

Berry Stirs Up Gathering.

Former Senator Orville F. Berry of Carthage and Speaker David Shanahan of the Illinois house of representatives came as representatives of Walter Rosenthal, who planned the meeting but who was unable to attend.

Senator Berry, stating the purpose of the gathering, stirred the banqueters to enthusiasm by declaring that in the long list of presidential possibilities offered the Republicans "no man tops the offering of Illinois."

This started the ball rolling, and the gathering quickly assumed the character of an old time love feast, in which factional enmities were put aside and rival politicians who were hardly on speaking terms grasped hands across the tables and pledged themselves to work together until Sherman is nominated.

"If Lincoln had had a crowd like this back of him," exclaimed the veteran Col. Jefferson, "he'd have been nominated on the first ballot."

Harmony the Keynote.

The plans for the organization contemplate a suborganization in each congressional district. The delegates are to take with them to Chicago active and influential men from their districts who are to work among the delegates from other states.

All are to keep in touch with the central organization, and the delegates particularly are to keep together and act in harmony.

There is to be no talk or thought of a second choice, and one of the purposes of the organization is to see to it that all stampeding rumors of defection in the Illinois delegation are promptly denied.

HILLES PORTIONS OUT THE TICKETS TO G. O. P. SHOW

Chicago Gets 2,560 of 12,025 Coveted Seats in the Coliseum.

Final determination of the distribution of Republican national convention tickets was announced last night by Chairman Charles D. Hilles.

There will be 12,025 seats at the Coliseum, and the tickets will be divided as follows:

Delegates. One for himself and one for his guest	1,982
Alternates. One for himself	991
Chicago's share as convention city	8,560
Members of subcommittee on arrangements of national committee	2,800
Presidential candidates	200
Press	700
National League of Republican Clubs	25
National Congressional committee	32
Officers of convention	50
Temporary chairman of convention and treasurer, secretary, and sergeant at arms of national committee	160
Members of Republican national committee	3,125
Total	12,025

Four Classes of Seats.

The seats, Chairman Hilles said, have been divided into four classes—A, B, C, and D—upon a basis of availability and relationship to the speaker's platform at the south end of the Coliseum. The class A tickets are the best and the class D tickets the less desirable.

In allotting seats to different states, each committeeman's portion will consist of 33 per cent class A tickets; 30 per cent class B tickets; 15 per cent class C tickets, and 22 per cent class D tickets. The tickets will be divided among the states on the basis of three for each delegate allowed the state in the official call.

Hopes All Will Be Satisfied.

"I have tried to distribute the convention tickets on a fair basis," Chairman Hilles said. "Fair to every interest, and, I trust, the arrangements will give satisfaction. We have 12,025 seats in the convention and I have received more than 40,000 applications for tickets. I have tried to divide the different classes of tickets equally among those entitled to them. I believe there never was a convention of the party where the demand for seats has been so great."

The tickets allotted to Chicago as the convention city are to be turned over to the Chicago committee on arrangements of which Fred W. Upham is the chairman. Mr. Upham announced long ago that these are to be distributed upon a basis of the contributions that were made last winter to the convention fund, the argument that won the convention for Chicago.

ANTI-LOWDEN LEADERS FAIL TO DECIDE ON A SLATE.

Conference Goes Over a Day—Merriam's Name Comes to the Front in Informal Discussion.

The conference of anti-Lowden leaders was postponed yesterday until today. Informal discussions were held, but nothing was done in the way of trying to unite the antis on a single slate. One of the newest phases of the dickering is the submission of the name of Ald. Charles E. Merriam as the candidate for governor around whom could rally all the forces opposed to the Lorimer organization, the city hall forces, and the Lowden organization.

That Merriam's name has been under consideration for a couple of weeks by former Gov. Deneen was disclosed during the day. Other anti-Lowden leaders, however, do not take so kindly to Merriam. Senator Hugh Magill is still considered the "ideal" candidate for governor to pit against Lowden if all the anti forces can be got together.

State Treasurer Andrew Russel and Col. Frank L. Smith are being considered also. It was the belief, however, that Magill might be the man selected, provided Russel and Smith could be induced to quit the field.

WISCONSIN MOOSE ROUNDUP AT MADISON ON JUNE 22.

Racine, Wis., May 27.—Carrying over 500 signatures of men from every part of Wisconsin, the call for the Progressive-Republican convention, to be held at Madison, June 22, was forwarded to every assembly district in the state today.

The call was sent to men who have signified their willingness to arrange local meetings at which delegates to the conference will be selected. This meeting will be held June 15, with ample public notice so as to assure a representative gathering of all shades of Progressives.

The call specifically says that the purpose of the district gatherings, as well as the state conference, is to perfect a Progressive organization and to unite on a complete state ticket from governor down, so that there will be no division of energy or votes in the campaign to put Wisconsin back in the Progressive fold.

PROTEST AVERS BRITISH CHOKE AMERICAN TRADE

Sales Firm's Complaint to Lansing Sees a Cable Plot Against U. S. Exporters.

Protesting against the action of the British government in interfering "maliciously with our trade with Russia," the International Manufacturers' Sales company has sent a letter to the department of state at Washington asking Secretary Lansing for his "assistance in putting an end to such outrageous interference on the part of our British friends." The letter reached Washington yesterday, arriving just after the note to Great Britain protesting against interference with the mails had been dispatched.

The letter, address to Mr. Lansing personally, follows:

"On the 20th instant we sent a cablegram to our director of sales, Mr. X. B. Kalamatiano, in Christiania, Norway, as per the enclosed copy, marked No. 1.

"On the 25th inst. we received a cable from Mr. Kalamatiano, copy of which is marked No. 2. We immediately took up the question of the loss of our cable with the Western Union people and we were informed that they could do nothing about it and had no way of tracing the cable, as the British government had full charge of all cables after transmission from New York and declines flatly to give any information concerning them.

Held Up in London.

"We were informed by the Western Union company that innumerable cables are either delayed at London for a variable period of time or else held up altogether, and the cables that suffer more than others are those relating to trade relations between manufacturers in this country and their prospective customers in Europe, particularly in Russia.

"On February 10th we sent a cable to Kieff, Russia, as per copy marked No. 3. We later received a letter from the person addressed, informing us in an answer to our letter that he had never received the cable. We recently received a letter from another client in Kieff quoting a cable he had addressed to us which we had never received. Upon tracing through the Western Union company we found that the cable had never been received in New York City. The copy of the cable is marked No. 4.

"In reading over these cables you will note that there is nothing objectionable to any of them, and you will readily surmise that the only reason the censors refused them promiscuously was to interfere maliciously with our trade with Russia.

Make Vigorous Protest.

"We wish to enter a very vigorous protest against such action on the part of the British government, and request you as secretary of state of this country to make strong representations to the British government.

"This company is composed of thirty-four prominent manufacturers, each of whom is well worthy of great consideration on your part, and who combined represent a capital of $265,000,000. We are all American citizens, and none of us are hyphenated.

The letter bears the signature of A. S. Postnikoff, president of the company, which is a cooperative organization of American manufacturers seeking to build up trade with Russia.

Many Other Grievances.

According to Mr. Postnikoff the grievances cited in the letter to Mr. Lansing form but a small part of the great mass of trouble which American manufacturers are having in their attempts to obtain business not only in neutral countries, but even among the allies and colonies of Great Britain. The trouble over the cablegrams to Mr. Kalamatiano, he said, arose in connection with the agent's projected trip to Russia with catalogues, price lists, and samples.

"Mr. Kalamatiano and I were in New York on May 11, when he was to leave on the steamer United States for Christiania," Mr. Postnikoff said yesterday. "He had four trunks and two valises, which, in addition to personal belongings, were loaded about 95 per cent with price lists and catalogues and about 5 per cent with samples in small units. These units, valueless except as samples, were of sole leather, rubber, raw cotton, rubber articles, roofing, and cloth prints, and were consigned to Petrograd.

British Agent Objects.

"When the so-called neutrality squad went through the trunks and valises at the wharf, the only objection to the contents came from the representative of the British consul. Despite our protests, he refused to permit the trunks to be shipped along with Mr. Kalamatiano.

"As a result, Mr. Kalamatiano was compelled to sail without samples and even without the printed catalogues and price lists. I went to Washington, and with great difficulty finally succeeded in obtaining permission to ship the trunks after him to Christiania, in care of the American consul there. There was an additional expense in this country of $100, and he is still waiting in Christiania. No one knows how long he will be delayed.

"While I was in Washington trying to straighten out some troubles in connection with Mr. Kalamatiano's trip, I was told on high authority of an experience which an American machinery company had just had in Moscow.

"The machinery company had been in touch with a Moscow firm, which asked for prices. The American firm cabled a price list without delay. The cable was held up in London eleven days, and finally reached Moscow—with the prices all cut out.

"A few days later the Russian firm received offers, prices, and catalogues for similar machinery from an English firm with which it had never before corresponded. Luckily for the American company the Russians forwarded all this matter to the United States, asking if the English firm was the agent of the American company. The American firm now has sent a letter via Vladivostok in an effort to escape the British, and so far has received no answer. This roundabout way consumes much time."

Threw Himself Under Train.

A verdict of suicide was returned yesterday at the inquest into the death of Casimir Wishniewsky, 4501 Cross avenue, who threw himself in front of a Northwestern passenger train at Norwood avenue on Friday. He was 55 years old and had no relatives in Chicago, the police say.

CHANGE OF TIME, PENNSYLVANIA LINES.

Effective May 28, the Southland for Logansport, Richmond, Dayton, Springfield, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, Atlanta, Jacksonville, will leave Chicago 11:55 p. m. daily, instead of 12:01 a. m. Sleepers ready for occupancy 10:30 p. m. Passengers can remain in sleepers at Dayton and Indianapolis until 7:30 a. m.

No. 6, leaving Chicago 9:20 p. m., and No. 12, leaving 9:30 p. m., consolidated and known as train 236, will leave Chicago 9:20 p. m. daily for Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Louisville. Passengers may occupy sleeper at Indianapolis until 7:30 a. m.—Adv.

COMBINE FORMED TO BEAT HUGHES AND ROOSEVELT

G. O. P. Alliance for Root First, Then One of Three Mid-Western Men.

between the candidates listed as acceptable to the combination, shows that no candidate will have 150 votes on the first ballot; that Root will lead the field with Hughes a close second, and with comparatively small difference between the other "friendly" candidates.

Analysis of the relative standing of the announced and receptive candidates, with the preliminary understanding that the foregoing statement of conditions is correct, supported by reports that have reached THE TRIBUNE from the various states, follows:

STANDING OF CANDIDATES

BORAH.

Senator Borah is not an avowed candidate. His state of Idaho is uninstructed, but will give him a complimentary vote of 8.

BURTON.

Burton starts with the instructed vote of his home state, Ohio, 48, won in a direct primary. His name is filed as the sole direct primary candidate in West Virginia, 16. The primary will be held June 6, the day before the convention assembles. This may operate to hurt him with some delegates named by way of compromise, but he is expected to get the solid vote on the first ballot at least. In Connecticut he is credited with 6 votes and may get more. In California he has 2 and in Kansas at least 2. The rest of his strength comes from the south on the Root - Burton - Sherman - Fairbanks basis, as follows: Alabama, 3; Florida, 1; Kentucky, 3; Louisiana, 3; Mississippi, 2; North Carolina, 8; South Carolina, 2; Tennessee, 4; Texas, 2; Virginia, 3. Total, 105.

BRUMBAUGH.

Pennsylvania's governor, who made a losing fight for control of the Republican organization against Senator Penrose, is listed for twenty delegates. His friends claim nearer 40. A late report is that the solid seventy-six of Pennsylvania will be cast for Philander C. Knox, in which case Brumbaugh's name will not appear in the first ballot totals.

CUMMINS.

Senator Cummins has the unalloyed support of his own ate of Iowa, 26. He won the direct primaries in Minnesota, 24. He won the direct primaries in Nebraska, 16, against Hughes and Henry Ford. He was returned the winner in South Dakota, 10, by an arrangement with the Roosevelt forces whereby Cummins got the instructions and the delegates were split half and half. He gets the primary verdict in Montana, 8; although former Senator Joseph M. Dixon, late Progressive national chairman, broke the delegate slate as a Roosevelt man. Cummins is credited with 2 votes in California and 1 in Colorado. Total, 87.

DU PONT.

The Delaware state convention gave an instruction for T. Coleman Du Pont, and the 6 delegates are supposed to vote for him. Alfred I. Du Pont, one of the delegates, is quoted as saying that he will not be bound by the instructions and will vote for T. R.

FAIRBANKS.

The former vice president was unopposed in the presidential primaries in Indiana and has the 30 delegates, solidly and belligerently. He got instructions from the Kentucky state convention and in five congressional districts. At least 6 votes in Missouri are claimed as surely for him. He has one sure vote in New Jersey, 2 in California, 1 in Colorado, 2 and perhaps 4 in Kansas, and claims 4 in Oklahoma. His additional strength is from the south, estimated as: Alabama, 3; Arkansas, 3; Florida, 2; Louisiana, 2; Mississippi, 3; South Carolina, 2; Tennessee, 4; Texas, 5; Virginia, 2. Total, 86.

FORD.

Henry Ford defeated Senator William Alden Smith in the presidential preference primaries in Michigan, with 30 votes. The delegates were not elected at these primaries, and few of them personally are for Ford. The state convention indorsed Hughes, "or a man of his standing." The latest from Michigan is that the 30 votes will be cast for Ford on the first ballot and that 22 will switch to Hughes on the second.

HADLEY.

Former Gov. Hadley is not a candidate. His name is included in the tabulation because of the peculiar factional disturbance in Missouri that resulted in his defeat for the chairmanship of the state delegation last week. He is likely to get 8 votes for president on the first ballot.

HUGHES.

Justice Hughes has instructions from two states, both by the direct primary route. In Oregon he has 10 votes. Vermont not only gave him the primary indorsement, but the state convention Friday instructed the 8 delegates for him. In THE TRIBUNE tabulation he is marked up for 32 votes in New York. Authorities vary greatly as to this figure. Some claims are made as high as 50. Others drop to 24. The justice is known to have 2 delegates in Connecticut, is conceded 8 in Maine, and 2 in Maryland. He probably has 11 in New Jersey. He is given 6 in California and 3 in Colorado. The 8 in Kansas is a high estimate. He appears to have at least 12 in Missouri and 4 in Oklahoma. From the south he gets 3 in Kentucky, 2 in Arkansas, 3 in Tennessee, and 2 in Texas. Total, 116.

KNOX.

On the theory that the Brumbaugh faction would be for a solid vote from Pennsylvania for Philander C. Knox, the former secretary of state should be credited with 76 votes. If the Brumbaugh votes are cast for the governor, Knox will get 56, the claim of the Penrose lieutenants of their strength in the delegation.

LA FOLLETTE.

Senator La Follette was a candidate in the direct primaries in Wisconsin. On the face of the returns he won 15 delegates and 11 were elected as uninstructed, headed by Gov. Philipp. La Follette has picked up one of the 11, it seems. On the basis of a report that the solid vote would go to La Follette on the first ballot, as a possible help to Gov. Philipp's vice presidential aspirations, La Follette is credited with 26 votes in Wisconsin and with 10 won in the North Dakota primaries. Another report has it that 11 of the Wisconsin men will vote for Hughes on the first ballot.

M'CALL.

Gov. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts has figured persistently as a dark horse possibility since the Massachusetts primaries. The Weeks management insists that all but four Massachusetts votes, the latter elected as Roosevelt men, will be for Senator Weeks on the first ballot. For the purpose of indicating the McCall strength in his own state he is listed herewith as having twelve votes. Otherwise they should be included in the Weeks column.

ROOSEVELT.

So far as can be ascertained no delegate, state or district, has been instructed for Roosevelt. He has no primary state for him. His biggest individual vote comes from Georgia, where there are seventeen contested delegates, the entire state. He could pick up twelve in Louisiana if the Roosevelt contestants are seated.

Roosevelt has four delegates in Massachusetts, elected as unpledged; five in New Jersey, elected as unpledged, and the two in Illinois, ex-Progressives, who broke the Sherman slate in Hyde Park and west side districts. In New York the Roosevelt strength is estimated at ten by those who claim to know. He gets four in Colorado by instruction.

Six votes from the state of Washington are conceded to the colonel by his opponents. He has one in Maine and two in Maryland, by the early returns. In Oklahoma and New Mexico he is credited with two and three respectively. Reports from the uninstructed south, in addition to the contested seats, indicate that the colonel gets: Alabama, 2; Florida, 1; Kentucky, 4; Mississippi, 2; North Carolina, 6; South Carolina, 3; Tennessee, 4; Texas, 4; Virginia, 3. One of the Alaska delegates is for him. He will have two from the District of Columbia if the three sided contest is settled in favor of the T. R. men. Total, 88.

ROOT.

No delegate is instructed for Root and his name was not put into any primary situation. His vote, as indicated in the table, is sprinkled generally over the country. The claim from New York is that he will have forty-five of the eighty-seven delegates, at the least estimate. Root is credited with votes in New England and the east, aside from New York, as follows: Connecticut, 2; Maryland, 4; New Jersey, 11; Rhode Island, 5. In the west he is given: California, 6; Colorado, 2; Kansas, 2, and probably more; Nevada, 6; Utah, 8; Washington, 8, and Wyoming, 6. His southern strength is figured: Alabama, 4; Arkansas, 4; Florida, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 3; Mississippi, 3; North Carolina, 4; South Carolina, 1; Texas, 5, and Virginia, 1. Arizona's six are reported for him and he gets one of the two Alaska delegates. Total, 139.

SHERMAN.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman has fifty-six votes in Illinois. The senator has no instructed delegates elsewhere. His heaviest individual strength is in Arkansas and Missouri, where his managers claim five and six votes, respectively. Three of the New Mexico delegates are avowedly for Sherman because of his stand on the Mexican situation. He has four votes in California, it is claimed, one in Colorado and two in Kansas, possibly more in the latter state, and two in Oklahoma. The southern states, according to reports, will give Sherman first ballot votes approximately as follows: Alabama, 2; Florida, 1; Louisiana, 2; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 4; Virginia, 4. Total, 95.

WEEKS.

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts will have thirty-two votes in his home state, provided the McCall strength goes to him, otherwise he will get about twenty votes.

Graduation Special

EVERSHARP

PERFECT POINTED PENCIL

Always Sharp But Never Sharpened

The pencil makes one of the finest and most acceptable graduation, birthday or special gifts ever offered to the public.

The Eversharp is not a mere gold or silver pencil. It is a masterpiece, having the finest finish and the most artistic and pleasing proportions of any pencil made.

Its superb exterior finish, however, is but a detail in its perfection. Its most remarkable feature is its perfect writing point, always sharp but never sharpened. Can you imagine anything more useful than a lead pencil which never requires sharpening? In addition it has a most ingenious lead chamber which holds eighteen inches of extra lead, either black or indelible. All pencils are filled with our finest black lead when sent out. They are easily refilled when empty. Each pencil is equipped with an eraser which is covered except when used to erase.

These features are found only in the Eversharp. Thousands of users pronounce the Eversharp indispensable. An Eversharp pencil, packed in a nicely embossed individual box, is especially attractive to present to each member of a graduating class, or to each member of the faculty.

All pencils have pocket clips attached, except when for ladies, which are furnished without clips.

We guarantee Eversharp pencils to be the finest in the world, and to be superior to all others, and, unless you find them to be incomparably the best, you may return them, and your money will be refunded at once.

We particularly recommend our plain gold filled design. This is heavy gold filled, the same as the better grade of watch cases.

Price, $3.00 Each

Same design, 14k Solid Gold, $20 each. Same design, Sterling Silver, $2.50 ea.

If your dealer cannot supply you with the genuine Eversharp, send direct to us. We will engrave name without extra charge.

UNITE TO BUILD BETTER NATION, COLONEL'S PLEA

Urges the Nationalization of the United States—Preparedness Prime Duty.

This article entitled "Nationalizing the United States" is the first of a series of five by Theodore Roosevelt on the question of national defense. Another article will appear in "The Tribune" on Tuesday morning.

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

[Copyright: By S. S. McClure.]

New York, May 27.—"After the war Europe will be the new land and America the old land," was the remark with which a statesman, returning from a year's travel in the belligerent countries, foretold the future.

In European countries the development of a whole generation has been crowded by the stress of war in two short years. Great wastes of popular emotion have unified and solidified the peoples of the warring countries. The fellowship of common danger and the struggle shoulder to shoulder in the common work has carried them to new forms of national organizations.

MOBILIZE ENERGIES.

Some of the governments abroad have already learned, and the others are rapidly learning, to mobilize the energies of their entire population to a single task. The financial power of the banking structure in each country has worked hand in hand with the government, exactly as the government has worked with the bankers.

Big business has been organized and encouraged by the government so that it has become a new source of national power. Labor and the public have learned to work in closer coöperation with their business men, and the business men of each country in proportion as that country has been successful have conditioned their work on a spirit of frank accommodation to the needs of the public and of labor.

POWER IN NECESSITY.

In short, necessity has taught the nations to discover latent sources of power.

The progress that has been made will carry over into peace and will tell in the organization for the work of peace. The people—the business men, the farmers, the wage workers—of the United States must be able to match themselves against the nations abroad when they shall have been strengthened and solidified by their adherence to their various national ideals.

More than ever it is true today that a really great national life is possible to us only if we strive not merely as individual men but using our collective strength as citizens of a mighty nation, building and transmitting to our children a social structure wherein we have used and profited by the accumulated forces of the past.

URGES REAL PATRIOTISM.

The big things of the modern world we can accomplish only if we clasp the hands of our fellow men and work together with them for great social ends.

Our patriotism—unconditioned by the hyphen—must be real. Our loyalty to our country must be shown in the event of war. It must also be shown in the far longer times of peace. It must unite us by the closest bonds of human fellowship in coöperation for the education of our children so that we and the generations that come after us may be ready for struggle for mastery over the forces of nature and for the development of the highest human powers.

Through union, in an integrated and socialized nation, we can best win our food and shelter, we can combat disease and train our children for the finer things of life. We do not strive merely for mechanized human activity. Our ideal of democracy is socialized energy.

CONSERVATION IS NEEDED.

We wish to conserve our human resources. We wish to conserve our natural resources. If we are wise we will keep the water power of the country in the possession of the people of the country as a whole. If we are wise we will realise what soil conservation means, and will make it the business of the whole public to see that the fertility of the soil is not impaired.

In a really remarkable pamphlet by Vladimir Simkovitch it is shown that a chief factor, probably the chief factor, in the fall of Rome and then of the Roman empire was soil impoverishment and exhaustion.

Is the United States a nation knitted together by a great national ideal, with conscious knowledge of the things for which it wishes to stand? Are its citizens integrated into an efficient body by proper organization in business corporations, not only in private life but through their city, state, or national government?

Must Answer in Affirmative.

Does the present organization of our public life bring the fit man into his place, and does it subordinate the personal, local, and provincial interests to the public purpose?

Has the American national ideal so gripped the hearts and lives of all our citizens that differences of section, of race, of creed, or the previous nationality melt away before the common American citizenship?

Is the flag of the United States today a symbol of such unity?

Until we can answer these questions in the affirmative, we can not claim to be a genuinely efficient nation.

Americanism—to use the vitally important issue of our day—means a reaffirmation of our purpose to be a great nation in the world.

Third Crisis Confronts.

The third great crisis in the history of our people confronts us. Originally, in 1776, our forefathers were divided into thirteen colonies, each of which had its separate traditions, its peculiar viewpoint; in some cases in separate language and racial stock.

The economic interests in some colonies differed so strongly that even after the federation tariff walls were raised by one colony against the other, Washington, and the group of men who rallied around him, realized that these thirteen American colonies had interests in common that were greater than the sum of all the other separate interests.

They believed that each group of colonists should sever its ties with the motherland in Europe and become a part of the new American nation. They believed that there exists on this continent the basis for a new nation that would be separate and distinct from all the nations of the old world.

They, and the other patriots of the revolution staked their lives and their fortunes on this ideal, and with their success a new nation—the United States of America was born.

Developed Only Gradually.

Even then the separatist tendencies could not be wholly overcome and the mutual distrust of the colonies, which crystallized into the doctrine of states rights, was so strong that the powers of the national government could be developed only gradually and in the face of absolute necessity.

Nation-wide transportation, the railroad, the telegraph and telephone, the necessity of developing national industry along national lines and under national supervision, were able only gradually to force a better organization of our national government.

Even today the structure of our government lags a generation behind the economic and social development that has taken place.

National unity was the question around which the second great crisis in our history turned. Lincoln placed the Union, in point of importance, even above the question of slavery.

He, with the countless thousands, who fought and died under his leadership, established for the second time the ideal that the United States of America was a nation one and indivisible; that no local sectional or racial interests may ever be permitted to endanger our existence as an undivided nation.

The full conclusions of Lincoln's life have not yet been drawn. The idea of economic expansion, the preoccupation of our people, with the opening up and conquest of our vast western country, created problems that absorbed the people's attention, to the exclusion of the needed work for the completet nationalizing of the United States.

The European war has brought to the surface our differences. It has emphasized the existence of old racial lines. The unity of action and purpose of our people is endangered. Our citizens have tended to divide into racial and sectional groups, revived old world racial feelings and business interests and have led sections of our people into championship of or antagonism to various European powers.

It seemed for a time as if our national ideal was not strong enough to subordinate these jarring factors. Altogether too many of our citizens have their minds centered in Europe. They seem to be chiefly absorbed in asking, "What will happen to Germany, to Austria, to Russia, or to England?"

Let them quit trying to shape our politics to meet the interest of foreign nations. Let them devote their energies and thought to the building of a stronger and better America.

Resolute, Unified Action.

America faces grave problems. She needs resolute and unified action on the part of all her citizens. She can not get that until they act only as Americans—not as Americans mixed with something else.

Our prime duty, infinitely our most important duty, is the duty of preparedness. Unless we prepare in advance we cannot, when the crisis comes, be true to ourselves. If we cannot be true to ourselves it is absolutely certain that we shall be false to every one else.

If we are not able to safeguard our own national honor and interest we shall make ourselves an object of scorn and derision if we try to stand up for the rights of others.

The preparedness movement will result in a better organization of our government for all purposes. The effort to organize adequately along the lines of the preparedness movement will give us a government more efficient in performing the functions of peace.

RECRUITING

North Shore Suffragists Hunt Paraders.

Suffragists of the Twenty-first ward decided yesterday not to wait for prospective suffrage paraders to come in and ask to march. They took an automobile and went out after the residents of their ward. Stopping shop girls along Clark street and millionaire ladies along Lake Shore drive, they were able to sign up a number of recruits for the parade of June 7. In one automobile were Mrs. George W. Herrick, March Chase, Nancy Lambertson, and Mrs. Martha E. Farrand. In the evening a rally was held at the recruiting station for the ward at 1450 North Clark street.

WOMEN'S PARADE NO STYLE SHOW

Leaders Announce It's to Be a "Crusade," Something "Fine."

Following that exasperating publicity episode of the suffrage parrot "Votes," the suffrage parade organization issued a statement yesterday describing the procession as a crusade rather than a matter of becoming millinery.

"It is not a series of startling 'divertissements' to implore the attention of the languid public," reads the statement. "It is not the whirl of committee meetings, rummage sales, street carnivals, and animal processions. It is something far more impressive, far more fine, far more a thing of consecration than all these gayeties and heralded activities would indicate."

Some delegations from other states will number as high as 500. New York is expected to send that many women, led by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association. Mrs. Catt will reach Chicago next Wednesday.

If Iowa women win their suffrage election on Monday, June 5, they will send several hundred women for the parade the following Wednesday.

Many sections of the parade will have to fall into line after the time of starting, 4 o'clock. Members of the Woman's Trade Union league will be among the late starters, and they will join the parade somewhere between Michigan avenue and Monroe street, the start, and the Coliseum, which is the finish.

ROOSEVELT SAYS COWARD INVITES WOES FOR SELF

Tells Pilgrims to Oyster Bay That Weakness Can't Command Respect or Loyalty.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., May 27.—[Special.]—Three thousand enthusiastic men and women took part in the pilgrimage to Sagamore Hill today to tell Col. Roosevelt that they want him for their next president. And the colonel, standing on the veranda of his home, looked out over the crowds trampling his lawn and told them that he understood that they had pledged themselves to him only so far as he embodied the principles of Americanism.

"Peace won't keep house with fear," he quoted from the poet Lowell, and was cheered mightily. "No man was ever loyal to a coward," he told them, and again they cheered, and they cheered intermittently all the while he told them that in order to win the loyalty of the immigrants this country must stand for courage and strength.

It was nothing but a succession of cheers, as a matter of fact, that could be heard on the hilltop for a long time, and the army of marchers and their camp followers, making a holiday of it, swarmed around the colonel's house with such agreeable enthusiasm that part of the porch collapsed as the open air speechmaking ended and the crowd started to rush to the door to go through and shake hands with the colonel.

Wallops for the Hyphen.

Richard M. Hurd, who was spokesman for the visitors, in addressing Col. Roosevelt, said:

"Lincoln said this nation could not endure half slave and half free. It is equally true, as you have pointed out, that this nation cannot now endure half hyphenated and half American."

"Mr. Chairman and friends," Col. Roosevelt replied, "fellow citizens and fellow Americans, whose Americanism is without qualification and whose allegiance to the flag is undivided, I deeply appreciate, I am more than deeply touched by the honor you do me today. Sir, the address you have just read I accept in the spirit in which you, sir, and all of you mean it, as pledging all of you here to a common ideal, to the ideal of our country and our flag.

"I, of course, stand absolutely and unqualifiedly for every principle set forth in that address, and I understand entirely that in making the address you have pledged yourselves primarily to those principles and to me only so far as I embody those principles. We have a right to demand that every man who comes here becomes a citizen, that he become an American and nothing else.

Hyphen a Bar Sinister.

"We regard the hyphen as a bar sinister drawn across our national coat of arms and we don't intend to permit it to remain there. To you, both native of this country and those born abroad, and, above all, to you old native Americans of old stock, you cannot expect to get loyalty from the immigrant or the immigrant's children unless you make this country one to which a proud man can be loyal. And to do that you have got to demand that the country stand for courage and for strength.

"No man ever yet was loyal to a coward. No man ever yet was loyal to a weakling whose weakness was due to the fact that he would not take the pains and undergo the effort necessary to be strong. If we, as a nation, do not put forth our ideals, including the ideals of courage and strength, and if we do not put to use our immense national resources, in other words, if we allow timidity and wilful weakness to become attributes—unless we make up our minds—we shall not command the loyalty of those who come to our shores.

"Just today I was very glad to see published in the papers the letter of Admiral Dewey describing an incident that took place while I was president. When we were menaced with trouble I acted up to my theory that the proper way of handling international relations was by speaking softly and carrying a big stick. And in that particular case Dewey and the American fleet represented the big stick.

Asks Only for Justice.

"I asked on behalf of the nation for nothing to which we were not entitled. I was as courteous as possible. I not only acted with justice, but with courtesy toward them. I put every battleship and every torpedo boat on the sea under the American flag and Dewey, with instructions to hold himself ready in entire preparedness to sail at a moment's notice.

"That did not mean that we had war. Dewey was the greatest possible provocative of peace.

"We will do well to remember one of Lowell's great lines:

"'Peace won't keep house with fear.'

"It is a line worth remembering, and the way to get peace is not by being so unprepared as to invite war, still less by using words which are not translated into deeds, but by behaving with scrupulous justice and courtesy toward the other nations, and at the same time being so prepared both in soul and in body as to make it evident that insult to this nation by any other nation will not be tolerated by our people."

CHANCELLOR DAY, OLD FOE OF T. R., HIS CHAMPION NOW.

Educator Calls Wilson "Worst Since Buchanan" and Urges Roosevelt as G. O. P. Candidate.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse university sent to the headquarters of the national Roosevelt committee in this city today a telegram that he is for Col. Roosevelt as the Republican party's nominee for president.

"I am not advocating any one for the presidency," runs the telegram. "It is not necessary to say that I have been disappointed in Mr. Wilson. Not since Buchanan have we had a man so utterly unsatisfactory. A man like Mr. Roosevelt would have saved us from humiliation in both Mexico and Europe."

Chancellor Day and the colonel have been at outs for years. The chancellor's opposition arose out of the former president's recommendations for the regulation of big business, particularly an attack which the colonel made upon the Standard Oil company. Chancellor Day came out with a denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt and the controversy interested the whole country.

RIGGS BANK MEN FREED; BLOW TO TREASURY HEADS

Acquittal on Perjury Charge Discredits Attacks of McAdoo and Williams.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Controller of the Currency John Skelton Williams and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo received a hard blow this afternoon when a jury, after deliberating only nine minutes, brought in a verdict of "not guilty" against the officers of the Riggs National bank, who were being prosecuted by the government on a charge of perjury.

The belief is expressed tonight that the acquittal of the officers on the criminal charge will bring a quick decision in the civil case and foreshadows a curtailment of Controller Williams' alleged activities in pursuing the officers of the bank.

Open dissatisfaction with the controller's course was freely expressed today by influential Democrats, a number of senators going so far as to say that the president already had called a halt on Mr. Williams' attack on the bank. It even is intimated that strong pressure may be brought to bear on the administration to request the controller's resignation.

Crowd Cheers Acquitted Men.

When Charles C. Glover, president of the Riggs bank, emerged from the courthouse he was greeted by a roar of applause from a crowd that had been waiting since court convened, and it was with difficulty that he made his way, accompanied by William J. Flather, vice president, and Henry Flather, formerly cashier of the bank, to his automobile.

Even more dramatic was the reception of the officers on their return to the bank, the scene being staged on the steps of the institution, which is directly across the street from the United States treasury.

The verdict was rendered at noon, and by that time the crowd of depositors, employés and friends, and friends of the bank taxed the abilities of all the traffic policemen in the vicinity.

Crowd Cheers from Treasury.

The north or main front of the treasury building faces the Riggs National bank, and every window was occupied. The occupants made an unexpected contribution to the scene when Mr. Glover and the Messrs. Flathers reached the bank from the courthouse. As Mr. Glover and his awo associates stepped from the automobile to grasp the hands that were extended to them the occupants of the treasury windows frantically waved handkerchiefs and cheered.

The crowd in front of the bank answered the salvo from the treasury windows, and it was fully an hour before the windows were vacated and the crowds left the street in front of the bank. The demonstration of approval given by the treasury employes and officials is said to have angered Controller Williams, and it is stated he is going to report the matter to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

ON SATURDAY, JUNE 3d

There will be thousands in line and all who march should fortify their feet by shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes. It removes and prevents the soreness, smarting and aches that come with Spring days and activity. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Over 100,000 packages are being used by the troops in the war zone. For acute aches, sprinkle Allen's Foot-Ease in the Foot-Bath and soak and rub the feet. WHITMAN SAYS HUGHES IS ONE TO BEAT WILSON

New York Governor, Preparedness Champion, Loyal to Jurist.

Below will be found the first of a series of articles on Republican presidential possibilities. They will reveal the attitude of the various men on the public questions of the day and throw light on the personal characteristics of each.

BY MARK S. WATSON.

Albany, N. Y., May 27.—[Special.]—"Try to imagine a circus barker yearning to call public attention to the big show inside the tent and forbidden to say anything about what the show is," remarked an amused politician in New York. "Get in your mind a vivid picture of that barker and his dilemma and his sufferings, and you have a good picture of Gov. Whitman and his state of mind."

Gov. Charles S. Whitman of New York is looked on as one of the big men of the movement to present Justice Hughes with the Republican nomination.

FAVORED HUGHES AT FIRST.

He was perhaps the first of the big men of New York to come out in favor of the justice as the 1916 Republican nominee. He has urged that candidacy vigorously ever since and has been so successful that the Hughes people are now claiming a sure 17 and a probable 21 out of the 56 New York delegates, in spite of the embattled advocates of former Senator Root, also a New York favorite son.

Gov. Whitman is urging that candidacy now and is endeavoring to spread the Hughes enthusiasm which he himself feels. But, as the New York politician remarked, he is having his troubles in doing it. Oratory is hampered if the orator is not allowed to say anything, and what Gov. Whitman is allowed to say as the mouthpiece of Gov. Hughes is pretty close to nothing.

PREPAREDNESS IMPORTANT.

"Isn't it time Justice Hughes declared himself on some national issue?" he was asked.

"He has declared himself," said Gov. Whitman loyally. "He did it years ago. He did it in four years at the executive mansion, and he did it in the Taft campaign of 1908, which he opened at Youngstown with the greatest address of that campaign. That shows clearly his attitude toward tariff and other national policies."

"Including preparedness?"

"No, and of course that is vitally important," he admitted. "No one is authorized to speak for Justice Hughes and no one can tell what his ideas are on subjects which have come to such wide attention in the years he has spent on the bench. We cannot estimate him by what he says, for he says nothing. We must take him by what he is, and that should be satisfactory.

HAS CLEAN RECORD.

"I believe he is the choice of an overwhelming majority of this state's representatives. He is a man of powerful personality, with a record absolutely unimpeachable, carrying the confidence and respect of the people of the state during his whole service here. There is an overwhelming call for him. He is the best man to return the Republican party to power, and the need of superseding the Democratic party is obvious."

New Yorkers who have not been warmed by the Hughes bonfire feel that much of this eulogy could be said about a number of other persons whom the presidential bee never approached. There are a lot of people in New York who do not feel so enthusiastic. They admired the devotion to principle which Hughes has exhibited, but they question his tact and diplomacy, traits which these same people feel have been most woefully lacking at Washington in recent years.

Means What He Says.

Executives who "bend over backward" or maintain an exact perpendicular are sometimes hard for the old line politicians to understand. Hughes was inscrutable at Albany and he is still inscrutable. He has many heterodox notions, one of which is that when he says a thing he means it just as he says it.

He would not talk about presidential possibilities and he means it. Moreover, he will not let any one else talk for him. He will not even stand for discussions by any "person close to the justice." This was his attitude in Albany years ago.

Hughes makes up his mind swiftly enough, as is known by any one who has heard him in cross examination, but he takes his time about announcing the decision. As a result he has few corrections to make, and does not exercise the prerogative assumed by various statesmen of repudiating observations which they made with more promptness than sagacity.

The man to whom Gov. Hughes made a promise knew that promise would be kept.

Justice Never Says Much.

"Hughes always stuck to what he said," remarked an Albany man plaintively. "The only trouble with him was that he said so damn little."

Even Gov. Whitman showed his regret that the silence of his candidate was so dense and a realization that he would have a hard time making a nominating speech before a convention which promises to demand first of all a candidate who insists on a real preparedness.

Mr. Whitman did not conceal his wish that Justice Hughes would step out and say something on a larger army and a larger navy, for both of which the present governor is enthusiastic.

To Whitman's energy and determination is due the sweeping victory of preparedness in that state. By the law which has just passed New York is to begin immediately the spending of $1,000,000 a year on her reserves training, and before long New York will have more than 100,000 boys in regular training in the schools during most of the year and in camps during the summer.

Whitman Proud of Work.

Whitman is proud of his work and the flood of congratulatory messages received from his own state and other states indicates he has a right to be.

"I have been in favor of a genuine military training for our boys about as long as I've been an admirer of Justice Hughes, and that is a long time," the governor said. "I have seen the Swiss training, and I like it. Long ago I thought we ought to have it, but what could any one do about it except memorialize congress. Then there came this opportunity and New York seized it."

New York seized it only because Gov. Whitman led the way. He sounded the call on Jan. 29, when he spoke at the national council of a life insurance company, but his real campaign did not start until a month later, when people almost fought for places at a Buffalo hall—and on a rainy night—to hear his advocacy of Americanism.

Buffalo supported the universal training program heartily, largely as a result of that speech. The legislature lagged, and more than once the party leaders told Whitman the bill was dead and he might as well know he already was licked for reelection next fall. Whitman's answer was to send a message that smoked as the messenger carried it down Eagle street toward the capitol.

Democrats Swing Into Line.

He made more speeches, and, stung by pacifist charges that he was making it a political measure, he put the issue squarely before the Democrats. If the measure ever had been dependent on party control that time was past. The Democrats he needed swarmed to his aid, and in spite of the forecasts of political seers Whitman pushed the bill through with a rush by a personal and not a party control.

Gov. Whitman has undoubtedly strengthened himself enormously by his vigorous position. There are optimistic friends who think he is outgrowing his present clothes and is ready for some kind of national suit.

They even dare to think of what happened at the Republican convention of 1880 when James A. Garfield made the nomination speech for Senator Sherman and spoke so admirably that the convention forgot Sherman and nominated Garfield. Mr. Whitman has read his history and he remembers the episode. It makes him nervous when his friends remind him of it.

For Hughes First and Last.

The governor is not so ingenious that he can deny the pleasing tone to that particular siren's voice, but he is doing the next safest thing by holding both hands tight over his ears when the siren sings.

"There's no point in my encouraging that story," he said smilingly. "I'm for Justice Hughes and I believe Hughes will win on his splendid record. I've been asked how I stand on various matters, but I honestly feel there is going to be just one big issue in this campaign, and that is our national defense.

"We are called on to face the fact that the spiritual progress of the world has not yet reached the point where it is safe for a nation to rely entirely upon fair intent and moral precept. As in the past that we thought outgrown and outlived, peace remains a thing that men must be prepared to fight for and to die for. This is not only the thought of the dangers that lie in our unreadiness to resist aggression or to repel invasion.

"The United States must be able to fulfill its historic mission as a fearless champion of justice, else we will know the death of the spirit that is more to be dreaded than the death of the body."

WILSON, DANIELS SHOWN BACKING A LITTLE NAVY

Administration Put on Defensive in Debate in House; Argument Grows Sharp.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Lines between the big and little navy men were drawn early in the debate in the house today over the naval appropriation bill.

Through skillful maneuvering by Representatives Britten of Illinois, Butler and Farr of Pennsylvania, and Roberts of Massachusetts, the administration was lined up solidly with the little navy crowd. It was put on the defensive right after the first shot was fired by Chairman Padgett of the committee in advocacy of the bill.

Later in the day, when Representative Hensley of Missouri charged that officers of the navy department disapproved of the construction of submarines because they could not hold receptions on them and preferred battleships because they were more practicable for receptions, the Democrats of the house cheered him wildly.

Turns Tables on Democrats.

Congressman Miller of Delaware, the baby member of the house, turned the tables on Hensley and the Democrats, however, in a speech which brought forth applause from the Republicans and the galleries.

"It is quite apparent to all of us here," Miller said, "that in case of war the gentleman from Missouri, because of his well known scruples, would remain at home. The men he is criticizing because occasionally they have to hold formal receptions on their vessels will have to do the fighting not only for themselves but for him and the whole crowd like him throughout the country. It seems poor taste for a member of congress who is opposed to preparation for war to come here and attempt to handicap and then derogate the men who will have to carry on the war. Better would it be for him to help by giving them the weapons they need and want."

Britten Charges Log Rolling.

Representatives Britten and Farr brought out the fact that both President Wilson and Secretary Daniels have approved the naval bill. Britten charged the measure was put through the committee by log rolling methods. He elicited an admission from Mr. Padgett that the Democrats thought it by far too expensive to attempt to bring the navy back to second place in this congress.

"It would cost at least $400,000,000 to make the start," said Mr. Padgett, "and we thought that was too much."

Republicans bombarded Padgett with questions concerning the present rank of the navy.

"Has any naval expert placed us better than fourth?" Representative Farr asked.

"Admiral Fletcher has put us third," Padgett replied.

"But President Wilson said we were only fourth," Farr shot back.

"And I believe the president was wrong," Padgett retorted. "We have a much better navy than he thinks."

Wilson and Daniels Approve.

At this point Representative Butler took up the fight. He was interrupted by Representative Howard of Georgia, who inquired whether the bill had the approval of the president and the navy department.

"Both," Mr. Padgett replied; "and the navy department is tickled over the bill. I have a letter from Secretary Daniels complimenting the committee on its splendid work."

"Well, I would like to know how often President Wilson changes his mind on these questions," Mr. Butler observed.

The debate today served to indicate clearly that the Democrats have no intention of raising the navy to second place in this or any other congress, and that their naval bill was put in merely as a sop to the people who are demanding the return of the navy to its former position, achieved under the administration of ex-President Roosevelt.

I Will Make Money for You

I Have Done It For Others—I Can Do It For You

You cannot make money by leaving your savings in a bank where they draw only 3% interest, but you can make money by buying carefully selected real estate—the safest investment in the world—from a firm of recognized financial responsibility by paying a few dollars down and a few dollars a month.

Three years ago I recommended the purchase of lots in Rogers Park, then selling at $40 a foot; now worth $100 a foot and more.

Less than one year ago I recommended the purchase of lots in the Howard Avenue district; now worth three times the price then asked.

Three years ago I recommended the purchase of lots in the South Shore Country Club district at $1500. Lots in this district have since sold as high as $5,000.

Three years ago I recommended the purchase of lots just south of Jackson Park for a few hundred dollars. Today lots in this district are selling from $2,000 up.

Did You Buy Any of These Lots?
Did You Make Any of These Profits?

TODAY I RECOMMEND THE PURCHASE OF MY LOTS IN HYDE PARK SELLING AS LOW AS $475. These lots contain all necessary building improvements and I am selling them on easy terms. IN MY JUDGMENT THESE LOTS WILL INCREASE IN VALUE AS RAPIDLY AND AS SURELY AS THOSE ABOVE REFERRED TO.

Are You Going to Buy One or More of These Lots?
Are You Going to Make Your Share of These Profits?

Write, phone or call at my office and I will be glad to make an appointment with you to go into the matter fully and show you these lots, but do it quickly.

Our Big Money Making Opening Sale Sunday, May 28th

AUBURN HIGHLANDS

Located Between 79th Street and 83rd Street and Between Racine and Ashland Avenues

Our rapid rise to prominence and the great confidence of the public in the men who are making this offering are due to the honest real estate that we offer and to the methods which we employ in improving it and to the business like way that we develop. In selecting Auburn Highlands as our first offering this year we were guided by facts which point out to us the wonderful advantage which this property has from an investment viewpoint. Every lot in this subdivision will make money for the man who owns it. The district of which it is the center will be the most choice, the most valuable and the finest in appearance of any district for many miles around.

The Features of This Property Are as Follows:

The northern boundary of Auburn Highlands is 79th Street and the western boundary is Ashland Avenue—both of which streets have car lines running on them at the present time.

79th Street is one of Chicago's greatest cross-town streets and is well paved the entire width of Auburn Highlands to Ashland Ave.

The Racine Ave. car line runs from the corner of Auburn Highlands direct to Madison and Dearborn Streets without a change of cars.

The 79th Street car line runs from Auburn Highlands direct to the lake, where the city is to erect a Municipal Bathing Beach which will cost $200,000.

Every lot is sold at a price that will allow the purchaser to get the full profit from the development of the district.

The price of every lot includes the improvements---sewer, water, gas, and sidewalks.

The terms are as low as $10 a month, which allows every one to get in on this great investment.

Residence lots are exceptionally wide---32 feet.

Auburn Highlands is surrounded by a fine, healthy development; has stores, theaters, churches, schools, and over $2,000,000 worth of buildings have already been erected here, all of which are of brick and substantial and modern in every particular.

Direct transportation links Auburn Highlands with the Stock Yards, the Central Manufacturing District and other industrial sections on the South Side with 5c car fare to all parts of Chicago.

The prices of property in the 79th Street district have shown a greater increase than in any other district in the last eighteen months; and development planned for the immediate future will make every lot in this subdivision worth very much more than we are asking today.

Auburn Highlands is owned by the Chicago Title & Trust Co. as trustee; and every purchaser is absolutely assured that when his full amount of money is paid in he will get a deed to his property direct from the Chicago Title & Trust Co.

Prices, $650—$700—$750

Terms, $10 a Month. Prices Include Sewer, Water, Gas and Sidewalks.
Building Restrictions Protect the Property.
No Interest the First Year.

How to Get There: Take a car marked "Stock Yards Direct" on State Street in the Loop and ride to the end of the line. Take any north and south line and transfer west on 79th Street to the property. Take any east and west car line and transfer on Ashland Avenue south to the property. Our offices are given at the bottom of this announcement.

FRENCH RETAKE CUMIERES TOWN NORTH OF VERDUN

Sudden Attack Gives Possession of Position Which Perilled Dead Man Hill.

PARIS, May 27.—French troops recaptured a large part of the village of Cumieres, nine miles northwest of Verdun, in heavy fighting last night, the war office announced today.

Despite the most desperate counter attacks the French retained possession of the eastern part of the village, as well as several German trenches to the northwest.

The French counter attack was launched from the grove between Cumieres and the west bank of the Meuse. After pressing forward into this wood in grenade fighting on Thursday, the French commanders massed detachments there yesterday, and last night threw the forces against the Germans who had occupied Cumieres earlier in the week.

French Official Statement.

The official communication issued by the war office tonight reads:

In Champagne, both artillery forces were very active in the sectors of Ville-sur-Tourbe, Tahure, and Navarin. About 6 o'clock in the evening the Germans directed an attack against our positions to the west of the road from Navarin and gained a footing in several small posts of our advanced line, from which our counter attacks drove them.

On the left bank of the Meuse there was fighting with artillery and trench guns in the Avocourt wood, and in the sector of Hill 304. To the southwest of Le Mort Homme we captured several sections of trenches and made about fifty prisoners.

On the right bank the bombardment has been maintained with intensity in the region of Haudromont-Douaumont. In the underground passageways to the northwest of the Thiaumont farm we made appreciable progress in the course of the day.

Germans Tell of Gains.

BERLIN, May 27.—The official statement issued by the general army headquarters today told of gains by the Germans before Verdun.

East of the Meuse they have reached the heights southwest of Thiaumont forest. The French attempted vainly to stem the German advance by a counter-attack, which was repulsed. South of Fort Douaumont two enemy attacks failed.

GERMAN SUBMARINES SEND THREE ALLIED SHIPS DOWN.

One Italian and Two British Steamers Sunk—Two of Crews Saved—Fate of Other Unknown.

PARIS, May 27.—A Havas dispatch from Port Vendres says that two French torpedo boats arrived there yesterday, bringing thirty members of the crew of the Italian steamer Moravia, which was torpedoed by a German submarine on Thursday afternoon without warning. The crew was abandoned in two lifeboats.

[The Moravia is a steamer of 2,268 tons. It sailed from New York on May 5 and was last reported passing Gibraltar on May 22.]

Two British Ships Sunk.

LONDON, May 27.—The British steamers Denewood and Hercules have been sunk. The crew of the Denewood has been landed, but the fate of those on the Hercules is unknown.

The Battle Lines Around Verdun.

1—Berlin reports French troops forced their way into southern part of Cumieres during fighting Friday night but were subsequently driven out.

2—Paris reports French east of Hill 304 made progress by hand grenade attack.

3—Paris reports French troops penetrated eastern part of Cumieres and occupied several German trenches northwest of village. Violent counter attack failed to dislodge French.

4—Paris reports intense activity on part of both German and French artillery in region north of Verdun.

5—Berlin reports Germans advanced on east side of Meuse as far as the heights in region southwest of Thiaumont wood. A French attack against German advance was stopped by artillery fire.

6—Berlin reports two French attacks on new positions captured by Germans south of Fort Douaumont completely failed. In engagements southwest of this fort Germans report capture of 1,943 men and 48 officers. Paris reports second German attack on French trenches in the vicinity of Fort Douaumont failed.

GERMAN AVIATORS BOMBARD RUSSIAN AEROPLANE DEPOT.

Berlin Reports Raid on Gulf of Riga Station—Slavs Repulse Teuton Attacks on Land.

BERLIN, May 27.—An official communication issued by the war office tonight reads:

Thursday night a German air squadron again dropped bombs on a Russian aeroplane station at Papenholm, on the Island of Oesel, in the Gulf of Riga. The squadron obtained lucky hits, mostly on the air station itself. In spite of a heavy fire directed against them, all our aeroplanes returned safely.

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, May 27.—The following official communication from general headquarters was issued today:

The enemy attacked with hand grenades and mine throwers in the region to the south of Dalen island. In the same region the German artillery simultaneously bombarded a section of our trenches. Afterward, taking advantage of the fog, the enemy assumed the offensive, which was stopped by our fire.

Along the rest of the front artillery and rifle duels and minor encounters between small detachments occurred.

NEPHEW KILLED IN WAR

News of Death of Flyer Relayed to Chicago Woman by "The Tribune."

Through the medium of THE TRIBUNE Mrs. Rudolph Schweitzer, 815 Garfield avenue, was yesterday notified of the death of her nephew, Lieut. Hans Henry Zeinsen of the German aeroplane corps, last April. Since then her family in Europe had been making attempts to send the news, but to no avail because of the censorship.

The news reached THE TRIBUNE through Albert K. Dawson, a moving picture photographer.

CHICAGO POLES TO HOLD PARADE AND BANQUET TODAY

Object of Two Demonstrations Is to Show Fealty to U. S. and Love for Mother Country.

Poles of Chicago will manifest their allegiance to America and love and sympathy for Poland in demonstrations today. One will be the annual parade of Polish societies in the afternoon to the monument of Thaddeus Kosciuszko in Humboldt park. The other will be a banquet at the Auditorium hotel in the evening.

Addresses at the monument will be delivered by United States Senator J. W. Kern of Indiana, Judge Harry Olson, Judge E. K. Jarecki, N. L. Piotrowski, and others.

More than 1,000 persons have been invited to the banquet, at which addresses will be delivered by Archbishop G. W. Mundelein, Senator Gilbert Hitchcock, Senator Kern, Senator J. H. Lewis, and others. J. F. Smulski will be the toastmaster.

"In arranging two such demonstrations Chicago Poles hope to attain a threefold object," said Mr. Piotrowski. "The first is to manifest their allegiance to the country of their adoption. The second is to set before the American nation the facts about the unspeakable misery now prevailing in war ridden Poland. The third is to proclaim to the world the inalienable rights of the Polish nation to freedom and independence."

URGES PRAISE FOR FRANCE.

Resolution Offered in Congress Says People Hold Germany to Blame for War.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—A resolution declaring the vast majority of the people of the United States believe Germany and Austria precipitated the present great war and asking congress to congratulate France and her allies "for punishment of international faithlessness" was introduced in the house this afternoon by Representative Gardner.

GERMANS DESTROY TOWN ON THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.

Kilindir Razed, Paris Hears—Bulgarians Occupy Greek Forts Along the Struma.

PARIS, May 27.—Violent artillery engagements occurred along the entire Macedonian front yesterday, according to the Havas correspondent at Saloniki, telegraphing on May 26. He reports Kilindir destroyed by the German bombardment.

French aeroplanes have bombarded Bulgarian encampments at Petritch, causing much damage.

Bulgarian troops yesterday installed themselves for the first time on Greek territory, according to another Havas dispatch from Saloniki under date of May 26.

Fort Roupel, on the Struma, north of Demi Hissar, was occupied at noon by a Bulgarian regiment, the Greek commander of the fort being given two hours in which to evacuate. Then, continuing its advance, the Bulgarian regiment occupied Forts Kanivo and Dragotin, constructed by the Greeks immediately after the last war.

NEW YORK MONEY EXCHANGE IN BERLIN IS IMPROVING.

BERLIN, May 27.—New York exchange has undergone a marked improvement for several weeks. In April a dollar cost 5.46 marks; it now is 5.175, which has been quoted for more than a week.

The greatest improvement occurred, curiously enough, right at the most acute stage of the crisis with the United States. Discussing general exchange developments today, a director of one of the biggest Berlin banks said to the Associated Press:

"The improvement in rates is due to three causes. First, increased confidence in Germany's military position; second, the efforts of the Reichsbank, in conjunction with the great banking houses, to regulate dealings in exchange; third, the reduction of German purchases abroad."

ITALIANS STRIKE FOES HARD BLOW AFTER A RETREAT

Rome Says One Force Was Annihilated—Vienna Reports Steady Advance.

ROME, via London, May 27.—The following official communication was issued from general headquarters today:

Yesterday we repulsed minor enemy attacks at Molino in the Lodro valley, against Serravalle, on Buole pass in the Lagarina valley, and also in the Posina sector, when two companies of the enemy with machine guns were annihilated by our fire.

On the Asiago plateau there was an intense activity on the part of the enemy's artillery from Monte Verena. Fighting on our lines to the eastward of Val d'Asso continued yesterday.

Italians Admit Retreat.

In the Sugana valley our troops on Thursday fell back in good order from their advanced positions on Monte Civaron. Yesterday enemy columns attacked our lines east of the Calamento valley. Our Alpine troops stopped the enemy's assault and afterwards made a dashing counter attack, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and capturing 100 prisoners and two machine guns.

In the Monte Nero zone the enemy Thursday night attacked our trenches on the Ursic mountain and momentarily succeeded in forcing their way into them. Reinforcements came up and after a desperate counter attack the enemy was completely driven back, leaving forty prisoners and two machine guns in our hands. In the Upper But and in the Piava sector there were artillery actions.

Enemy hydroaeroplanes dropped bombs on the Grado lagoon without injuring any one or doing any damage. One of our air squadrons bombarded the enemy's store depots at Kotschach in the Gail valley, causing great havoc.

Austrians Continue Advance.

VIENNA, May 27.—Austrian troops have captured the armored work of Casaratte from the Italians, it was officially announced tonight.

Continuing their advance on Asiago, the Austrians have captured Monte Moschicce.

South of the Sugana valley the frontier ridges as far as Cima Maora were reached by the advancing Austrians. The number of captured guns now totals 284.

Restaurant Employes Organize.

The Association of Greek Restaurant Employes of Illinois was formed yesterday. The object is the social uplift of the members. George A. Kyriakopoulos was elected president. Denis Varounes, vice president; Alexander A. Vappas, secretary; and John Vlassoupoulos, treasurer.

Overland

Real Comfort for Seven

Canvass the world and you will not find as big a car as the Overland Six at anywhere near so low a price, $1145.

You who prefer seven passenger capacity, must pay a heavy excess in price to get so much real seven passenger comfort in any other car.

And to back up its big roomy seven passenger carrying capacity there is the powerful six cylinder Overland motor.

Take your full quota of seven big passengers and see how smoothly and easily, without a sign of effort, your powerful motor speeds away with even an overload.

Slow down to a crawl—don't touch the gear shift—keep it in high—but just touch your accelerator.

Without a tremor, smoothly, easily, swiftly, you acquire any desired speed.

That's genuine six cylinder pick-up—a big outstanding Overland Six fact.

And it's that big fact about this big car that makes its price, $1145, so small in comparison.

Overland four cylinder models will "pick up" with many another six.

Our only purpose in building a six at all is to supply with genuine Overland finality and economy that extremist demand for the luxury of bigness and lightning fast pickup.

Overland production—double that of any other builder of cars of like class—makes possible the unapproached value which you get in so big and exceptional a car at so low a price—$1145.

Have the Overland dealer overload the six and demonstrate its comfort and lightning fast pickup.

You cannot equal it for anywhere near the price.

MME. KELLOGG'S WILL IS UPHELD; ASK NEW TRIAL

Mother of "Lady Lois" Fails in Effort to Deprive Friends of Funds.

Mrs. Lois Kellogg yesterday lost her effort to break the will and codicil of her father, Mme. Sarah H. Kellogg, when a jury in Judge Windes' court brought in a verdict in favor of beneficiaries under the testament who have been opposing the daughter's efforts to have Mme. Kellogg declared mentally incompetent and unduly influenced in the disposition of her property.

If the verdict stands, Mrs. Kellogg and her daughter, "Lady Lois," will have to eke out an existence on the income from an estate of about $500,000 until the girl, who testified in behalf of her mother, reaches the age of 45.

On the other hand, the balance of Mme. Kellogg's estate remains distributed as follows:

To Walter F. Cobb and his wife, $5,000 outright.

To Miss Frances M. Lund, a life estate in $10,000.

To Miss Bertha Terry Lyman, a life estate in $10,000.

To Miss Bertha Lund Belden, a life estate in $80,000.

Miss Belden's Funds.

Miss Belden received a life estate in $10,000 under the original will of Sept. 21, 1905. Another life estate in $10,000 went to her mother, by whose death since then it has reverted to her. The codicil of Nov. 9, 1912, allows Miss Belden a life estate in an additional $60,000.

By the provisions of the will Mrs. Kellogg is given a life estate in the remainder of the property, estimated at about $80,000. As the other beneficiaries die the estates set aside for them revert to the main estate, the whole of which remains in trust until "Lady Lois," the granddaughter just out of her 'teens, reaches the age of 45.

"Lady Lois," who has been the most prominent figure in the trial, not even excepting the attorneys, John S. Miller for Mrs. Kellogg and Walter L. Fisher for the heirs, refused to say a word yesterday when the verdict was returned.

"Lady Lois" with Mother.

On the day preceding she had interrupted Mr. Fisher in the course of his argument, demanding that he "let mother alone" and then collapsing in tears. She had testified for her mother. According to the testimony of nurses, Mme. Kellogg's chief purpose in placing the estate in trust was to protect "Lady Lois" against the pitfalls of modern society.

Immediately upon the return of the verdict against his client Cecil Barnes, who, with Mr. Miller, represented Mrs. Kellogg, made a motion asking a new trial. Judge Windes continued arguments on his motion until next Saturday.

Less than two hours was required by the jurors in reaching their verdict against daughter and granddaughter. Nearly three weeks was consumed in the presentation of the evidence; and the courtroom was filled with society women who gasped conscientiously as the nurses for Mme. Kellogg related bits of scandal and gossip which she had told them.

KEENA FLEES THE COUNTRY?

Daniel F. Keena, the suspended foreman of the fourth district of the city water pipe extension bureau, has left Montgomery, Ala., and has probably left the United States, in the belief of Capt. VOTE FRAUD REWARD PAID

Citizens' Association Gives $100 as Result of Conviction for Illegal Ballot.

The Citizens' association of Chicago yesterday paid to Joseph D. Irose, 105 West Monroe street, $100 reward in connection with the conviction of Edward O'Malley on the charge of illegal voting. This payment was made in fulfillment of an offer by the Citizens' association prior to the primary election of April 11. According to evidence at the trial of O'Malley he voted in the Forty-first precinct of the Twenty-first ward on April 11 under the name of Frank C. Clark, a Negro janitor. Mr. Irose, who was acting as a Republican watcher in the polling place, detected the fraud and swore out the warrant on which O'Malley was arrested.

RAIN SCATTERS "PIONEERS" AT DESPLAINES PAGEANT.

"Gen. Porter" Puts Spurs to His Horse and Frontiersmen Flee Before Torrent.

A thousand spectators, equipped with umbrellas instead of opera glasses, watched students of the Riverside-Brookfield Township High school brave a rainstorm yesterday afternoon in their presentation of a historical pageant of the Desplaines valley at Riverside.

The massacre of John Cox and his wife at the Desplaines portage in 1804 was reproduced in a drizzling rain which seriously interfered with the burning of the replica of their cabin by the students in the guise of red skinned raiders.

"Gov. William Henry Harrison" had just successfully completed his conference with the Indians when there came a deafening peal of thunder and the rain began to descend in torrents.

Spectators scattered. Gen. Porter put spurs to his horse and frontiersmen "beat it" for home.

In the excitement the management announced a postponement until next Tuesday afternoon.

$10,000 FOR CO-ED BUILDING

Milton H. Wilson, Greenleaf street and Forest avenue, Evanston, has given $10,000 toward the proposed $500,000 woman's building to be erected on the Northwestern university campus, it was announced yesterday. This is the largest individual donation made since the erection of the building was proposed. The total subscription now is $45,000.

CITY HALL HALTS SCHEME AIMED AT BOND SHARKS

Olson's Plan for Surety Company to Act Frowned On by Chief Healey.

The city administration has rejected a plan designed to eliminate the professional bond sharks from police stations. According to Chief Justice Olson of the Municipal court, whose committee was instrumental in bringing the proposal to the attention of Chief of Police Healey, no reason has been given for the refusal of the administration to cooperate.

Through Attorney Eugene E. Prussing, Judge Olson's committee succeeded in persuading the American Surety company of New York to undertake to compete with the bond sharks. J. W. Mason, vice-president of the company, spent a week in Chicago and offered to give bonds in cases of ordinance violations for a standard rate of $3 each. It was hoped eventually to extend the operations of the company to include bonds in criminal cases.

Company Guaranteed Against Loss.

Mr. Mason made this proposal after Attorney Prussing had obtained the guarantee of several public spirited men to protect the company against possible loss during the first year. Mr. Mason said the company was not anxious to go into the business, but would consent to give it a trial.

Judge Olson, Mr. Prussing and Mr. Mason then visited Chief Healey.

"We are making this proposition at the request of Judge Olson's committee," Mr. Mason said, "but it will be impossible to go ahead unless we are assured of the co-operation of the police department."

Healey Frowns on Plan.

Chief Healey replied he would have to take it up with the mayor and the corporation counsel. Recently the chief told Judge Olson he did not think the plan would be advisable.

"The American Surety company was not to be given a monopoly," Judge Olson said in commenting on the scheme. "It was simply a proposal to bring in competition that would prevent the bond sharks from charging all the traffic would bear. What reasonable objection could there be to that?"

Judge Olson's committee is working on proposed legislation to take away the power of the police to make arrests in the majority of cases of violation of city ordinances. It is proposed to require the issuance of summons for these offenders. Judge Olson believes such a law will put a big crimp in the operations of the bond sharks.

PASSENGER SHIP AT PIER.

Passenger service was inaugurated at the new municipal pier yesterday when the steel steamer Missouri of the Northern Michigan line reached here at noon and drew up on the south side of the docks. A new cargo was taken aboard in a few hours and the boat left again at 5:30 carrying more than 100 summer cottagers to Portage Lake, Mich. E. W. Seymour, president of the steamship line, was the first passenger to step aboard from the pier. Triweekly service from the pier will be maintained by the company throughout the summer.

TRAEGER WARNS BURNHAM SALOONS TO OBEY THE LAW.

Sheriff Visits "Bright Light" Suburb and Tells Cafe Men Disorderly Women Must Go.

Sheriff John E. Traeger, accompanied by several deputies and Attorney Joseph Graber, paid a visit to saloons and alleged shady hotels in Burnham yesterday and notified proprietors that disorderly or immoral women will no longer be allowed in their places. Should investigators find that the warning is disregarded action will be started against proprietors under the Kate Adams law, the sheriff told them.

Sheriff Traeger also visited the mayor of Burnham and informed him of the action. The mayor signified his willingness to assist the sheriff in closing disorderly houses.

"I went out to get evidence on the places," Sheriff Traeger said, "but was unable to do so. Then I visited each owner and gave him warning. I want the saloons run in an orderly manner. If they are not run properly I will start prosecution. One place we visited is only six feet from the Indiana state line. I will have investigators employed to watch that my warning is heeded."

NEGRO MURDERESS BURNED FATALLY IN PENITENTIARY.

Explosion Ignites Bessie Scott's Dress—Was Sentenced for Life for Murder When 14 Years Old.

Seven years ago Bessie Scott, a Negress, then 14 years old, was sentenced to Joliet penitentiary for life for the murder of a school chum of hers. She died yesterday.

Bessie was one of the cooks in the women's quarters of the penitentiary. In preparing breakfast for the other inmates she placed a match to the gas stove and there was an explosion. The flame set fire to Bessie's dress. Before other prisoners could come to her rescue she was so badly burned that she died two hour's later.

LOOK TWICE AT FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES FOR $10.

Don't Accept Them if They Show Lincoln's Picture or Bear No. B6164041A, New York.

Is that federal reserve note in your pocket a $10 note? You've looked at it, and it bears the figure $10? Well, you'd better look again, for secret service men say they have discovered that one type of the $5 notes has been raised to $10.

Search is also being made for the maker of a counterfeit $10 federal reserve bill, which is reported on its way west.

The $5 federal reserve notes bear the picture of Lincoln; the $10 notes show Jackson. If your $10 note bears the picture of Lincoln you will know it has been raised.

The counterfeit $10 note is "No. B6164041-A," drawn on the federal reserve bank of New York. It is of the series of 1914, bears the check letter A and plate No. 21. It is slightly smaller than the genuine note and is thicker and stiffer. The printing is slightly blurred.

HUSBAND SEEKS WIFE KIDNAPED IN GREEN RACER

William L. Beed of Benton Harbor Looks for Vice Ring Plot.

William L. Beed, a mason contractor, of Benton Harbor, Mich., yesterday told the police he believed his wife, who went away with a stranger in a green racing car on May 6, has been kidnaped by agents of organized vice.

Beed told Lieut. Philip Miller of the detective bureau that he and his wife had been happily married five years ago, and that she was lured away by the stranger while she was at the home of a neighbor awaiting the return of her husband, who had been at work in South Bend, Ind. He offers a reward of $100 for information which will enable him to find his wife.

Mrs. Ethel Eva Beed, the missing woman, is 36 years old, and is described as having black hair, brown eyes, and weighs about 155 pounds.

Induced to Enter Auto.

"I am sure she would communicate with me if she were able to," Mr. Reed told the lieutenant.

"I had been working in South Bend, Ind., and the night of May 6 I missed the last traction car for Benton Harbor. My wife was sitting up at the home of a neighbor, waiting for me. This man drove up to the house with a large green racing car and told my wife that I had been injured in a street car accident. My wife put on a coat and got into his car and they drove away. That is the last I have heard of her."

Stopped in Benton Harbor.

Beed said he investigated and learned that the man had apepared in Benton Harbor and had been stopped by the sheriff for reckless driving. He said the man gave the name of Archie A. Jackson to the sheriff and said he was on the way to Chicago and asked directions to this city.

SEE BABY IN BLUE APRON?

Vera Wood, 3 years old, daughter of Frederic H. Wood of 311 Lamon avenue, has been missing since 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The police have been unable to trace the little girl, who wore only a blue apron at the time of her disappearance. The father is an interior decorative salesman for Marshall Field & Co.

INSANE MAN TRIES SUICIDE, BUT PROVIDENCE PREVENTS.

Seeks to Drown, but Swims—Strikes Quicksand, but Crust Upholds Him—Finally Rescued.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 27.—[Special.]—Albert L. Pearson, 50 years old, of Carrollton, Ill., tried for hours today to take his life and failed. Brought here for mental treatment, he escaped from the custody of his brother, J. H. Pearson, Friday morning, stayed all night in a shack west of the city, and this morning started to drown himself in the Kalamazoo river.

Every time his head went under his subconscious mind made him swim. But, determined to die, he would wade above his head again and swim again. In this way he covered a mile down stream, until his feet struck quicksand and he sat down, exhausted, in midstream.

By a mere chance Pearson sat on a crust that had formed over the quicksand, and here he remained for hours until a farmer saw him and had his daughter notify the police. When Chief W. H. Farrington waded toward Pearson he struck the crust, broke through, and found himself in quicksand. Other officers came to the rescue, managed to get Pearson ashore, and then rushed him to the sanitarium hospital.

Completely exhausted and blue with cold, Pearson was given heroic treatment, and probably will recover, though physicians say the exposure would have killed the average normal man. Had he not been discovered unconsciousness soon would have caused him to collapse and drown.

ELKS WILL HONOR DEAD.

Chicago Lodge to Hold Services Tuesday at "Elks' Rest," Mount Greenwood.

Members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will pay respect to their dead Tuesday, Decoration day, when the second services of the year will be held at "Elks' Rest," Mount Greenwood cemetery.

This will be a sequel to the memorial services which were celebrated at Cohan's Grand Opera house shortly after the new year.

State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne will be the speaker of the day. The Imperial quartet will give the memorial music and the "White Squadron," Chicago's crack drill team, will decorate the graves.

A special will leave the Dearborn station at 10:30 sharp and will stop at Forty-seventh street.

DADY DIRECTS POLICE TO HOLD ORPET LAWYER

Wilkerson Aid Seeking Witness in Toledo Returns Before Prosecutor Acts.

brought to light some startling facts which may prove of vital importance in the efforts of the defense to prove Orpet innocent of Marion Lambert's murder.

It is said Hartmann went to Mr. Wilkerson's office of his own volition and said his conscience had been bothering him concerning his niece, a nurse, who, prior to the death of Marion Lambert on Feb. 9, was employed in a home in Lake Forest. She is said to have been on terms of close friendship with the Lambert girl.

To her, possibly because she was a nurse and was supposed to have expert knowledge in such affairs, Hartmann said, Marion Lambert had told of her condition and the possible disgrace that confronted her because of her clandestine romance with the University of Wisconsin undergraduate.

Nurse Moved by Pity.

The nurse, it is said, was deeply moved by Marion's confession and made a special trip to Chicago to persuade Hartmann, her cousin, to do what he could to relieve the girl's condition. Hartmann, who has a knowledge of medicine, had a supply of ergot in his possession. He agreed to help the Lambert girl for his cousin's sake in every way possible.

"In the latter part of January," said Hartmann in telling of his connection with the case, "I went out to Lake Forest and had a secret interview with Marion Lambert in the presence of my cousin. I gave her the ergot and told her how she must take it. Miss Lambert talked to me freely. She told me that if Will Orpet cast her aside for Celeste Youker she would kill herself. I told her to dismiss such thoughts from her mind, but she insisted she would do exactly what she said. My cousin told me the girl frequently had told her the same thing. She feared some day Miss Lambert would carry out her threat.

"A few days after I had read in the papers that Marion Lambert was found dead in the woods my cousin left the state. I know that pressure was brought upon her to induce her to leave. I myself became frightened and ran away to East St. Louis. It is only recently that I ventured back to Chicago."

It was at first reported that the nurse had been employed in the household of Jonas Kuppenheimer, upon whose estate in Lake Forest Frank Lambert, the dead girl's father, is head gardener. Mrs. Kuppenheimer denied last night she ever had worked for her.

"Our home was closed up when the Lambert tragedy occurred," said Mrs. Kuppenheimer, "and our family was in California. There was no one on the place except the Lamberts, who live over the garage."

Opposite Aims.

Two mothers—two fathers, too—have been summoned as witnesses in the Orpet trial in the belief that evidence can be drawn from them that will defeat every hope they have cherished for the outcome of the case.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lambert, the girl's parents, have been called as witnesses for the defense. Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Orpet, parents of the youth, have been called for the prosecution.

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, it is hoped by the defense, will give evidence that will help to free the boy they believe murdered their daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Orpet, it is expected by the prosecution, will testify to facts that will pave the way to send their son—their youngest child and the idol of their hearts—to the gallows or the penitentiary.

Mr. Lambert is wanted by the defense to prove his daughter could have procured cyanide of potassium from the supply he keeps in the greenhouse on the Jonas Kuppenheimer estate.

He will be asked to testify regarding the tracks made by Orpet and Marion Lambert in Helm's woods—footprints that tell their own story and will have an important bearing on the case—and concerning the poison crystals found in the girl's right hand and on her cheek. With William Marshall, a professional golfer, Mr. Lambert was the first to see the body as it lay in the snow in the woods.

Mrs. Lambert will testify Marion knew two weeks before her death she was not in a delicate condition. Proof of this, the defense will contend, will support the suicide theory. If the girl knew of this, it will be argued, Orpet could not have induced her to take the poison in the guise of medicine for a condition that did not exist.

Orpet Father Answers?

Mr. Orpet will testify for the prosecution that under his orders soon after his son's arrest, Percy Longland, a subgardener, buried a quantity of cyanide of potassium kept in the greenhouses on the Cyrus H. McCormick estate, of which Mr. Orpet is caretaker. He will be asked his motive for visiting the scene of the tragedy on the day it occurred under the guidance of Wilson Frankland, engineer at Sacred Heart academy. Through him the prosecution may be able to prove Will Orpet spent the night before the fatal tryst in the woods in the McCormick garage close to where the poison was kept.

Mrs. Orpet is expected to testify regarding letters written to her by her son from the University of Wisconsin shortly before and after Marion Lambert's death. She will be asked especially about special delivery letters written to her by Will Orpet on Feb. 9, 10, and 11. Marion Lambert died on Feb. 9.

TAMPERING CHARGE CAUSES JURY PANEL'S DISCHARGE.

Judge Dismisses Venire Called in Erbstein and O'Donnell Case After Hotel Fraud Expose.

The entire venire which had been called in the case of Attorneys Patrick H. O'Donnell and Charles E. Erbstein, on trial with four others charged with subornation of perjury, was discharged yesterday by Judge Charles M. Walker following charges of attempts to influence prospective jurors in favor of the state's attorney's office. The four jurors already accepted were also dismissed.

For nearly two weeks counsel have been examining veniremen and four men were sworn. Four more had been tentatively accepted and nearly a hundred others were waiting to be examined when Juror David Neill made complaint about food being served at the Alexandria hotel.

He charged that this food was "hashed and rehashed" and his complaint, it is estimated, will cost the county in the neighborhood of $2,000. Following the complaint attorneys for the defendants charged that Robert Borland, hotel manager, stated jurors could order anything they wanted and it would be charged to the state's attorney's office.

SUE TO COLLECT ON BONDS OF TEXAS-PACIFIC RAILWAY.

St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, and Receiver Begin Action in Louisiana.

Shreveport, La., May 27.—Suit was instituted in the United States District court here today by the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railway and B. F. Bush, receiver for that road, to force the collection of $23,700,000 second mortgage income bonds issued by the Texas and Pacific railroad in 1888, and which are held by Bush as receiver.

Application also is made for the appointment of a receiver for the Texas and Pacific.

RECORD RAINS DOWNSTATE.

Springfield, Ill., May 27.—All traffic on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad west of this city is at a standstill because of a washout near Virginia early today. Almost a mile of track was washed out. The rain near Virginia early today was said to be the heaviest in the city's history.

GARAGE INQUIRY TO LEARN IF FULL MEASURE IS GIVEN.

Illinois Secretary of State Asks Federal Bureau to Investigate Gasoline Selling Through Pumps.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—At the instance of Secretary of State Stevenson of Illinois the fedefal bureau of standards will conduct an investigation of public garage gasoline pumps in that state to determine whether motorists are receiving short measure. This move is the result of disclosures made at the conference of state city commissioners of weights and measures with the federal bureau which was concluded today. Secretary Stevenson attended the meeting as the Illinois delegate.

The results of an investigation conducted by the bureau of standards in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Dayton, O., and Springfield, Mass., were submitted to the conference. F. J. Schlink of the bureau stated that more than half of the gasoline pumps in these cities were found to be defective and giving short measurement.

Mr. Stevenson said he had drafted a bill to be presented to the session of the legislature providing for state supervision of weights and measures.

FIFTY TAMPICO AMERICANS ROILED BY MEXICAN ABUSE.

Seek Immediate Advice on U. S. Stand Regarding Decrees Confiscating Property.

Laredo, Tex., May 27.—A petition to President Wilson signed by more than fifty American residents of Tampico, complaining of alleged abuses of Americans by Mexican military and civil authorities, expressing belief they should be advised definitely as to the attitude of the United States regarding enforcement of decrees, was forwarded to Washington this morning.

The petition recites individual cases of arrests and fines and confiscations imposed for alleged violation of decrees of the Mexican military government.

The principal question is said to be whether the property of Americans may be directly or indirectly confiscated by decree and whether Americans may be arbitrarily imprisoned by the military authorities. The object of the decrees is to force Americans to leave Mexico, according to the petitioners.

Cadillac "Eight" Stability
Master of Track and Highway

This is a day of super-tests. Competition is keen. Makers want to show off what their cars will do. So you hear much of tests and contests. Probably you have noticed the Cadillas records in these tests.

The Cadillac is not a racing car; no special racing Cadillacs have ever been built. So Cadillac performance is always a stock car performance—and thus the more important to you.

Time and again track records prove any Cadillac touring car will do 70 miles per hour and Roadsters 80 miles or better. But the remarkable track performance of the Cadillac lies not in its speed but in its stability. When it comes to staying always in the race, Cadillac stability shows up better than that of racing cars. In what you want proved—stability—the Cadillac is master of the track.

But stability on the road is what counts for even more. The open road—good and bad, as you find it—is the toughest test a car can be put to. Last summer more than a hundred Cadillacs toured to the coast and back. Just two weeks ago a Cadillac finished the fastest trip ever made from Los Angeles to New York.

Only 7½ days for 3471 miles of the worst way across the continent—that is the record—nearly four days better than the best previous time. A smoother, shorter road was possible. But Cadillac stability was under test, so the hardest test was chosen.

These proofs mean much to you if you see them straight. It is worth while to drive the car that is Master of Track and Highway, because the things that make the mastery possible are the things you must depend upon for your safety and satisfaction.

High grade construction—advanced design—proved correctness of design—these are the three things that make the Cadillac the master car today. And no other car possesses all three.

The Cadillac is high grade beyond question. The Cadillac V-motor design is the model for the industry—and all admit it. What other car in such position—if you can find another—what other car is so thoroughly proved? No other such car is proved at all compared with the Cadillac Eight—30,000 satisfied owners—master, by record, of track and highway.

You know what you are getting when you buy an Eight Cylinder Cadillac. $2080 F. O. B. Factory.

Plus-power! Divide the strands into smaller units and you thereby increase the strength of the cable

And now we have two to do the work of one—two compact blocks of cylinders—in place of one large and heavy block.

It's six plus six—all twins—sturdy twins—6+6.

By dividing the units we have not only made a lighter motor—but we have made a more powerful, a quieter, a more smoothly running motor.

And what is even more important, we have made a safer car by making a more agile and responsive motive mechanism.

This is the most important development that has ever been made in the Packard car.

It is a big forge ahead. And it means new possibilities for motor comfort, safety, delight—for you.

Achievement! Time has demonstrated that the Twin Six is the great achievement in automobile development.

Packard Motor Car Company of Chicago, 2357 Michigan Avenue, will cheerfully show you how the new Packard will serve better than any car has ever served before. Prices, $2750—$3150 and upward—f. o. b. Detroit. Branches at Milwaukee, South Bend, Peoria, Rockford, Grand Rapids, and Dubuque.

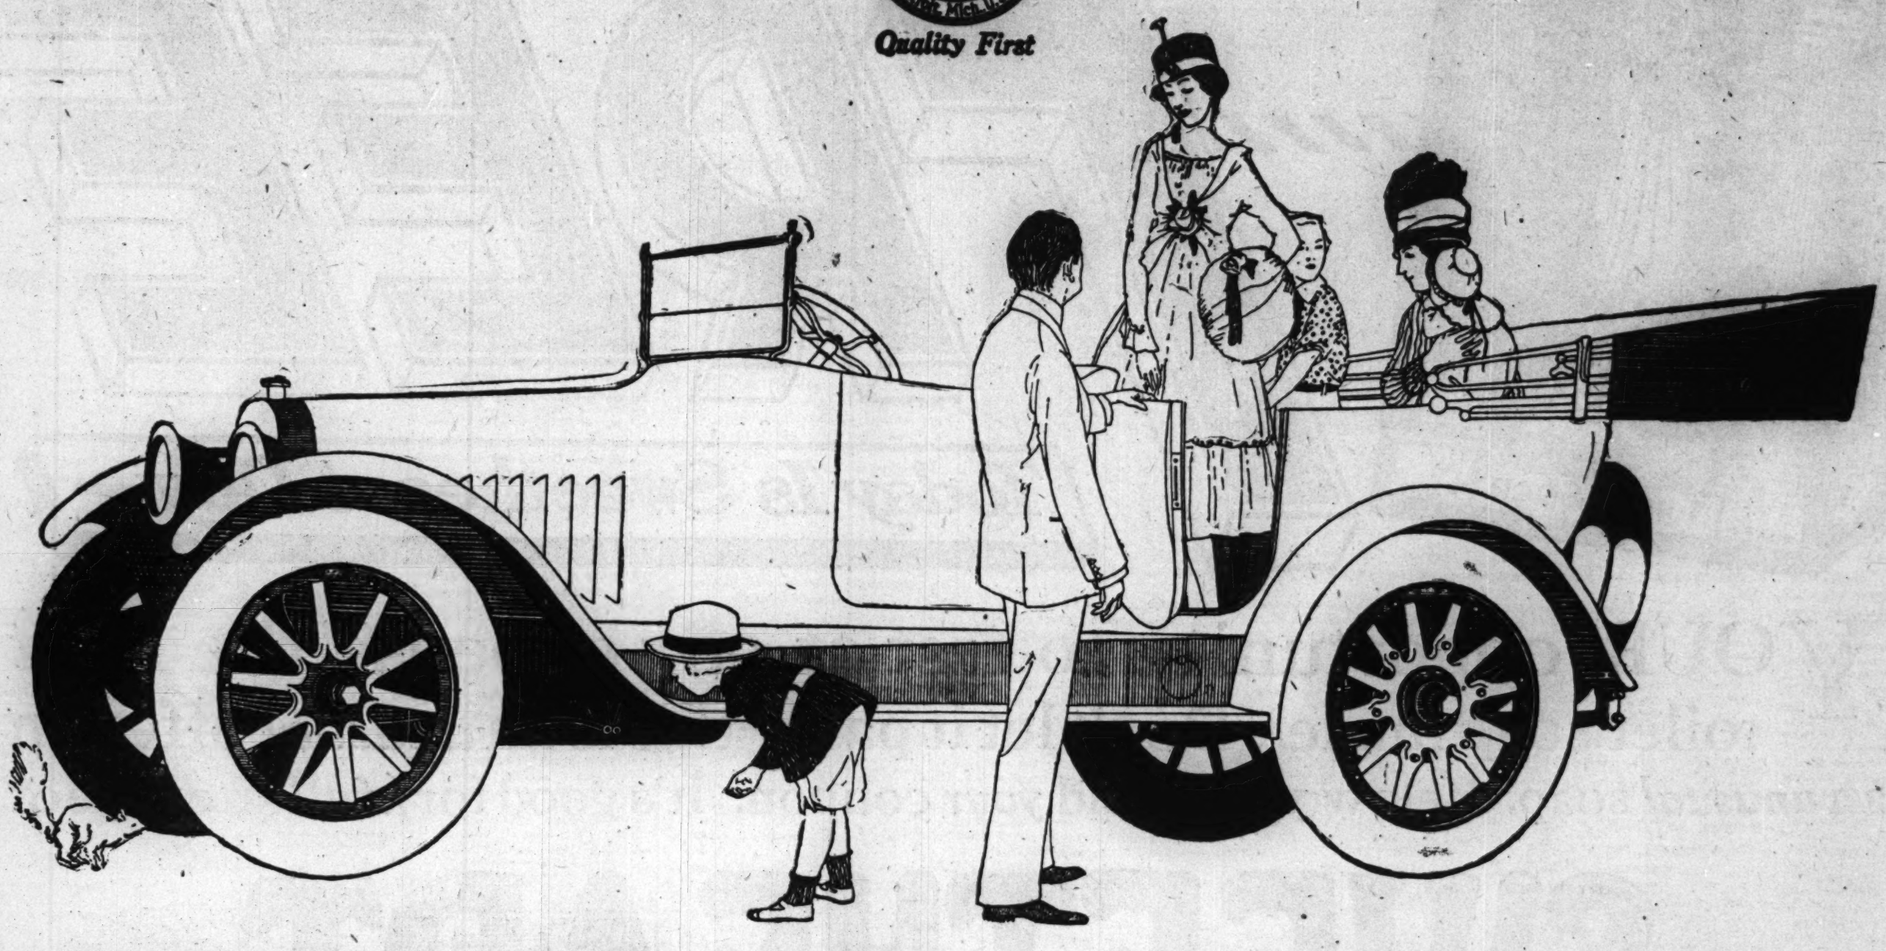
A Seven-Passenger Car—Price $1450 Detroit

CHALMERS MOTOR CO. DETROIT, MICH. U.S.A.

Quality First



$9,000,000 of these Six-40 Chalmers have been bought by persons who had intended paying $2,000 for a car

They took one look; were surprised a car of such size could be obtained for the money; drove around 10 miles in her—and bought.

They laid down the astonishingly small sum of $1450 plus the freight, and mentally noted a saving of $550.

For the men who are driving the Six-40 Chalmers today are the kind who have been thinking motor cars in terms of $2000.

They have had more surprises than the price, too. They have found the Six-40 Chalmers to possess more room than any seven-passenger car of the day under $2500.

Most persons are pretty particular about room. I do not know just how to express the ROOM in this car.

Dimensions in inches do not tell the story. I simply spell the word in capital letters. Then you find later I have understated the case.

Surprise No. 3 that will stir your emotions is the great big subject of color options.

Now in these days when most cars resemble hearses in their soberness, or the "back drop" in a new musical comedy in their color excitement, here comes something refreshing.

You can get a Six-40 Chalmers in any of these colors:

Oriford maroon or Valentine green with hoods to match.

Meteor blue with black hood.

Just think that over. And remember this is the only car under $2,000, so far as I have ever learned, that provides for you a color range like th

Colors are getting just a little more important every day. I find most men, and particularly most women, have their own ideas about color—just like the decorations in a library or a living room.

Now there's one more big item about the Six-40 Chalmers. It's too bad I can't set that down as Surprise No. 4.

Some secrets cannot be kept. Nearly everyone knows what a fine beast she is on the road. She certainly can perform.

They know that her real name is Six-40 Performance Chalmers.

She has a reputation on a hill like Caesar had with his armies.

She has a reputation for responsiveness that every traffic cop in America is well aware of.

She has, like a great baseball pitcher, "everything on the ball." She is good at low speeds, good at high speeds, good on the hill, good on the long march, good on the short haul.

She's a fine animal. As fine as any you'll ever run across in 10 parasangs.

I drive her myself. She's my preference. But the big thing, of course, is that men with clear minds and rare judgment have laid down $9,000,000 on her. If you are wise you'll never question success—a success like Six-40 Chalmers.

Ask me about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

WAITE GUILTY; ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR MURDERER

Convicted in Record Time of Slaying Father-in-Law; Jury Out an Hour and a Half.

HIS FATHER COLLAPSES.

New York, May 27.—Convicted of murder in the first degree for poisoning his father-in-law, John E. Peck, a millionaire drug manufacturer of Grand Rapids, Mich., Dr. Arthur Warren Waite is tonight in the Tombs prison, where he will remain until Justice Clarence J. Shearn sentences him on June 1 to death in the electric chair.

Walter R. Deuel, the young dentist's chief counsel, said tonight the verdict of guilty was a proper one. He declared all that could be done for the defendant had been done in the trial which ended today.

One of Mr. Deuel's assistants said, nevertheless, that preparations were being made to take an appeal at once. District Attorney Swann said tonight that if an appeal were taken, his office would be ready in ten days to argue the case in the higher courts.

Resigned to His Fate.

Waite declined to make any statement from his cell, but said he might issue "some impression" later. That he was inclined to accept the verdict as final and was resigned to his fate seemed to be indicated by his remark, "This is a great relief," as he was led from the courtroom.

The dentist, who admitted not only the murder of Mr. Peck, but also that of Mrs. Hannah Peck, his mother-in-law, and who admitted that he attempted to kill his wife's aunt, Miss Katherine Peck, apparently had no doubt that the jury would convict him. As the jury retired he turned to his brother, Frank, and said:

"The jury should not be out five minutes. It was a long drawn out proceeding."

Half an hour later he remarked, "I don't understand this."

"You should not talk that way," Frank said. "They may be finding you not guilty."

"O yes, they will find me guilty," insisted Dr. Waite.

Only Six Days of Trial.

The trial lasted six days, which was almost a record for brevity for an important murder trial here in recent years. As compared with Waite's trial, the first trial of Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal lasted sixteen days, while Harry K. Thaw's first trial occupied forty-two days.

Leaving the courtroom at 1:20 p. m., the jury was out only one hour and twenty-five minutes. After returning the verdict, the foreman declared the jurors had made a compact not to reveal the nature of their deliberations.

The young dentist preserved his nonchalant demeanor, not only while facing the jury to learn his fate, but after he was led back to the Tombs prison.

Throughout the trial he seemed unmoved by any human feeling as he recited the details of his deliberate attempts to kill Mr. Peck with the bacilli of various diseases, of his final resort to poison, of his murder of Mrs. Peck by administering disease germs, and his attempt to kill his wife's aunt by placing ground glass and germs in her food.

Waite Displays No Emotion.

Apparently unmoved, he confronted the jury and answered the jury without displaying other emotion than relief that the ordeal was over.

When he had given his pedigree to the clerk of the court and had been taken to the Tombs, he was allowed to exercise. He marched up and down a corridor whistling "La Paloma."

Warren W. Waite of Grand Rapids, the dentist's father, and Frank and Clyde Waite, his brothers, were in the courtroom when the verdict was returned. Frank Waite led his father from the room without having spoken to the convicted man.

Clara Peck Waite, the dentist's wife, whom he admitted he might have killed had she inherited her father's fortune, heard the verdict in one of the rooms adjoining the courtroom.

"God's will be done," was her only comment.

Watched Trial Every Day.

Percy Peck, son of the murdered man, heard the verdict without giving evidence of any emotion. It was reported tonight that Peck had said to Assistant District Attorney George N. Brothers, the prosecutor, when the trial began:

"I realize the importance of keeping any apparent desire for vengeance on my part out of this case, but I want to ask you just this one favor: give me a seat in the courtroom from the beginning of the trial to the end where I can keep my eye on that man, and so, moment by moment, watch the hope fading from his face."

Few persons in the courtroom, if any, doubted that the verdict would be guilty after Dr. Waite went on the witness stand and told with every appearance of calm indifference the details of his crimes, declaring his main motive for them was to obtain money.

The opinion of his alienists that he was a "moral imbecile" was swept aside by the assertions of the state's alienists that he was sane and knew the nature and consequences of his crimes, and by the charge of Justice Shearn that "moral imbecility" had no place in the law.

Disappointed at Dowry.

Waite married Clara Peck in Grand Rapids last September. He expected $50,000 in a lump sum from his father-in-law as a wedding present, but received instead $300 a month.

The dentist and his wife took an apartment in Riverside drive, this city. Waite received a gift of $3,000 from Miss Katherine Peck and induced her to let him invest $40,000 of her fortune.

Mrs. Hannah E. Peck, his mother-in-law, came here to visit the Waites on Jan. 10 last. Waite placed disease germs in her food. She died Jan. 30 and her body was taken to Grand Rapids, where it was cremated.

John G. Peck came to visit the Waites after his wife died and Waite vainly sprayed his throat and impregnated his food with disease bacilli, finally resorting to poison, with the result that Mr. Peck died March 12 last.

Student and Co-Ed Voted "the Most Devoted Couple" at Northwestern Soon Are to Wed.

Jeanette Gemmill

At the annual voting contest among the students of Northwestern university Miss Jeanette Gemmill, daughter of Municipal Judge William N. Gemmill of Chicago, and Bligh Grasett, son of C. D. Grasett of Glencoe, were elected "the most devoted couple on the campus."

Yesterday, at a cozy corner given by the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Miss Gemmill displayed a diamond ring and announced to her sorority sisters she is soon to become Mrs. Grasett, date not yet set.

The engagement followed a three year campus romance. Both will graduate in June. Miss Gemmill from the school of liberal arts and young Grasett from the school of engineering. Grasett has played left tackle on the football team for the last three years. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

County Judges Start Their Own Marriage Mill

Expect to Weaken Grip of Township Justices on Gullible Couples.

FEES GO TO COUNTY

A legalized "marriage mill" has been established by the Circuit and Superior court judges in room 705 county building. Judge Jesse A. Baldwin has been named by his associates as the first "marrying judge." Yesterday he married fourteen couples.

The brides are given their choice of two certificates, one decorated with cupids and roses at 25 cents each, and one less decorative for 20 cents each.

County Gets Fees.

Judge Baldwin turned yesterday's fees, $63, over to the sheriff, who will keep a special marriage fee account on his books and turn the money over to the county treasurer. Judge Baldwin's charges will not exceed $5.

He will sit as the "marrying judge" until July 15.

Clifford W. Backof, 109 North Parkside avenue, and Frances E. Watling, 218 North Parkside avenue, were among the first who were married. Mr. Backof said he had married Miss Watling a year ago, but that that marriage was annulled last month because the young lady was not then of age. This time, he said, there isn't going to be any separation.

In Days of Justice Shops.

The old "marriage mills" flourished in the days when justices of the peace vied with one another for the marriage fees.

The practice of the justices of the peace did not abate, however, with the establishment of the Municipal court. Some justices from outside townships had offices in Chicago and "runners" in the county clerk's and sheriff's offices.

COOLING SHOWERS HALT MERCURY'S SWIFT CLIMB.

Year's Record Breaking Heat Gives Way Before Comfortable Breezes —One More Death Reported.

Cool showers yesterday beat the insurgent mercury back to the comfort levels and swept the lately blooming straw hats from the street. It will continue cooler today, with showers, according to the weather bureau forecast.

A difference of fifteen degrees was the average between temperatures of yesterday and the day before, which was the hottest of the year in Chicago. The thermometer at 4 o'clock yesterday stood at 65.

The heat Friday night claimed another victim in the death of Ignatz Mitlevic of 1841 Allport street, a laborer, 58 years old. Mitlevic complained of the oppressive heat, was taken suddenly ill, and died before a physician arrived.

WARM WELCOME PROMISED.

"There'll Be Trouble if It's So," Mother of Crown Point Eloper Vows.

When Harry Geise left the Geise home in Oak Park yesterday he told his mother and father he was going to a matinee in Chicago with Miss Rose Muser of Austin, a music teacher. When he came back in the evening he gave vivid descriptions of the performance witnessed.

Incidentally there appeared on the records of Crown Point yesterday the fact that a marriage license had been issued to Harry Geise, 22, insurance agent, Oak Park, and Rose Muser, 21, music. Miss Muser—beg pardon, Mrs. Harry Geise—was located last night at the home of her mother, 4828 West Van Buren street, Austin. The mother finally admitted the marriage.

"There'll be trouble if it's so," said Mrs. Charles F. Geise, Harry's mother. "We don't approve. Harry is only 19. The girl is much older."

Harry was playing at a dance at the Suburban clubhouse in Oak Park. His father is an insurance man with offices in the Insurance Exchange building. Rose's father is Dr. Louis J. Muser, an Oak Park dentist.

LOOP FIRMS OPEN FIGHT ON CHICAGO SHOPLIFTER RING

Several Women Held, Others Sought for Thefts of Thousands in Goods.

MANY GIRL CLERKS DUPES.

A "shoplifters' trust," composed of professional thieves operating in conjunction with saleswomen, shop girls, and other accomplices working in large downtown stores, is believed to have been broken up by the activities of private detectives employed by the State street stores.

Twenty-four names are in the possession of the police and warrants were being served on as many as could be found last night. The band maintained a clearing house in a south side apartment building, where between $5,000 and $7,000 worth of loot was recovered.

It is believed that the identities of all the men higher up in the conspiracy have not yet been learned.

Four Women Arraigned.

Four women involved were arraigned before Municipal Judge La Buy yesterday, but their cases were continued until June 7. It is said one of them has turned state's evidence. They are:

Rose Schlessinger of 1221 North Western avenue.

Marie Moss of 4350 South State street.

Belle Stewart of 847 North State street.

Maud Merchant, no address given.

Three more women and the man arrested are:

Albert Schlessinger, husband of Rose Schlessinger, who was arraigned in court.

Cecile Johnson of 5020 Prairie avenue.

May Mason, Lexington hotel.

Myra Wort of 204 West Fifty-ninth street.

Call Schlessinger Leader.

Schlessinger, who the police say is one of the heads of the gang, was employed as a floor walker in Marshall Field's. He was booked at the detective bureau on charges of conspiracy and larceny. The women, who were taken to the South Clark street annex, were booked on charges of larceny.

The police are searching for a man known as the "English Jew," who is also said to be one of the heads of the gang.

House Detective Gets Clew.

A clew to the wholesale robberies and the identities of some of the gang were obtained by John G. Evans, house detective for Charles A. Stevens & Brothers. By working with detectives employed at the Hub, Marshall Field & Co. and other large stores he was unable to uncover enough evidence to cause the arrest of a score of the alleged thieves. Some of them have made confessions and merely are being held under surveillance.

According to a statement issued by the management of Stevens, the cleanup is the most sensational in shoplifting records. The spring rush began at that store the latter part of March, and between 300 and 400 extra employés were taken on. The assistant superintendents did not have time to investigate every case thoroughly and it was then that several accomplices of the gang obtained employment.

Stores Get Warning.

The management was warned, however, by "outside evening workers" employed to make confidential reports on employés that certain clerks would bear further investigation, and in this way some members of the "trust" were ferreted out.

The shoplifters worked not only through accomplices in the stores but through shopgirls in 10 cent stores whom they induced to aid them through presents of candy and invitations to luncheon.

In one case an inspector employed in a shoe department of one of the stores became acquainted with a 16 year old girl working in a 5 and 10 cent store and induced her to come to his department and pick out a pair of shoes. He told her to take the shoes to the exchange desk and represent herself as a woman from Joliet who had made the purchase a few days before. She received a refund of $10. He met her that night, took the money from her, gave her $2, and kept the balance.

Involves Young Mother.

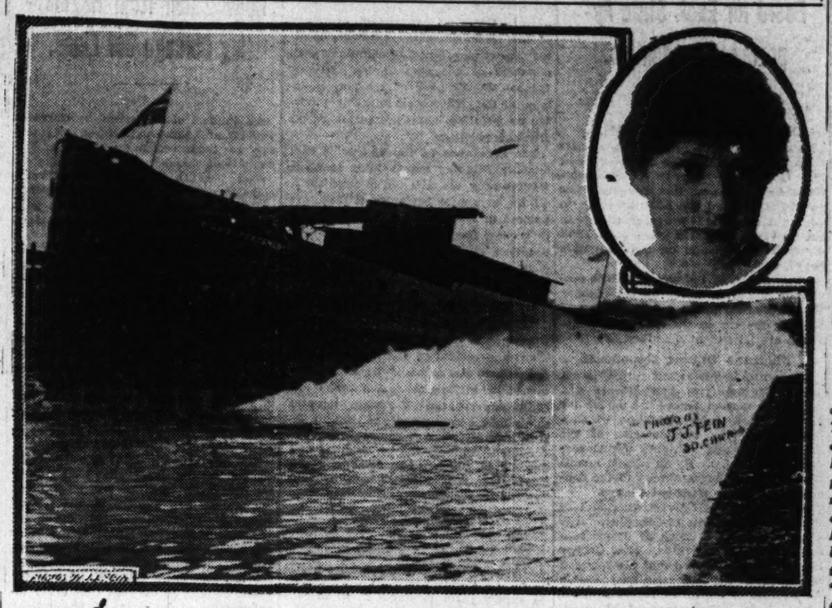
In another instance a shoplifter became acquainted with a saleswoman who is the mother of a 6 months old baby. She earns $12 a week. He took her out to lunch and introduced her to other women members of the band. She believed she was joining a sorority. He offered to place $100 to her credit in a bank if she would do him a favor. She agreed. In a few days she began receiving "dividends" of $2 and $5 from the "sorority."

She did not know what the "favor" was until the man brought her some merchandise one day, told her to wrap it up without making out a sales check, and give it to a customer. It was too late for her to withdraw then, and the "trust" kept its hold on her.

Dresses stolen from one store could be exchanged for other articles "lifted" in other stores at the south side clearing house through which the loot also was disposed of to fences.

SHIPBUILDING REVIVAL

Launching of Sigrid Fostenos in South Chicago Witnessed by 10,000.



The revival of the shipbuilding industry in South Chicago, once second only to the steel industry, was heralded yesterday by the launching of the Sigrid Fostenos in the Calumet river.

Ten thousand persons saw Miss Florence Krabbe break a bottle of champagne on the prow as the last blocks were knocked from under the boat and the vessel, 261 feet over all, slid down into the water. Many spectators standing on the docks nearby were drenched by the large wave which dashed up as it struck the water.

The Sigrid Fostenos is the first of ten ships to be built for both lake and ocean service for the Norwegian Steamship company by the Chicago Shipbuilding company. The first trip, expected to begin in six weeks, will be by way of the great lakes and the Welland canal to Norway.

SUICIDE NOTE CUT ON PURSE

No Ready Identification Marks on Body Found in Riverside.

A well dressed man, who had evidently removed from his clothing all papers or marks by which he could be readily identified, walked down the west bank of the Desplaines river yesterday to end his life. He selected a spot several hundred yards from Thirty-first street, Riverside, to hide his body.

Then the impulse to leave a note, always strong in those who take lonely departure from earth, seized him, when all his preparations were complete. He ingeniously employed his penknife and the sides of an empty pocketbook for materials.

On one side of the pocketbook he scratched with the knife:

"It is my wish that my body be cremated. (over)"

The reverse side read:

"or used for the benefit of medical science. (inside.)"

Under the flap of the pocketbook the penknife had traced:

"May I be forgiven."

There was no signature.

The body was found yesterday afternoon by a resident of Riverside. A shot from a new revolver which lay near had traversed the brain from temple to temple.

From the condition of the body the police of Riverside concluded life had been extinct less than an hour when the discovery was made. Late at night the suicide was still unidentified. The body was removed to Clarence Neuschaefer's undertaking rooms in Riverside.

The suicide wore a black hat purchased from the National Hat store of Chicago, a brown suit, black lace shoes sold by O'Connor & Goldberg, a signet ring with a monogram which the police say is either E. M. or M. C. The laundry mark inside his collar was "M. C. 1111." The man was between 25 and 30 years of age.

Apparently the revolver had been purchased for the act, as the box in which it was packed was found beside it. It was an Iver & Johnson revolver. No 46460. The number on the box was 324473. A Chicago transfer issued Friday was found in the man's vest pocket.

PUBLICITY MAN IS INJURED.

Victor Eubank and Frank S. Johns Hurt When Auto Skids and Hits Tree.

Victor Eubank, 829 Lafayette parkway, publicity manager for the Essanay Film company, and Frank G. Johns, 521 Belmont avenue, narrowly escaped severe injuries yesterday morning when an automobile in which they were riding skidded, struck a tree, and then overturned in Stockton drive, near Fullerton avenue. The men were hurt, but not severely, according to the attendants at Alexian Brothers' hospital.

FOR TYPHOIDLESS CHICAGO.

No cases of typhoid fever have been reported to the city health department in two days. "It means," said Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health, "that if we could keep other cities from sending their typhoid cases into our hospitals we could bring about a typhoidless Chicago."

PASTOR AND HIS SECRETARY HELD ON CHARGES OF FRAUD.

Arrested in New York After Indictments Are Brought Against Them in Los Angeles.

New York, May 27.—The Rev. Francis Schlatter, pastor of the "Baptist Church, Inc.," of Los Angeles, and his secretary, Dr. Gus Algard, were arrested here this afternoon by postal inspectors on charges of using the mails to defraud. The men were indicted in Los Angeles yesterday. They were arraigned before United States Commissioner Houghton and held for further hearing on June 7.

1 PROBATIONER GOES WRONG

But 489 Who Got Jobs Since Jan. 1 Are Making Good, Officer Says.

Of 490 probationers who have obtained employment since the first of the present year through the efforts of John A. Melum, assistant chief probation officer, only one has strayed from the path of righteousness, Mr. Melum announced yesterday.

"That one is a girl who will be arraigned in court tomorrow," he said. "She stole a skirt from another girl who worked in the same place. She probably will be sent to the bridewell.

"There is a joke, though, in the affair, and it is this: the girl paid 60 cents to have the skirt cleaned and then didn't get a chance to wear it."

MRS. BOYCE TO GET DIVORCE.

Ben S. Boyce, Son of Publisher, Does Not Contest Wife's Suit.

Judge Matchett, sitting in the Superior court yesterday, indicated that he would grant Mrs. Miriam Boyce a decree of divorce, after hearing the testimony in her suit against Ben S. Boyce, son of W. D. Boyce, president of W. D. Boyce company, publishers. She charged cruelty and drunkenness in her bill. Mr. Boyce is now in Indianapolis. He did not contest the suit.

DR. SHURTZ DENIED DECREE.

Champaign, Ill., May 27.—[Special.]—Dr. S. W. Shurtz today was refused a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Lulu Tanner Shurtz, daughter of the late Gov. Tanner. He alleged desertion, but Mrs. Shurtz contested, declaring she had not refused to live with him.

MORE GLIMPSES OF HER GIRLHOOD BY MISS KEITH

In a Maid's "Days of Real Sport" Many Reflections Are Born.

HER FATHER JORDAN STONES.

By courtesy of Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, "The Tribune" is enabled to present more excerpts from the autobiography of Miss Katherine Keith, which appears in the June number of that magazine. Miss Keith, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Keith of 936 Lake Shore drive, will be Chicago's first June bride. In the first section of her story, headed "Childhood," Miss Keith pictures the fairy dreams and experiences of early girlhood.

I used to think that if I tiptoed to the door of father's study and jumped in suddenly I might catch the bronze mask of Voltaire with his eyes open. I tried many times, but always I looked up again on the same smooth, gleaming surfaces of downcast lids. It hung on a dirty, red push panel over the organ. On the mantel stood a marble bust of Voltaire and an etched portrait hung over the door. His works and those of others about him almost filled one of the bookcases which lined the room, reaching from floor to ceiling. I had my first lessons in French, learning to pronounce their names.

"La Bible enfin expliquée." I would say, carefully pronouncing each syllable as it was spelled. Then father would laugh and make me say the words again as he told me.

Miss Ellen.

One afternoon Miss Ellen came up to the study to talk to father. I sat on my little stool beside them, cutting out paper dolls. Miss Ellen was tired and gray. She lived across the river where the streets were always muddy and lined on either side with garbage cans. The little children playing "seek and find" used to crouch down in the bottom of them to hide. She and father were talking about a new kindergarten. Suddenly she bent down and laid her hand on my shoulder. Her voice sounded like crying, yet she laughed, "O, honey," she said, "when you grow up, if you go into settlement work, don't get lean and eager as I am."

The words made me wonder, but the tones were like warm, soft arms which held me close.

Father got up and walked to the window. "I can understand your studying and reading, Ellen, but why in the name of reason must you go over and live in that place" He spoke quickly and his eyes were bright as he waved his arm about the book lined room. "Isn't your love for all of these big enough to fill your life?"

Miss Ellen closed her eyes slowly, and smiled, and shook her head. Before she went away that afternoon she asked father to play. We sat together on the green plush shofa, listening, and she held my hand. Father had on his felt slippers and an old corduroy smoking jacket. It was frayed at the cuffs and one pocket was torn. Mother had given it to him years before.

While he played he swayed back and forth. He never watched the keys, but fixed his eyes, which were wide and blue, on the mask of Voltaire above the organ. He played continuously, running one theme into another. Sometimes it was his own music, and he would hesitate for a moment, searching for the proper harmony, and striking the notes softly and tentatively. Then, when the right one was found, he would smile gently and nod his head. "So," he would whisper to himself. Sometimes, if the strain pleased him particularly, he repeated it several times insistently.

Once on Fräulein's day out Jack and I

"CLOSE-UPS" OF V. ASTOR AND C. VANDERBILT.

Two of the world's richest men are vigorously "preparing." Vincent Astor has taken up aviation and will serve his country in the air if need be. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who for years has been lieutenant colonel of the national guard of New York, is with the rest, training for active service. "Close up," face to face—in action—you meet these men.

A THREE-INCH FINISH.

Gasping, the perspiration dripping from their taxed bodies, Willie Kyronen and Hannes Kolehmainen, the great Finn runners, dashed under the wire with Kyronen the winner by three inches in the running race of 12¾ miles at New York. In this race 1,325 contestants took part. The most remarkable sporting film on record.

BIGGEST LAKE IN THE WORLD.

That is, the biggest artificial lake in the world, has just been created by the completion of the Elephant Butte dam at Elephant Butte, N. M. The work of twelve years and a fortune of $10,000,000 were necessary to perfect in entirety this mammoth undertaking.

NOT AN AFRICAN WAR CANOE—

though it does bear a decided resemblance. Just a bunch of Lasell seminary girls who are in strenuous spring practice—which, by the way, brings them a lot of health and enjoyment—for the annual canoe races. Win or lose the races, there's no doubt about the beauty and snappiness of the picture.

took 5 cents out of mother's purse. There were 5 more in his pocket. We went around the corner to the drug store for a soda. It was the first time we had ever had one. When the man asked us what flavor we wanted I looked anxiously at Jack, who kicked his toe against the counter and took the other nickel from his pocket. Then he smiled suddenly, holding it out to the man. "We'll take the best you've got," he said. The man laughed, and gave us chocolate, with two big spoonfuls of ice cream.

That night I told Margaret. The following afternoon I was going to a birthday party. She said I must stay home in bed. For a long time I begged her to forgive me, but she only shook her head. Then I became very angry and stamped my foot. "You're nothing but a pretend," I said to her. "Go to the party," she answered quietly, "but I shall leave you and never come back."

The next day I watched Fraulein lay out my lace dress and pink sash. Then she came over and started to unfasten the rags in my hair. I turned away abruptly. "I'm not going."

"H'm," she replied, "take care, or I'll not curl your hair, and you will really have to stay at home."

"I'm going to, anyway," I said.

Fraulein stared at me. "Well, where do you expect to go?" she scoffed.

"To bed," I answered shortly.

When at last she had dressed me in my nightgown, with my hair braided, and had gone away muttering to herself, I crawled under the covers and hid my tears in the pillow. "There was a Punch and Judy show, and a grab bag, and ——"

Then Margaret came to sit beside me. I buried my head under the sheet, but at last I turned over and took her hand, and, holding it, fell asleep.

The Jordan Stones.

In a cabinet near father's organ stood a small quat bottle of stones. A missionary had brought them from the Jordan. Once, when father was away, I took one out. It was clear and purple, with a ismooth surface, across which straggled a faint blue vein. I held it in the palm of my hand, while shivers of awe ran up and down my back. Perhaps Jesus had trod upon it as he waded out into the river! It would have wonderful powers to heal sickness and work miracles, like the bones or pieces of wood we read about in books.

When I went upstairs I took the stone with me. All afternoon I sewed tiny bags to carry it, on a chain around my neck. I made a pink satin one from a bit of ribbon that mother had given me; another of white leather from an old kid glove, and a third of chamois, with blue cross stitching, for rainy days. While I sewed I decided that I must have precious ointment or lotion in which to wash it every evening. I could think of nothing worthy until I pricked my finger and a tiny spot of blood appeared. Then I sprang up, and ran down stairs to ask the cook for a knife. I had had a sign from heaven.

When I came up again I closed the door carefully. Then I shut my eyes and pressed the blade down on my finger. It was very dull. I tried once more, sawing slowly back and forth. My knees trembled, and there was a little beaded rim of perspiration above my upper lip. At last the knife went through the skin. A drop of blood spurted out and trickled along my finger, to drip from its tip into the clean, empty medicine bottle which I had ready. I squeezed the cut until the whole glass bottom was covered with blood. Then I filled the bottle half full of water.

Every evening I washed my stone in the pale brown lotion. At school we thought of it as something very wonderful. When the girls took it from the little pink bag they always held it fearfully in the center of their palms. I let Eleanor, my best friend, wear it during spelling class, but I kept it for geography and Latin.

Knights Never Cry.

One afternoon we were having a tournament in the casino. Jack's sword slipped and struck Billy Fargo on the head. Billy sat in the middle of the ballroom floor, with his face turned away from us. There was a splash of blood on his sleeve. We did not dare speak to him or touch him, for fear that he would cry. Knights never cried.

Presently somebody looked in at the casino door. We forgot all about Billy and stared at the newcomer. It was the great actor from New York, who had ridden down to spend the day with my uncle. He still wore khaki riding breeches and an English army coat. His hair was heavy and black and he had dark gray eyes. There was a twinkle in them just now and his lips wore a little twisted smile as he came over to Billy. We parted silently to each side, still staring. Then he bent down, gathered Billy into his arms, to fling him over his shoulder like a mealbag and strode out of the door.

From the window we watched him go down the terrace to the bay and aboard my uncle's sailboat. Faintly there reached us from across the gardens the jerky speaking of the pulley as he and Billy lifted the mainsail.

In the Land of Pretend.

When we came back to the city I told Jack about the boss. He said he wanted to work for him, too. We pretended that Grandmother Crosby's stable was the barn and outbuildings of the ranch. There was a trap door in the floor which led to the potato cellar. We fastened a rope to an iron ring above and lowered it into the hole. Then, through the long fall afternoons, we climbed up and down, up and down, bearing imaginary bags on our shoulders. We were loading the wagons to go into Maverick with the season's sugar beet crop. When finally the cellar was emptied we ran back and forth in the yard, lashing the air with long black whips. Here was the corral. We were breaking in Jim's ponies.

The shack had only one room. There was a big fireplace at the end, with shelves on either side. On the floor were bear and deer skins. In the center stood a crooked table. A double bed with log posts was in the corner against the wall. It was covered with red woolen blankets and a buffalo skin. Jim and I slept here. When the nights were very cold I used to double the comforter and put it all on one side of the bed. I took my school coat from the closet and laid it over myself. It made Fräulein very angry when she came in next morning. She told me that they locked crazy people in iron cells.

One night there was a blizzard. Jim did not come home. After Fräulein had gone out, I put a candle stub in the window. The clock cuckooed 11 and then 12. Still he had not come. At last I heard his horse in the snow outside. He was very cold. All night he tossed back and forth muttering. I sat in an armchair beside the bed. When Fräulein came at 7 to close the windows, I had fallen asleep. She jerked me by the shoulders and shook me. I crawled into bed without speaking to her, and put my arms around Jim. He was much better, and said he would not die. Then I laughed. "He's all right now," I told Fräulein. "I don't care what you do to me."

She turned away. "Disgusting, indecent child!" she said.

But I was very happy then, and the words held no wonder.

CLUB OLD GUARD PUT TO ROUT BY ILLINOIS WOMEN

Representation on Federation Board for Each State Approved by Convention.

BY ANNIE HINRICHSEN.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—Illinois threw the administration steam roller of the General Federation of Women's Clubs into the ditch this morning. The second attempt of the Illinois women to secure a vote on the proposed change in the by-laws, by which every state shall direct representation on the executive board, succeeded.

Two-thirds of the women in the convention voted in favor of the change. Under the new by-laws every state will have a director on the executive board. There are now eight directors.

Illinoisans Outwit Opponents.

The anti-administration forces swept away the nullifying amendments and called the motion before the house for a vote. Mrs. John McMahon of Chicago moved the consideration of the proposed change. Twenty women seconded her motion. By an almost unanimous vote the house agreed to the consideration of the proposed change.

Mrs. William S. Chivvis, president of the state federation of Missouri, made a brief speech in favor of direct representation for all states. Mrs. George Bass of Chicago stated that the forward movement of the federation depended on the success of the direct representation.

Mrs. J. W. Washburne of Missouri, one of the administration supporters, offered an amendment that each state be required to meet the additional expense of representation. After some argument the president then requested that all discussion be postponed until after the morning program.

Quash Amendments; Force Vote.

When the question again was called up Mrs. George W. Plummer of Chicago presented another amendment by which the executive board should be required to apportion the expense among the states. She was cheered when she announced that Illinois not only would pay its share but would also pay the share of other states which were unable to meet this expense.

The Illinois women called for a vote on Mrs. Plummer's amendment, and then, before it could be taken, Mrs. George Bass moved the withdrawal of all amendments and the vote on the question. But despite the decisive affirmative vote there are difficulties ahead.

Interest in the presidential election, to be held May 31, was enhanced tonight by announcement of the withdrawal of the three "dark horses," Mrs. John D. Sherman of Chicago, Mrs. Georgie Bacon of Worcester, and Mrs. B. W. Corkran Jr. of Baltimore. The contest now is definitely between Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of Los Angeles and Mrs. Samuel B. Sneath of Tiffin, O.

CHARGE MISUSE OF MAIL FRANK

Senator Fletcher Accused of Giving Privilege to Montgomery Ward & Co.

RETAILERS COMPLAIN.

M. L. Corey of Argos, Ind., secretary of the National Retail Hardware Dealers' association, has filed complaint with members of congress against Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, chairman of the joint congressional committee on printing, charging misuse of his franking privilege.

The substance of the charge is that Senator Fletcher supplied his frank to Montgomery Ward & Co. to send out to all its customers agricultural literature printed in senate document 240, relating to a plan for "direct dealing between producer and consumer through parcel post service employing mail order methods."

Furnished Mailing List.

"It is perfectly true these documents were sent to our customers," Charles H. Thorne, president of Montgomery Ward & Co., said last night. "We simply furnished our mailing list to Senator Fletcher at his request. We were actuated solely by a genuine desire to help the agricultural interests of the country. The document contains the proceedings of a hearing in Chicago arranged by David Lubin, who is president, I believe, of the International Agricultural association.

"Derived No Benefit."

"At any rate, we do not derive any benefit out of the distribution of the document, except that we were called to testify at the hearing. The general purpose of the hearing was to work out a scheme to supply farm products direct to consumers.

"Mr. Corey's complaint is obviously inspired by the animosity of small retail merchants against the mail order houses. They believe they have a divine right to all the business."

Mr. Corey said over long distance telephone that his organization has not taken any official action on the subject.

HEALEY AND LOEB WAR ON VICE NEAR SCHOOLS.

Expressions of confidence in each other and declarations that evil conditions about the schoolhouses are being eliminated were made by both Chief Healey and President Jacob M. Loeb.

The board of education's morals survey report, which is said to show the existence of immoral resorts, gambling machines, and other nuisances in the neighborhood of schools, has been in the chief's hands for several weeks and it was on this report that the conference was held.

"We are both working together and the situation is being cleared up," the chief said. "I will hold another conference with Mr. Loeb and W. L. Bodine next Tuesday morning."

"I believe Chief Healey has, is, and will coöperate with the board of education to clean up conditions about schoolhouses," said Mr. Loeb.

CITY WINS BIG COURT VICTORY ON HOME RULE

Judge Taylor Bars Utilities Commission from Regulating Chicago Car Lines.

An opinion, characterized by Corporation Counsel Ettelson as the greatest victory for home rule in the history of Chicago, was handed down yesterday by Judge Thomas Taylor in the Circuit court invalidating the right of the public utilities commission to issue orders with regard to the service and equipment of the street railways.

It is expected that a permanent injunction will be granted in favor of the city restraining the commission from enforcing its order of Sept. 29 last, which provided for the turning back of service outside the loop, extra cars and trailers during rush hours, and for additional car lines. The order was passed at the instance of the Cook county real estate board, and several months were occupied in the examination of hundreds of witnesses. The traction companies were given sixty days in which to comply.

City Brought Injunction.

The city brought suit for an injunction restraining the commission from enforcing the order and the companies from complying, and the companies, siding with the city, filed a cross bill to prevent the commission from putting the order into effect. Judge Taylor's decision overruled a demurrer of the commission to the bill and cross bill.

The opinion states that that order invades some of the rights of the company and the city and consequently is in violation of their constitutional rights.

"It must be borne in mind," the opinion reads, "that the commission has no jurisdiction over the streets of the city of Chicago; that it has no jurisdiction over the ever changing traffic conditions; that it has no jurisdiction over foot passengers and vehicular transportation which constitutes the major part of the use of the streets of Chicago.

"The street railway situation in Chicago is unique. The companies have had a long and checkered career. They have been affected by the constitution of the state, by many acts of the legislature, by ordinances of the city council, and decrees and judgments of the court, until now, under a settlement ordinance they have constituted a coherent system of nearly one thousand miles of street railways, paying into the city treasury 55 per cent of their net earnings."

This settlement ordinance was agreed upon in 1907 and again in 1913, and Judge Taylor held in his opinion that the commission's order was in violation of both these settlement ordinances.

Avoids Status of Commission.

With reference to the city's claim as to the illegality of the formation of the public utilities commission, Judge Taylor said:

"In the course of argument a number of questions have been raised as to the constitutionality of the act creating the public utilities commission. All of these questions, advisedly, are here left unanswered. The legislature of the state of Illinois has seen fit to pass the act which provides for the regulation of public utilities and that act is presumed to be constitutional until it is proven beyond a reasonable doubt to be otherwise."

Next Friday Judge Taylor is to pass on the form of an order which will be drawn up in the meantime by counsel. It is expected that this order will call for a permanent injunction against the utilities commission.

Bars Two Regulating Bodies.

Chester E. Cleveland, first assistant corporation counsel, who has been handling the case for the city, said:

"The judge holds that it is practically impossible to have two bodies regulating Chicago street traffic. The crux of the judge's opinion is that under the constitution the city is given explicit power to make the contract ordinances with the street car company.

"This decision, if affirmed by the Supreme court, means that Chicago will have home rule under local self-government with respect to the street railways in its streets.

"I would not want to say that the general utilities law could be knocked out, but there are other points from which the law could be attacked with hope of success."

Mr. Cleveland was assisted by Ralph G. Crandall in behalf of the city. Horace Kent Tenney and Harry P. Weber represented the street railway companies. Everett Jennings, William B. Scholfield, and William D. Kerr acted for the public utilities commission.

CLERK AT SANITARIUM KNOWS 2 POLITICAL JOBS.

James F. Phillips, chief clerk of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, testified before the civil service commission yesterday he knew of only two cases where spoils politics interfered with the efficiency of the sanitarium administration.

"One case was the appointment of a Mr. Heringer, who was made custodian on recommendation of Dr. John Dill Robertson," the witness said. "The other case was that of Paul Kucharski, who succeeded Milton R. Minkler. Kucharski was given Minkler's position and was later let out when he became candidate for ward committeeman against one of the administration candidates.

"Who was elected?" asked Attorney Howard O. Sprogle, counsel for the commission.

"Neither one; another candidate was elected," the witness replied.

PROJECT SURVEY OF SUBNORMAL WITHIN STATE

Rockefeller Foundation Backs Inquiry by Illinois Society of Mental Hygiene.

A survey of Illinois on the question of subnormality is to begin in a few days, according to plans of the Illinois Society of Mental Hygiene. It is to be one of the most complete and thorough surveys of the kind ever taken, and the question of expense is not to enter into it.

Chicago will be the center of the work and it is expected that a year will be spent gathering data on the question in Cook county. The investigators plan to spend six months in the rest of the state.

Get Best Man for Job.

Just what physician will have charge of the work has not been determined, as one, who was sought, found it impossible to take the post. Mrs. William S. Monroe, president of the society, said, however, that the organization is going to get "the best man in the country to do it."

"The study must be an exhaustive one, or it is not worth while," said Mrs. Monroe. "We don't know, even approximately, how much it will cost. The Rockefeller foundation has authorized the National Society of Mental Hygiene to undertake the work in a number of states, and in Illinois the work will be under the direction of the Illinois society.

Inspect All Institutions.

There will be an inspection of all the institutions for subnormal, of the work the schools are doing, of what is being done by other agencies, the cost to the state and the private expense, and a list of the feeble minded.

On the committee of the society which will have charge of the work are Mrs. Monroe, Miss Elnora Thompson, Dr. Sidney Kuh, Samuel Harper, and Dr. Sidney Wilgus of Rockford, Ill.

POSTAL OFFICER MAY BE OUSTED

Senate Committee Angered by Action of Blakeslee as Witness.

CLOSE TO FISTICUFFS.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 27.—[Special.]—Following a riotous session with Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakeslee, the senate committee on postoffices today decided to hold a meeting next week to decide whether or not to demand his expulsion from the service.

Mr. Blakeslee was summoned before the committee to explain the lobbying activities of postmasters throughout the country against the postoffice appropriation bill, as reported to the senate.

During the hearing Mr. Blakeslee and senators on the committee lost their tempers and at one point a personal encounter between the fourth assistant and Senator Sterling of South Dakota was averted only by the interference of other senators.

Come Near to Fisticuffs.

Senator Sterling, who arrived at the hearing rather late, listened to Blakeslee explain his position for a few moments. Then he asked:

"Did you take this action on your own initiative or on instructions from the postmaster general?"

Blakeslee turned on him and sat for a moment without replying. Then he said:

"Who are you and what right have you got to ask questions here?"

Senator Sterling jumped to his feet and said:

[illegible]

Blakeslee to Continue Fight.

"I'm a member of this committee and a senator of the United States, and I don't intend to be insulted by an impudent subordinate officer of one of the departments of this government."

Sterling started for Blakeslee and Blakeslee rose to meet the assault. Several senators jumped to their feet and prevented an exchange of blows.

Blakeslee says that he will continue his fight on the senate postoffice bill.

He gave a statement with the apparent purpose of proving that he spoke the truth when he said the bill was a "surrender to the railroads."

A Word From Kewanee

Heavy, black smoke crawling from your chimney makes a big crack in every dollar you spend for fuel. Smoke means waste. It indicates that the heating boiler you're using is not up-to-date and that it isn't burning all the gases. It means that you are losing at least 25 per cent of your fuel cost. It is a rank, unnecessary loss.

The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler is designed to prevent this very thing. It is designed to enable you to burn the very cheapest grades of coal without smoke. See where your saving comes in if you use this boiler. How long do you think it will take you to pay for the boiler at the rate of 25 per cent of saving? To keep your chimney from smoking today, you've got to burn high-grade coal with its consequent high-grade price.

But if you put the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler in your building, you can burn the cheapest grade of Illinois or Indiana mine-run and still keep a long ways within the smoke-ordinance. When you think of all you gain, you ought not to hesitate five minutes. It's like investing in government bonds. It's every bit as good and pays higher dividends.

CHANDLER SIX $1295

A REFINED MOTOR CAR

THE Chandler Six is built to serve discriminating families as a pleasure car. It will, if you ask it, go faster than ninety-nine out of any hundred car owners would ever want or dare to drive, but it is not a racing car. Its motor has power ample to take the car loaded anywhere that any automobile can go, but it is not a trick car. It is a beautifully constructed motor car with the finest and most attractive of the season's bodies.

Most flexible and easily handled, full of life and go, richly upholstered in genuine leather, economical in operation and free from any hint of experimentation or untried theory, the Chandler is deservedly the most popular medium priced car in the whole American market this year.

ORDER OF MARCH FOR MEMORIAL DAY ANNOUNCED

Veterans' Parade to Start at 3 P. M.—Governor and Mayor to Review Line.

The detailed order of march for Tuesday's impressive Memorial day parade was given out yesterday by C. S. Bentley, his chief marshal.

The line will start at 3 p. m. at Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue and will proceed down the boulevard to Lake street, where the various organizations will disband or return to their individual headquarters.

Maj. Maurice Woolman of the chief marshal's staff has been detailed to fire three guns, the last of which will be the signal for the start.

From a stand in Grant park, at the foot of Van Buren street, the parade will be reviewed by the chief marshal, Gov. Dunne, Mayor Thompson, Postmaster Daniel A. Campbell, and Capt. W. A. Moffett of the United States navy.

Mounted Police at Head.

A troop of mounted police will head the line, followed, as far as the reviewing stand, by Gov. Dunne, Mayor Thompson, Postmaster Campbell, and their staffs. Then will come a platoon of police on foot and the chief marshal and his aids.

The first division of the parade is that of the Grand Army veterans, headed by Thomas J. Coan as marshal. A subdivision will include veterans of the Spanish-American war and the Philippine insurrection under the command of Gen. James E. Stuart.

Apprentices of the U. S. naval training station under Capt. Moffett will form the second division, and the Illinois national guard, under Brig. Gen. D. Jack Foster, the third. The latter will include four regiments of infantry and contingents of cavalry, artillery, signal corps, engineers, and field hospital units.

Cadet Bodies in Line.

Independent military organizations such as the various cadet bodies and the boy scouts will come next with Maj. Daniel Hurley as marshal. A huge contingent of police, under Chief Healey, will follow, and then in order will come the National Association of Letter Carriers, uniform ranks of benevolent associations, the fire department division under Chief Thomas O'Connor, and a special division of the Boy Scouts of America under Col. James P. Fitch.

After reaching Randolph street in the parade column several of the national guard regiments will cross the viaduct to Grant park for a program of drills and military maneuvers. One of these demonstrations will be that of a field hospital, which will be set up and its methods explained by a detachment under the command of Maj. G. M. Blech.

Churches to Observe Day.

Plans have been made for a general observance of Memorial Sunday in Chicago churches today.

At the First Presbyterian church, Grand boulevard and Forty-first street, patriotic services will be held morning, afternoon, and evening. At 10:30 o'clock Lincoln post of the G. A. R. and the Woodlawn commandery drum corps will be present. At 3 o'clock a tablet will be unveiled to the memory of the Rev. Brainerd Kent. At night an international service will be held in which patriotic songs will be sung.

Memorial services will be held at 3 o'clock by the Epworth Bible class in the Western Avenue Methodist Episcopal church.

Pastor Urges Patriotism.

The Rev. William Henry Huber, pastor of the Grace Evangelical church, in announcing memorial services at 11 o'clock, said:

"In these days of calamity all about us our study of patriotism needs to be newly seen and our faith in Americanism strengthened."

The Julius White post of the G. A. R. and the John A. Logan circle of the Woman's Relief corps will attend the Tabernacle Baptist church at 10:30 o'clock. The pastor is the Rev. Floyd I. Beckwith.

Boy scouts will be special guests at the memorial exercises in the evening at the Berry Memorial church, Leavitt and Giddings streets.

War veterans of the civil and Spanish-American wars, in uniform, will be present at the Waveland Congregational church, Waveland and Janssen avenues.

PRESBYTERIANS HERE SEEK GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD.

Commissions Remaining in Atlantic City Discuss Location for Newly Established Body.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 27.—Commissioners to the 128th general assembly of the Presbyterian church, which closed yesterday, who are still here, were discussing today the probable location of the newly established general board of education.

The new board is a consolidation of the college board and the board of education, and is composed of thirty-six members, eighteen ministers and eighteen elders.

They were appointed at the closing session of the assembly and probably will hold a meeting within a few weeks to elect officers and decide upon the location of their headquarters. Several cities, including New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia, are contestants for the honor.

NEW MIDWAY LAW TEACHER.

Frederic Campbell Woodward Comes from Leland Stanford as Equity Professor.

Frederic Campbell Woodward, who resigned recently as dean of the law school of the Leland Stanford Jr. university, will join the faculty of the law school at the University of Chicago next fall. According to an announcement made yesterday by James Parker Hall, dean of the law department of the Midway institution, Mr. Woodward will succeed to the professorship made vacant by the resignation of Walter Wheeler Cooke who leaves Chicago to go to Yale. Mr. Woodward will teach equity.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE WAR

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

FRENCH FRONT.

In the early part of the week the Germans advanced their line on Dead Man's hill, while the French attacks on Caillette woods were repulsed. Later the French took over a mile of German trenches in the vicinity of Fort Douaumont and at the same time drove the Germans out of the fort. Two days later the Germans recaptured Fort Douaumont and at the same time captured the village of Cumieres, just west of the Meuse. They are now on three sides of Dead Man's hill.

Heavy fighting is still going one. There has been nothing of importance along the rest of the front other than a local German attack, which led to the occupancy of British trenches along a front of about 1,500 yards and to a depth of from 100 to 300 yards.

ITALIAN FRONT.

The Austro-Hungarian offensive has developed into a general one. Their advance is east of Lake Garda and along the Sugana valley in the southern Tyrol. Their advance has steadily continued, and up to the present, besides yielding considerable ground, has brought in 24,000 Italian prisoners, 251 guns, 101 machine guns, and sixteen bomb throwers.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There has been no action of importance along this front during the last week, both sides resting on the defensive.

BALKANS.

Conditions remain the same throughout the Balkans as they have been for the last three months.

ARMENIA.

Nothing of importance has been reported from this theater of war during the last week.

PERSIA AND MESOPOTAMIA.

A force of Russian cavalry, number not known, has advanced from Persia and joined the British near Kut-el-Amara. The Turks have fallen back somewhat in this region. The British force has followed them.

EGYPT.

An unconfirmed report has come of the defeat of a British force by tribesmen in upper Egypt.

SUMMARY.

The situation as a whole remains the same as it has been for a number of weeks, the entente being on the defensive in all theaters of war, except Armenia, where the Russians are on the offensive. The Germans are still on the offensive around Verdun, while the Austro-Hungarians have assumed a strong offensive against Italy.

In other words, the central powers are showing themselves relatively more powerful than at any time since the beginning of the attack on Verdun. The Austro-Hungarian offensive, if successfully continued from the southern Tyrol into the plains of the valley of the Po, will tend to cut all the lines of communication of the Italian troops along the Isonzo and thus compel them to retreat or risk the chance of being entirely cut off.

The prevention of this rests entirely on the ability of the Italians to stop the Austro-Hungarian advance before it has proceeded much beyond its present position.

HIGHLAND PARK RAISING $100,000 HOSPITAL FUND.

Campaign of Four Days Aims at Endowment for New Institution to Fill Need.

Highland Park and nearby north shore residents are engaged in the preliminary details of a campaign for $100,000 to erect, equip, and maintain a hospital.

Mayor S. M. Hastings, C. T. Boynton, Richmond Dean, Everett L. Millard, E. V. Price, Edward G. Huber, many physicians and others are back of the movement.

The campaign will open June 8 and close June 12. Highland Park, Highwood, Deerfield, and a section of Ravinia will be covered in the course of the four day campaign, which is under the direction of Miss Anne Bancroft Coushane.

An option has bee nobtained on a piece of property at Beach and Wade streets.

Everett Millard, attorney for Highland Park Hospital association, received a state charter for the hospital from Secretary of State Stevenson. The new institution will be known as Highland Park hospital. It is to be nonsectarian in both management and service.

It will be a three story brick building with a permanent capacity of twenty-seven beds, including private rooms, sunny wards, a maternity department, a children's ward, a nursery, and a small isolation wing.

HIS LIFE IN THE BALANCE.

Wife Advertises for Young Men to Give Blood for Transfusion Operation.

E. R. Mann of 1352 Winona avenue lies ill at the Augustana hospital, Cleveland and Belden avenues. He has pernicious anemia. Yesterday the doctor told his wife that blood transfusion was necessary. Mrs. Mann appealed to the public with the following advertisement:

WANTED—YOUNG MEN TO GIVE BLOOD for sick person. Will pay well. Office Augustana Hospital.

"So far I have had no response to my advertisement," said Mrs. Mann; "but I have faith that there are young men in Chicago, strong men, who will help give Mr. Mann his chance for life."

JEWISH CANTORS WILL SING.

Concert Will Be Given at Auditorium for Benefit of War Sufferers.

A male choir composed of 125 Jewish cantors will sing at a concert to be given in the Auditorium theater on Sunday, June 11, for the benefit of the Jewish war sufferers. Prof. Adolph Muhlman will direct the choir; Ralph Gerber will be at the organ. The choicest of the traditional synagogal numbers will be heard. Myrtle Elvyn, pianist; Mme. Rose Olitzka, contralto; and Leon Samatini, violinist, will be the soloists.

THE FAIR

STENOGRAPHER ACCUSED OF INFLUENCING WILL.

Eugene H. Fishburn Was Under Her Influence, Brother of Testator Alleges in Suit.

A suit to set aside the will of the late Eugene H. Fishburn, wealthy real estate operator, who left $500,000, was filed yesterday by Edward P. Fishburn, a brother and the only heir at law.

Mina LaPearle Bentley, a stenographer in the offices of a Chicago real estate firm and the chief beneficiary under Mr. Fishburn's will, is made defendant, the suit charging that she exercised undue influence over the aged testator.

According to the bill, Miss Bentley is given $10,000 outright and is made trustee over the remainder of the estate.

At the time Mr. Fishburn made his will, the suit charges, he was in his dotage. Miss Bentley, it is charged, was his constant companion. Mr. Fishburn was formerly president of the Chicago real estate board, elder of the Fourth Presbyterian church and treasurer of the McCormick Teological seminary. Randolph E. Fishburn, of Tucson, Ariz., an adopted son, has also instituted suit to break the will.

WARRANTS FOR PARENTS' NEGLECT OF BABY'S EYES.

Charles Gisknika and Wife Accused of Refusing to Send Child to Save Its Sight.

Warrants were obtained from Judge Newcomer yesterday for the arrest of Charles Gisknika and his wife, Mary, 1217 West Forty-seventh street, on the charge that they neglected to give their baby, less than 2 months old, proper medical attention for the prevention of blindness.

Miss Carolyn Van Blarcon, secretary of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness, started the prosecution.

"When the baby was taken to a church to be christened ten days after birth," she said, "the priest noticed the condition of its eyes and suggested that the mother call in a doctor at once. This was done. The case was then called to our attention and I sought to have the child taken to a hospital at once. The parents were opposed and I appealed to the police."

OBITUARY.

JOHN LATHROP MATHEWS, a reporter for THE TRIBUNE in 1900, editor of the New Orleans Item in 1903, died Friday at Philadelphia. In addition to his newspaper work he was special commissioner for the sanitary district of Chicago in 1900 and 1901. Since 1904 he had been acting as a special correspondent for the Boston Transcript. He was born in Evanston in 1874. A brother, Albert Prescott Mathews, is a professor of chemistry at the University of Chicago. Mr. Mathews was also the author of a number of waterway conservation essays, chief among them being "The Re-Making of the Mississippi," published in 1910.

CHARLES TATUM died yesterday at his residence at 1051 Thorndale avenue. He was 81 years old. Mr. Tatum had been a resident of Chicago for fifty-seven years and was for many years in the grocery business. He came to Chicago from Woodbury, N. J., and married a daughter of Hibbard Porter, one of the first settlers in Chicago. He is survived by three daughters, Miss Harriette V. Tatum being the only one living in Chicago. Funeral services will be held at Graceland chapel tomorrow afternoon.

MARY ELIZABETH SMITH, 79 years old, widow of James G. Smith, died at her residence, 901 Sheridan road, yesterday. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon from the chapel at 4542 Ravenswood avenue, to Rosehill cemetery. Five children survive her. They are: James H., Charles W., George T., Mrs. Emma S. Goodenough, and Ed W. Smith, who is sporting editor of the Chicago American.

FRANK VESELY, 29 years old, a Bohemian musician of Chicago, died yesterday at his residence, 2329 South Fifty-sixth avenue. He leaves a widow. Many Bohemian societies will be represented at the funeral tomorrow afternoon at the residence and will furnish a special musical service.

PATRICK J. DEVER, for nearly half a century a resident of Brighton Park, died Sunday. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland. A wife, four daughters, and five sons survive.

HELEN ALDRICH ENGAGED TO ALBERT BLAKE DICK JR.

Betrothal of Lake Forest Couple Announced at Dinner Given by Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich.

The engagement of Miss Helen Aldrich, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Aldrich of Lake Forest to Albert Blake Dick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blake Dick of Lake Forest, was announced at a dinner given by her parents at Onwentsia club last night for twenty young people.

Miss Aldrich is one of the most popular girls of the younger set of the north side and Lake Forest. She and her sister, Miss Anita Aldrich, have been prominent in nearly all the social affairs of the north shore towns since their debuts. She is one of the best horsewomen in Lake Forest, and has ridden in many of the Lake Forest horse shows.

Mr. Dick is also one of the popular members of the younger crowd of Onwentsia. The Aldriches and the Dicks have been neighbors in Lake Forest for some time.

FIRE CAPTAIN OF 60 TO WED WOMAN OF 32.

Charles W. O'Neill Says He Feels Only 40, but He's Sorry Engagement Rumor Leaks Out.

"I may be 60 in years, but physically and mentally I am the counterpart of any robust may of 40."

Thus commented Capt. Charles W. O'Neill, for thirty-two years a member of Chicago's fire department, when asked yesterday regarding his engagement to Miss Gertrude Riley, 32 years old, of 4135 Wilcox street.

News of the engagement leaked out when Miss Riley, who is employed in a large commercial house, reported for work wearing a diamond engagement ring.

Capt. O'Neill said the wedding would not take place for some time, as his fiancée expects to continue in her present employment for three more months. Capt. O'Neill denied the wedding had already taken place. A license was taken out yesterday.

You Men Who Sell—

The street car route—and pounding the pavements—means that you're "overshot" when you get to your man; you're heated, perspiring—tired; not fit to put up an enthusiastic fight for his business.

A Saxon gets you there fully alive. You're feeling fresh and fit. Your "thought-generators" are cool and collected. A Saxon enables you—with less effort—to make more calls. Effective calls. And other things being equal, you know that the fellow who covers the most ground—who sees the greatest number of prospects—is the biggest producer.

Upkeep? Consider these records established under hardest conditions: An average operating cost of one-fourth cent per mile per passenger. An average of 30 miles to the gallon of gasoline. An average of 125 miles to the pint of oil. An average of 3,500 to 5,000 miles on a set of tires.

A Saxon will increase your income—and increase your joy in living. It's an investment a man in your business can hardly afford not to make.

FEDERAL BUILDING GRIPPED BY RETRENCHMENT MOVE.

Smaller Towel Supply, Cheaper Soap, Electric Light Shutoffs, and Limited Phone Calls Instituted.

Economy has struck the federal building.

In all departments last week the supply of towels was cut in half and when any of the employés want a clean towel now they have to turn in a soiled one. Furthermore, a new and cheap brand of soap has been adopted.

Automatic shutoffs for the electric lights in the washrooms have been installed and locks have been put on the doors in many of the offices so that the public cannot use the telephones.

In the department of internal revenue the office employés even are required to pay 2 cents for personal outgoing telephone calls.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

NATIONAL NEED; REPUBLICAN OPPORTUNITY.

It is the duty of the Republican party to bring about the defeat of President Wilson and his associates. This is the greatest opportunity for national service the Republican party has had in fifty years. National exigency requires the retirement of Mr. Wilson and the present leadership in congress.

The nation would have difficulty in enduring four more years of the experience it has been having in government. We are not sure that it could repeat these experiences without suffering in some very costly fashion.

President Wilson must be defeated and the leadership in congress taken away from the present Democratic managers, and if the Republican party is to give this relief to the nation it must begin by wise action in Chicago next month.

The record of the last four years in Washington is enough to alarm and dismay any American. Mr. Wilson's acts can be condemned by Mr. Wilson's words. If what he said was right, what he did was wrong. Judge his acts by his words and his words condemn him. He has laid down one rule of conduct and has followed another. He has been downright in speech and compromising in action.

He has so handled every foreign issue that the United States stood to lose everything and gain nothing. Never at any time in the development of his policies has he shown that he understood the real duties of his high stewardship. Never at any time has he disclosed that the honor and interest of the United States stood in his mind as eliminating every other consideration.

Thus far we have blundered through these dangerous times with him. We do not know the full of the damage he has done us and we cannot know what we shall have to face as the result of having as president a man whose first impulse has been to talk and whose next has been to back away from his rhetoric.

By the grace of God the nation may come through the balance of his term without having to make some terrible sacrifice to blunder. But by the grace of God never again.

His Mexican policy has been blundering in design and bloody in consequence. It has contributed to misrule and suffering in Mexico. It has hurt the prestige and the interests of the United States. It has sent two expeditions into Mexico with the only purpose of seeing if they could get out after they got in. It has kept Mexican disorder alive, and a disordered Mexico is a diseased spot in the Monroe doctrine.

While Mr. Wilson has been leaving nothing undone to add dangers to the future of the United States, he has done nothing to enable the United States to protect itself. He has been sounding alarms ever since he took office. On two or three occasions he has summoned members of the senate committee on foreign relations and told them things that sent them away scared blue. They have confessed it. He has told the people enough to scare them into demanding protection. They are demanding it now.

But what has Mr. Wilson done? He said he wanted a navy "incomparably" superior to that of any other power, and he is supporting the little navy bill passed by navy hating house Democrats. He said that the citizenry must be armed and trained, and he abandoned Garrison's army plans and forced Garrison out of the cabinet. He yielded completely to Hay, Kitchin, Clark, etc., and did not say a word in protest when it seemed that the senate would not be able to reorganize and strengthen the army.

It is impossible for the nation to stand another administration like that. The leadership of Wilson and the pork hunting congressmen must be set aside if national security is to be served.

The reelection of Woodrow Wilson would have as its companion calamity the continuation of the Democratic rule in congress. It would mean that men like Hay, Kitchin, Clark, Buchanan, etc., would not only continue in congress but would continue in power. The continuation of Wilson and a congress ruled as the present one has been might prove too much for any republic to stand.

The congressional leadership has been set squarely against national interest and for sectional benefit. It has served the district against the nation. It has filled the pork barrel and robbed the army and navy. It has been despicable and dangerous. It must be ended. The reelection of Wilson would serve to continue it. The need of the country is for a new leadership.

The obligation rests upon the Republican party, and the duty will be faced when the national convention meets in Chicago. The need is for the selection of a candidate competent to fill the office of president and able to reunite the party.

The situation is complicated by the multiplicity of candidates and by the natural ambitions of the contending factions. It is difficult, but the obstacles are not insuperable. There are among the candidates men qualified for the position and men unqualified, and if self-interest were eliminated there would remain a division of opinion as to the best man available.

In the work of the convention many of these complexities will be gradually eliminated, and if the delegates permit the thought of national need to point out the opportunity of the party, partisanship will be reduced quickly to rational proportions.

There is a temptation for candidates and campaign managers in this preliminary period to attack other candidates, the foolishness of which appears with the thought that from the list of candidates will come the nominee all will be asked to support. A background of resentment, created by such attacks, is a poor one for a successful campaign. The opposition profits from such factional outbreaks.

If the multiplicity of candidates adds complexity to the deliberations of the Republican convention it also offers a choice of many able men. Roosevelt is the most experienced man in American public life and has proved himself in emergencies such as those in which Wilson collapsed as a failure. Hughes is an enigma compared with Roosevelt, but his record of public service is one of intelligent honesty. Sherman of Illinois is a man of brains, good judgment, experience, and honest opinions. The field is large and the opportunity to pick the best man is wide open for intelligent use. Whitman of New York shows promise of great possibilities.

The Republican party has its great opportunity, and we believe that the party will arise to it. The nation needs a wise Republican administration. It will gain little by trading an unwise Democratic government for an unwise Republican one.

The people do not want to be imposed upon, and the feeling the Republican convention must create is that the nation is not going to be imposed upon again.

The Republican opportunity presented in Chicago is to make a wise choice, reunite the party, and save the nation.

DISCOVERING MR. BRYAN.

John Reed in Collier's Weekly accounts for the amiable Mr. Bryan. Reed went down to Florida, where W. J. B. was lecturing and living during the winter months. It would be sufficient to say lecturing, because W. J. B. is not living unless he is lecturing. We would say that Reed had no unkind intentions regarding Bryan, and furthermore that what he has done to W. J. B. produces no unkind feeling in the mind of the reader; but the result is simply stupendous.

We look back in awe of our luck to consider that this gentleman was for us what would be called in Europe minister for foreign affairs, and during a part of the world's worst upheaval. We consider with more awe the fact that he is in the thought of the American nation the most powerful single influence, with the possible exception of Roosevelt.

Two conceptions of national life are struggling in American thought, and they are roughly represented by ideas of Bryan and Roosevelt. Both men talk constantly and both have considerable following. Roosevelt commands more newspaper space, but Bryan constantly reaches more people directly. Bryan always is on the road. Roosevelt frequently is static if never silent.

Reed was with Bryan on the Ocklawaha when at a landing a soft spoken gentleman informed the party they was a craowd a-waitin' for to heah a few remarks from the kunnel around the bend to Orange Springs. The craowd numbered twenty-nine, chewing tobacco. The twenty-nine showed no glimmer of interest in the advent of Mr. Bryan other than that betrayed by their presence. He was not dismayed by their apathy, but talked to them earnestly of the beauty of a good life.

The episode was symbolic. We can understand Mr. Bryan's thirty-three peace treaties, which had and have about as much relation to the ways of the world as had his talk to the twenty-nine tobacco chewing and otherwise apathetic natives on the bank of the Ocklawaha.

Reed discovered that Bryan's first love in pictures was any Madonna. Raphael's? He didn't care which. Next was "Breaking Home Ties." He did not know who painted it. That did not matter. In music he liked "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and, for a band, "La Paloma." On the stage "Ben-Hur" was the greatest production of all time. The greatest poem was "To a Water Fowl." Another favorite piece was called "Amen," but he did not know who wrote it.

When Reed had finished with Mr. Bryan his reader felt uneasy. It was indecent for a mind to have been so given the opportunity to expose itself. It was as if an editorial whim had made a village barber a conspicuous national character and had drawn out his criticism of life.

The reader felt the more uneasy to consider that this mind was influencing thousands of minds. It is no consolation to understand that Mr. Bryan's power is the power of democracy; that he is influential because he is the eloquent thought of democracy. That is the reverse of consolation. It must be the hope of democracy to have its processes produce as leaders men who have a judgment of distance and perspective, of real values, and of experience.

It is the reverse of consoling to think that Mr. Bryan three times was within running distance of the presidency and that recently he was secretary of state. If a democracy existing in a sophisticated world is in danger of having a well intentioned, cracker barrel, crossroads mind like that of William Jennings Bryan functioning for it as president or to survive the fact that it did function for it as secretary of state, it must either be well beloved by the Almighty or forgotten by fate.

Bryan, who will soon project himself into another campaign, is a child—in everything except politics and in that he forgets every principle which he preaches. His intentions are good. So are the pavements to a celebrated place.

Editorial of the Day.

WHAT WOULD LINCOLN DO?

[From the Philadelphia North American.]

James Buchanan, Democrat, was elected president in 1856, receiving 1,830,000 votes, over John C. Fremont, Republican, with 1,340,000, and Millard Fillmore, American party, with 874,000. Buchanan, therefore, was a minority president, just as is Woodrow Wilson. The Republican party, created to do the work which the old Whig party had neglected, had leaped into second place, as the Progressive party did four years ago, but had failed to win because of division.

The problem was to combine the anti-Democratic forces. If this could be done, defeat of the Democratic party at the next election would be made possible, and almost certain.

Lincoln, a former Whig, but a leader in the new movement which created the Republican party, stated the case with characteristic clearness and foresight. At a Republican banquet held in Chicago on Dec. 10, 1856, he gave this common sense advice:

"All of us who did not vote for Mr. Buchanan, taken together, are a majority of 400,000. But in the late contest we were divided between Fremont and Fillmore. Can we not come together for the future?

"Let every one who really believes, and is resolved, that free society is not and shall not be a failure, and who conscientiously declares that in the past contest he has done only what he thought best—let every such one have charity to believe that every other one can say as much. Thus let bygones be bygones, let past differences as nothing be, and, with steady eye on the real issue, let us reinaugurate the good old central ideas of the republic. We can do it."

It needs no singular discernment to recognize the application to present conditions. One need seek no further to learn what would be the counsel of Lincoln if he instead of self-seeking bosses were guiding the Republican party today.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Bristwood Company.]

BARON CHARLES HELFFERICH, who was transferred last week from the post of minister of finance to that of minister of the interior at Berlin and appointed to the rank of vice chancellor of the empire, is one of the youngest of the advisers of the kaiser, being barely 44 years of age, and is undoubtedly one of his most capable councilors.

Until February of last year he was director of the big financial institution at Berlin known as the Deutsche bank, the greatest concern of its kind in Germany, with branches all over the world. He has been constantly called upon by the emperor and by the chancellor to consult with them about financial matters.

Until about a year before the beginning of the war, Dr. Helfferich was at Constantinople, nominally as the representative of the Deutsche bank there, and as director of Germany's railroad enterprises in Anatolia and Mesopotamia, but in reality as principal commercial and financial adviser to the late Baron Marschal von Bieberstein when the latter was ambassador to the sublime porte.

Baron von Bieberstein's tenure of the post of ambassador was characterized by a phenomenal development of Teuton enterprise of every kind in the Ottoman empire, and by Sultan Abdul Hamid's grant of all sorts of monopolies, concessions, and favors to Germans.

I may add that he was one of the few men of note in Germany who foresaw the scope of the present conflict. In Germany, people, especially among the governing classes, were convinced that Russia would at the last moment refrain from going to war in behalf of Serbia and would back down, as she did in 1909, when confronted by a German ultimatum. Germans were equally sure that England would preserve her neutrality, no matter at what cost. Dr. Helfferich took a contrary view and predicted that the fight between Serbia and Austria would draw Russia, France, Great Britain, Belgium, and Italy into the fray, as has proved to be the case.

Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, who has just died in a hospital at Vienna while undergoing an operation intended to repair in a measure the injuries which he sustained through the dashing of a bottle of vitrol in his face, was the only son of Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Cohary, and of his divorced wife, Princess Louise of Belgium—a grandson therefore of the late King Leopold. Leopold twice visited the United States and Canada within the last ten years and was entertained quite extensively in both countries. He was a captain of the Ninth regiment of Austrian Hussars, and while in America exposed his former regimental comrade, Prince Victor of Thurn-and-Taxis, whom he found cutting a wide swath and who had been forced to leave both the army and the dual empire under extremely unsavory circumstances.

Last autumn a woman who had been betrayed by Leopold under a promise of morganatic marriage, and who was the daughter of a government official holding the rank of councillor of the court of Vienna, when she found herself abandoned and destitute, attacked him with vitrol, a bottle of which she hurled in his face. One eye, his nose, and one of his ears were completely destroyed by the corrosive liquid, as well as a portion of the lips, one cheek and the temple being badly scarred.

Immediately after attacking him, the girl, who had entreated him in vain to provide for her welfare, committed suicide in his presence. From that time until his death he was in the hands of surgeons.

His only sister, married to the dissipated brother of the German empress, Duke Ernest Gunther of Schleswig-Holstein, has no children, and has always been an object of considerable unfriendliness on the part of her sister-in-law, the kaiserin, owing to her refusal to become a convert from the Roman Catholic church to Lutheranism.

One cannot help recalling in connection with Prince Leopold's death the fact that his father, Prince Philip, was one of the principal participants in the tragedy of Meyerling which robbed Emperor Francis Joseph of his only son. A blight has seemed to rest upon every one connected with the Meyerling affair, either directly or indirectly. Some have committed suicide, others have met death by accident, ruin and ostracism has fallen to the share of others, while as for Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha-Cohary, his wife was driven by his conduct to elope with the ex-captain and ex-convict, Mattachich, who had previously wounded him in a duel.

She was confined for several years in an insane asylum near Dresden, and since her escape has continued to furnish, almost without interruption, chapter after chapter to the chroniques scandaleuses of the reigning house of Belgium, being repeatedly charged with fraud and even worse.

Prince Philip being now left without a son the huge entailed estates of this Cohary branch of the reigning house of Saxe-Coburg will go on his death to the second son of his dead brother, Augustus, Prince August Leopold. Prince Augustus Leopold's mother was the younger daughter of Dom Pedro, the last emperor of Brazil, and it was as a sub-lieutenant of the Brazilian navy that Prince Augustus Leopold visited New York on board a Brazilian frigate in 1888, availing himself of the occasion to make trips to Washington, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, etc.

The Cohary fortune was founded by a Hungarian statesman named Cohary, who, of Semitic origin, amassed wealth in the eighteenth century, and who, although a self-made man, attained the highest honors. He had a daughter named Antoinette, his sole heiress, and he only gave his consent to her marriage with Gen. Prince Ferdinand of Coburg, founder of the Cohary line of the Coburgs in 1816, on the condition that the name and arms of Cohary should be borne in conjunction with those of Saxe-Coburg by every successor to the Cohary estates.

CONSTIPATION.

AFTER the food has been broken up by the teeth and mixed with saliva it is passed through the pharynx to the esophagus. The esophagus is merely a tube devised to carry the food from the mouth through the chest to the stomach. In the stomach the food is converted from a moist solid into a thick liquid, the breaking up process is continued and the digestive process is seriously entered upon. As it gets into condition to be passed from the stomach to the small intestine it passes.

At one time the teaching was that the pylorus held all the contents in the stomach until it all was ready for the intestines, whereupon the puckering muscle let loose and the chargo was emptied into the intestine. The process was supposed to be similar to that in some great machines in which buckets hold upright until they fill to a certain point, whereupon they tilt and empty in a few seconds. The teaching was that food was held in the stomach for two hours.

Scientists, by feeding bismuth and watching the stomach with X-rays, have found that the stomach wall during digestion is constantly pushing the food against the pylorus and that as rapidly as any part of it is ready to pass it passes regardless of any time limit. On the other hand, some of it may not get by for several hours.

From the stomach the food is passed into the small intestine. The small intestine is twenty to twenty-five feet long. In the upper part of this tube the thick liquid of the stomach is made still more liquid. The juices from the liver, pancreas, and intestines are mixed with it.

Before it has traveled more than five feet of the twenty-five the process of digestion is completed. During the remainder of the journey of twenty-five feet the process of absorption is going on. The value of the food as it passes the upper part of the small intestine is much greater than is the case when the food reaches the end of the small intestine. The food still in the liquid state passes through an opening into the large intestine. In order that no solid matter shall be pushed from the large intestine into the small, clogging up the latter, the opening from the one into the other is guarded by a valve called the ileocecal valve.

The large intestine begins with a blind pouch, to which the appendix is attached. It leads directly up the right side of the abdomen from the appendix region to the liver region. This part of the large intestine is called the ascending colon. In the region of the liver it turns and runs across the abdomen from the right side to the left side, crossing the middle line about two inches above the navel. Most people who complain of fullness in the stomach, heavy feeling in the stomach, and pain in the stomach are in reality suffering from conditions in their transverse colon, for that is the name of this part of the large intestine.

The bend near the liver is called the hepatic flexure. That on the left side of the abdomen is the splenic flexure. When the transverse colon has reached the left side of the abdomen near the spleen it turns and runs toward the pelvis to be known as the descending colon. When the descending colon crosses the hip bones and enters the pelvis it is known as the pelvic colon. This part is divided into three parts, two of which it is necessary to remember—the sigmoid or S shaped bend and the rectum.

The relative length of the colon varies in different animals. In meat eating animals the large intestine is a small, short, heavily walled tube. In grass eating animals it is a long, large, thin walled pouch. Man comes in between and his large intestine in length, size, and thickness or the muscular wall is likewise in between. Nor is the size, length, or thickness of the muscle wall the same in different men.

In the mouth many bacteria are mixed with the food. In the stomach many bacteria are killed, more lie dormant, but under normal conditions none multiply. The reason is the contents are acid and bacteria do not thrive in acid solutions. In the small intestine the bacteria begin to multiply. The number in the upper stretches is small; in the lower stretches it is large. Somewhere about five hours after being eaten the food traverses the esophagus, stomach, small intestine, and reaches the large intestine. Food taken for breakfast at 8 o'clock this morning reaches the tissues ready for use by noon. That portion which has not been absorbed in the small intestine reaches the head of the large intestine by 1 o'clock. To travel the last five to eight feet, the length of the small intestine, requires more than forty hours.

And now what is happening during this forty hours? The semi-liquid mass is pushed back and forth until it has been converted from a thin liquid to a semi-fluid solid. As progress along the large intestine is made the process of absorption goes on to completion. By the time the intestinal content has reached the last stretch of large intestine most of the water and food elements have been absorbed from it. What is left is in great part bacteria that have developed in the intestines, waste remnants of food, the undigested portions, and some salts and other substances thrown off by the body.

The greater part of the elements to be used by the body are absorbed from the small intestine. What absorbs from the large intestine is not of great importance. The proof of this is the fact that people from whom the large intestine has been removed and those who for other reasons do not have the use of a large intestine keep in good flesh for a long time.

The contents of the intestine are kept steadily on the move from the mouth down. The journey through the esophagus is rapid. In man this part of the tube has strong muscles in the wall and these keep the food on the move. In snakes the esophagus has no muscle in its walls, but the shape and arrangement of the trunk makes it possible for the trunk muscles to squeeze the food through the esophagus.

In the stomach the onward movement of the food is slowed up for a short while. Through the small intestines the intestinal contents travel at the rate of about a foot in ten minutes. In the ascending transverse and descending colon the onward movement of the intestinal contents is very uneven and very slow. In the rectum what is left of the intestinal content now called the feces comes to a halt. After lying there for a while it irritates the local nerves, the muscles of the rectal wall contract, the abdominal muscles come to their assistance, and the result is an evacuation of the bowels.

This is a brief account of what goes on in the intestines. When this is understood it becomes easier to understand why some people are constipated and what is to be done about it. The largest single factor in constipation is lack of training. So long as animals other than the human animal are well, they are never constipated. The reason is that whenever the rectum is irritated by the presence of food the bowels are evacuated. Under no circumstances is the contraction of the rectal muscles held in restraint. The urge to bowel movement is always heeded. If man will follow the same rule, under reasonable restrictions, he will be troubled but little with constipation.

Recently a mother told the readers of this column how she had trained her babies to have regular evacuations of the bowels and bladder. She began systematically when the babies were but a few weeks old. It is a safe guess that her children with training ingrained will be in no danger of developing constipation at any times in their lives.

The next largest factor in constipation is the nature of our food. We are eating concentrated, purified, softened, prepared and almost predigested foods. In these foods there is almost no waste. Take milk as an example. The body can use all of milk. As soon as milk reaches the stomach it is solidified. Soon all, or nearly all, of the water is absorbed. The sugar is burned quickly into heat and energy, the albumins are used for growth and repair, most of the fats are absorbed and used for heat and energy. Some of the salts are used. There is little waste left to irritate the rectum and cause an evacuation of the bowels.

Take wheat flour as another illustration. We mill from the berry everything except the starch and gluten. Practically all of these are absorbed from the intestines and nothing is left behind for waste.

We gain by eating fodder and hay along with our grain. So long as we eat white bread we should also eat bran bread and bran cereals. Some profit from eating raw bran, served with cream and sugar or eaten with fruit. Raw bran contains a good deal of raw starch, and some people do not digest raw starch well. Some of our readers use the following recipe for making bran bread:

One quart bran, one pint white flour, one-half cup of molasses, one teaspoonful soda dissolved in a little of the molasses, one teaspoonful salt, one pint of good buttermilk. Mix all the ingredients well together. Bake in a square or oblong pan for one hour.

Bran is largely composed of the outer part of the wheat berry. It is rich in minerals needed by the system. Its efficacy in constipation is due to the cellulose it contains. Cellulose is the woody fiber of the envelope of the wheat berry. When eaten with food it passes through the intestines undigested and unused. When it reaches the rectum it irritates and stimulates the muscles to evacuate the bowels.

Wheat bran is not the only source of cellulose. Pithy radishes, turnips, and beets contain much cellulose. All old vegetables that become stringy and tough are so because they have developed cellulose. We can get cellulose by any one of the following methods: Eating celery, especially the tops and tougher parts. Eating the tougher, stringier parts of such vegetables as radishes, turnips, string beans, cabbage, collards, lettuce, and spinach. If we trimmed our vegetables less we would suffer less from constipation. Eating the pulp of fruits. Trimming our meats less closely. Eating more of the trimmings and less of the muscle.

Allied to this group of causes is the lack of water in the intestines. We live in houses that are too dry and lose water to the air or we sweat out some of the water from our tissues. The deficiency in part is replaced by over absorption of water from the intestines. The feces are too dry. One remedy is to drink water with each meal and to drink plenty of water between meals. Another remedy is to eat agar. Agar is a Japanese seaweed which absorbs water like a sponge. It passes through the intestines unused and holding on to its moisture always prevents the feces of which it is a part from forming into hard, dry masses. Whenever a person notices that his bowel movements are hard and dry probably the best method of cure for him is to eat agar and drink more water. Agar can be eaten by itself or mixed with sugar or incorporated with other foods. It is tasteless.

The third most important cause of constipation is weak, flabby muscles, particularly because lazy muscle nerves are likely to go with lazy muscles. Working men and athletes are not prone to suffer from constipation. At least their chance of escape is better than is that of fat, flabby loafers. The remedy for constipation among this group is work or exercise. Regular physical work is better than gymnasium exercises or massage. And so is play. Among the procedures that are included in the exercise cure are horseback riding, rapid walking, hill climbing, rowing, golf, tennis, handball—all gymnasium exercises which use the abdominal muscles and massage.

Closely related to poor muscles and muscle nerves as a cause of constipation is incorrect posture. People who sit for hours bent over a desk develop constipation. When the backbone is bent forward the structures in the abdomen are jammed together. More important still, when the body remains in that position for several hours a day the abdominal muscles get weak from disuse. The remedy for constipation due to bad posture is change in posture. This can only be done by arranging things so that the correct posture becomes comfortable, waste saving and fatigue preventing.

FISTULA.

Mrs. F. T. writes: "My sister, 40 years of age, married fifteen years, never had any children. Her physician informs her she has fistula of the rectum. He is treating her for same, and says she will have to be operated. Is such an operation dangerous? In case operation is not performed, what would be the result?

REPLY.

In complete fistula there is a false passage leading from the bowel to the outside. Fistula starts as an abcess near the bowel. This opens into the bowel and to the outside to make the passage alluded to above. Many cases of fistula are due to tuberculosis located near the bowel. There is not much danger in operation for fistula. Some cases heal without operation, but it is the exception. She should follow the advice given.

FINAL NATURALIZATION PAPERS.

Chicago, May 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you tell if witnesses that know me for two and one half years are all right in order to get my second papers, or must they know me the whole time I have been in this country.

LOUIS H. BARTOLD,
1941 Dayton street.

Where an alien has resided for a period of five years at least in the state in which he files his petition for naturalisation, or final papers, his petition must be verified by the affidavits of at least two witnesses who have known him for a period of not less than five years next preceding the date of filing his petition. In case the petitioner has not resided in the state for a period of five years continuously and immediately preceding the date of filing his petition, he may establish by the affidavits of two witnesses the time of his residence within the state, provided it has been for more than one year, and the remaining portion of his five years' residence within the United States required by law to be established may be proved by the depositions of two or more witnesses.

CHIMNEY ORDERED REBUILT.

Chicago, May 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Our building is situated at 1222 Washtenaw avenue and next door the people burn leather and rubber scraps in the furnace, causing a terrible lot of smoke—annoying my tenants. The chimney new broke down last fall and has never been rebuilt on this building.

H. BUSS,
1128 South Whipple street.

As a result of an investigation made by an inspector from this department a notice was served on the owner to extend the chimney complained of so as to abate the nuisance of smoke entering the windows of the adjoining building. The practice of burning leather and rubber scraps in the furnace has been discontinued.

DIVORCE NOT LEGAL.

Chicago, May 18.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man leaves his wife and goes to Texas. After a stay there of about two or three months he secures a divorce. The wife was not and has not been notified. Is this divorce legal and would it be recognized as such in Illinois and Minnesota? INTERESTED READER.

The divorce is not legal. You should take steps to have the Texas decree set aside. It probably would not be recognized as legal in Illinois and Minnesota, but you should have it set aside. Wife should also proceed against her husband and consult a competent attorney.

WHO KNOWS WHAT WE WANT? WHY, SNITKAY, OF COURSE.

Belle Plaine, Ia., May 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—You make me tired in talking "old guard" stuff anent the purported interviews of ex-President Taft and Justice Hughes. If Hughes will accept the presidency why not shut up and get together for him? We do not want Roosevelt. You do not really and truly want him, and I do not believe the majority of Republican voters want him even as second or third choice.

So please ring off on the "old guard" stuff and get together for Hughes or any other good man—there are several of them—with this one qualification, that he be a Republican irrespective of standpatism or progressivism. We want a Republican for our next president. So here's for Hughes, or Root, or Sherman, or Cummins, labeled "Republican."

PARTISANSHIP OF NEUTRALS.

Lake Minnisaoha, Minn., May 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have been delighted to note of late the liberally nonpartisan attitude of THE TRIBUNE anent all questions of issue growing out of the European war. Not alone thousands, but millions of us are wearied beyond measure by newspaper comment, censored in London or Paris, and passed on to us ad infinitum ad nauseam, so to speak, by the American press at large. Why are we, American citizens, compelled to turn for news and war comment wholly to the censored stuff against which ninety-nine-hundredths of the English at home have bitterly protested? Why must we turn to British journals, of anti-tory persuasion, and to English writers, for any indictment—outside of German utterance—of Great Britain's part in this holocaust of war?

The spirit of subservient partisanship, shown by so many millions of my fellow countrymen, has touched me deeply. And it is to be felt all the more deeply from the fact that honest souls have been played upon in the most sacred of their feelings and instincts. These have been fanned to unjust hatred and loathing by nothing less than special pleading in the wholesale—by the most gigantic campaign of manufactured sentiment this world has ever known.

Nothing has been too small to overlook which could help to warp the minds of readers, and to mold in them the spirit of hate, directed by a racial prejudice and all the passions aroused in an unholy war. So vast and so mighty in its scope has been the scheme of this campaign that we have presented the spectacle of a non-combatant nation more bitterly and hatefully partisan, in its printed utterance, than any belligerent among them all in Europe!

We shall recover from this, and, in the end, we shall feel heartily ashamed of ourselves. We shall all discover, at the hands of impartial history, that our attention did not compel this war. We shall see that all were, through secret entente and alliances, pledged to each other, and that all were preparing for the moment when the balance of power in Europe should be determined by the arbitrament of war.

We shall all know that the "scrap of paper," made to figure as of utmost and sacred importance, was a "scrap of paper," and nothing else, to all the parties concerned. We shall know that Belgium was as deeply involved in secret alliances, and in preparation for Europe's fateful day, as any nation of them all, and that we have wasted rivers of sympathy upon a government as absolutely committed to war, years before war was declared, as was England and France. We shall remember again, with shame for the white race, the rotten reign of Leopold and all the horrors of the Congo.

FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS.

OTHERWISE HE SEEMS TO BE ALL RIGHT.

Chicago, May 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I was able quite recently to call your attention to the fact that every editorial mention by THE TRIBUNE of Woodrow Wilson as a propreparedness man weakened the cause of preparedness. I think that his easy passivity in the meantime has given unqualified confirmation to my argument. While he was explaining his views on preparedness to the Amos Pinchot Knitting and Bed Quilting society his pals were denaturizing the army bill. While he was talking to the Washington correspondents about knocking men down, Chinda was shooting flab into the immigration bill. While he was making ready his foolish talk about "untainted Americanism" the navy bill was being kicked into fragments.

Now you've taken to referring to Woodrow Wilson as a scholar. You called him just that on the 19th, in the editorial headed "Alice in Blunderland." This, too, is a mistake, both of label and of psychology. First, he is not a scholar, but a school teacher; second, to call him a scholar is favorably to impress persons who do not think for themselves. And, of course, nothing should be printed in any American newspaper to give even to the thoughtless a reason for supposing that they admire Wilson.

A scholar is a person who knows. A school teacher is a person who opens a textbook and imparts its contents to others. The scholar is able to demonstrate. The mere school teacher is licked as soon as he closes the book. And the school teacher is all the less effectual when, as does Wilson, he carefully selects only those books which are in agreement with his own set of opinions—or, rather, he

PEACE OR TRUCE?

By Edward Goldbeck.

IS peace in sight? The wish seems father to the thought. Whatever Mr. Poincaré may say, there is hardly any doubt possible that all the belligerent nations are yearning for peace. They do not frankly proclaim it: they think that honor forbids such a confession, they want to appear to the enemy and the neutrals as strong, united, and unshaken as possible, they are fettered by censorship, but in spite of all that one feels that the psychological moment has either been reached or is very near. Even if we knew nothing about the situation in Europe but the more or less accurate amount of the losses, we could surmise that this is so, and we should not be surprised if today or tomorrow the news would be flashed across the ocean that the belligerents have agreed on a truce and that a conference will be convocated at some hitherto unknown Spanish town. Maybe the allies will first try to effectuate the oft announced "gigantic offensive" on the western front, but the result would hardly change the situation.

The prime ministers of the various countries speak more softly and have stopped hurling injuries at each other when they address the parliament. It is a pity that they had not self-control enough to avoid these bad manners from the beginning. They ought to have known that some time they would have to shake hands and understood earlier that it would be more dignified and wiser not to spit into each other's faces. Anyhow, their growling sounds subdued now. Most of the leading men in all countries are willing to come to an arrangement and this arrangement looks very much like the status quo.

LET us single out Germany from the European panorama, as the military success is on Germany's side and therefore her intentions are the most important. The German chancellor has proclaimed that the Germans will evacuate Belgium. This declaration makes peace possible between Germany and England. If Belgium would become German England could not feel safe for one moment. Mr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg has added that Belgium must be prevented from falling under a Franco-British tutelage and that the Flemish population (3,700,000 heads) must be protected as to their nationality and language. This, of course, is only a very vague contour of the future condition of Belgium, but no insuperable difficulties seem to lie on this way. King Albert will consent to almost anything; he is not in the position to raise weighty objections and the exhausted powers will give a hearty welcome to any diplomat who can make an acceptable proposition.

The chancellor did not say anything about France and, of course, the military developments of the next weeks and months will modify the conditions of the peace, but today it seems probable that Germany would consent to withdraw her troops from French soil. The question of an indemnity is important, but not overwhelmingly so. Then the way would be paved for a peace between Germany and France.

AS to Russia the situation is entirely different. Mr. Von Bethmann wants Germany to retain her Russian conquests. This is a most unfortunate idea and here are the reasons why I call it unfortunate: Germany humiliates Russia without weakening her to such a degree that she would become innocuous. Even if the Germans should retain all they have conquered in Poland and the Baltic provinces Russia remains immensely strong and will always look out for revanche. The Germans will have the "Alsace-Lorraine" situation in the east. Russia will have a casus belli ready and will profit of any favorable international constellation to assail Germany. The traditional friendship between the two powers, which, according to Bismarck's testimony, made possible by 1815, 1866, 1870, and which might be renewed after a period of cooling down, will be definitely lost.

The Germans have not been able to assimilate the Poles in the provinces of Posen, western and eastern Prussia, and Silesia; on the contrary, they had to defend themselves against the Polish inundation. It would be a mistake to acquire a territory with other millions of Poles, and Prussia will hardly be delighted at the idea of incorporating a country which is teeming with Jews. The newcomers would support the Socialist party and that party is strong enough as it is.

The reconstruction of an independent Poland is impossible without destroying Prussia. We have Bismarck's word for it and the map shows that it is true. To have a Polish and Catholic state almost at the doors of Berlin would be a terrible danger to Germany. In case of a new war between Russia and Germany Poland would certainly be on Russia's side. The fact that an Austrian or a Bavarian prince might be the ruler of the resuscitated kingdom would not be a sufficient protecton. The ruler has to be a "nationalist" before everything else and he must forget what his origin was. Moreover, the friend of today may be the enemy of tomorrow, and who can say whether the alliance between Austria and Germany will be durable? If it would prove not to be an Austrian prince on the throne of Poland would be highly disagreeable to Germany.

THERE are still other reasons, but those I mentioned are sufficient to turn the scale against the chancellor's plan. The trouble is that all the leaders want to get something out of this war. If they do not, if they have simply to revert to the status quo, the bankruptcy of European diplomacy is sealed and signed. In all the countries there will be distrust and resentment and a powerful wave of democratization will threateningly approach the sanctuaries of the dynasties, dignitaries, and ruling classes.

None of the fighting parties is strong enough to overwhelm the other. German invasion of Belgium was a wrong which would have to be atoned for after the war, he cannot foster the idea of annexing Belgium. But he needs a palpable gain to satisfy the nation and he thinks that he can get it from Russia. Maybe he can, but a peace on this basis will never be more than a truce. The system of ever increasing armament will remain as it was and as soon as the first exhaustion is overcome and the economical wounds are superficially healed the same game will begin.

None of the fighting parties s strong enough to overwhelm the other. Germany can resist them for years to come, but it seems unlikely that she should be able to conquer France, assisted by Russia and Britain. Even a successful expedition against Suez would not end the war and the plans against India are phantastical. England and Russia are, for different reasons, unconquerable. Everything depends on the power of resistance which France may show, and Verdun has certainly proved that the Germans cannot overrun the allied armies.

THOSE people who believe that Germany did not want war and had no intention of making any conquests may be satisfied if Germany is able to hold her own. The fatherland will have proved that it cannot be encircled and overcome by numbers. Those, of course, who dreamed of a German world empire will be terribly disappointed, but they were a negligible minority. If the Germans want a lasting peace they must give up the idea of taking land from Russia. They will get their colonies back and there might be an understanding about the Belgian Congo, but that will be all.

There are only two possibilities. The one is to fight with the aim of annexing Belgium and eastern France, Poland and the Baltic provinces, rely on one's own strength and prepare for an iron age, an age of ever renewing coalitions and campaigns. The other is to renounce all conquests and do everything to inaugurate an era of mutual forgiveness, conciliation, and peace. The second alternative is an experiment, in whose chances neither the student of history nor the psychologist will believe very strongly, but I suppose this experiment has to be tried at least once. The overwhelming majority of humankind seems to demand it.

THE peace conference would have a task absolutely different from the Congress of Vienna. We no longer believe in shifting nationalities from one side to the other without heeding their race and history, their interests and predilections. On the other hand, it is impossible to adopt the "principle of nationality" which Napoleon III. proclaimed for personal reasons. It would lead to endless warfare, as in each particular case it is immensely difficult to decide where a nation would belong. We have only to take the instance of Ireland to see what problems would emerge: England could never agree to Ireland's independence.

In fact, there is no panacea for the evils of Europe. The principle of the Congress of Vienna, "legitimacy," was absolutely artificial and had been insinuated by shrewd old Talleyrand, who knew how to harp upon the dynastic prejudices of Alexander, Francis, and Frederick William. There is no such acknowledged principle now and that is why the wisdom of the European leaders will have to fall back on the status quo, which at least will not add new resentment to the old store of antagonisms. Then the diplomats may try to cover their spiritual nudity with the cloak of pacifism and to lessen the armaments at least for the period of convalescence.

If the governments follow in their respective countries a policy of conciliation, economical upbuilding, tearing down of rotten prejudices, satisfying of legitimate popular aspirations, an era of external and internal peace may dawn on the suffering European world. If one of the nations tears off a piece of land from the enemy's country the curse will be perpetuated from generation to generation. Peace or truce, that is the choice. Peace can only be had at the sacrifice of national vainglory. But those who are mourning their dearest may find a comfort in the idea that this war prepared a brighter future.

LETTERS FROM CASEMENT

To Poultney Bigelow

In the following important and intensely interesting series of letters written in 1914 by Sir Roger Casement to Poultney Bigelow, the American author, Sir Roger, who was recently held for trial in London on a charge of high treason, displays his intense hatred of England, and declares that Great Britain brought on the European war to ruin Germany.

Mr. Bigelow was a playmate of the German emperor when both were boys, and his friend for years after they grew up. He is the author of "History of the German Struggle for Liberty, 1806-1848."....

Care of W. J. Allison & Co.,
9 Farringdon Rd., London, E. C., 3 Jan., 1914.

My dear Bigelow,

I have two of your letters to acknowledge—the one before me is 24 Oct. last—the very day I was addressing a meeting of "anti-Carsonites" in Ballymoney. Since then I've been very busy, forming Irish volunteers and doing my best to bring on the day of Irish release from the jail of British imperialism.

I fear I cannot go to the States yet—there is too much to do in Ireland.

But I thank you all the same for your more than cordial invitation to your homestead.

If ever I again see the lineaments of "Uncle Sam" face to face I shall certainly accept your offer of a cup of coffee and an axe in your woodland home.

Meantime I am too busy putting the Snakes out of Ireland St. Patrick overlooked.

When we are at one here, please God, I'll have a run to America.

With all kind thoughts and wishes for 1914,

Yours sincerely,
ROGER CASEMENT.

5417 Springfield Ave.,
Philadelphia. Sunday, 26 July, 1914.

My dear Bigelow,

I got back here (away since Wednesday) from Norfolk Va: yesterday and found your charming letter & most explicit directions for reaching Malden. Allright I'll come after 6 August. Delighted, too.

I got Bourke Cockran at Port Washington to come to Norfolk with me and we addressed a mighty gathering of Irishmen there. It was great fun—but hot—& I relieved my feelings by ducking a "Coon" (5 cents a shy!) off a sliding board over a pool, by hitting the bull's eye (an owl) with a tennis ball. The Coon enjoyed the bath & so did I the good shot. It was hot but homely in Philadelphia.

I go probably to B. Cockran for a day on Monday & may then go on to Boston for a day—but by 6 August I ought to be thro' with some of my plans & free for your Hudson highlands & a swim per hour in the Hudson.

The papers here are photoing me all over the spot & my face is being sold to me by small boys in the streets. Many things amuse a stranger here—all interest him & the people themselves are the most interesting of all.

This War—like a bolt from the Blue—in Europe may be the end of all things.

If Germany fights, Gt. B. will have to whether she likes it or not. Germany will not let John Bull sit tight & come in on the peace conditions, with uninjured armaments to boss an exhausted world. Germany is right there—so if she has to fight she will see that J. Bull fights too nolens volens & God help us all if this is the universal Peace Year.

Yours ever,
ROGER CASEMENT.

My dear Bigelow

I am afraid you will think me a will o' the wisp—but I can't go to you yet.

This awful Calamity in Europe has upset everything—all my plans & movements & thoughts & hopes.

It is the Crime of all the Ages—and I blame not the Kaiser or Germany—but chiefly England who has plotted and planned it from the days of the first big German battleship.

I am staying with John Quinn (the lawyer) an Irish friend, and seeing various Irishmen & others to interest them in the Irish Volunteers—but what can one say or do with this welter of blood & horror & crime in Europe. I pray day & night, "God save Germany"!

Yesterday I called on Col: Roosevelt & Oyster Bay and exchanged ideas.

I meet Mayor Mitchel to-morrow & do the same—& day by day I collect funds to arm my Irish boys at home—some day, who knows?—to fight a fight for Ireland.

This address finds me

Yours,
ROGER CASEMENT.

My dear Bigelow,

We don't agree. I don't accept as anything but an English lie the statement that Germany tried to ruin U. S. A. in 1898. There is not nor ever has been proof of it—but there is proof in hills & mountains of English effort in the past to smash this country. However, bygones are bygones—& if English hostility to America is forgotten & forgiven, why nurse anger against Germany when the very cause of the anger is so doubtful?

England has ruined Ireland—morally, financially, and physically. She has degraded and demoralized the people—destroyed their language, their culture, their music—every thing in fine that stands for the soul of a nation; she has robbed them thro' the centuries & most of all in the last century (as Lord MacDonnell put it "at least £320,000,000 sterling, an Empire's Ransom"); and she has driven them to flight across the oceans.

Her present campaign against Germany is hypocritical and mendacious—She aims at one thing only—to destroy German competition; to destroy German peaceful rivalry; to sweep from her path the only great commercial people in Europe whose integrity and capacity and efficiency she dreads.

In order to achieve this she entered (7 years ago it began) into an unholy alliance with two armed assassins. Unable herself, alone, to strike the blow at her great and tranquil adversary she bribes two bravos, two military mercenaries, to do the deed. To France she gave Morocco (which was not hers to give & violates her own Treaty—the Act of Algeciras) as hiring price in the anti-German prize ring.

To Russia she hands over Northern and Middle Persia which were not hers to give: She now meditates the crime of the centuries—to destroy the civilization & industry of Central Europe & replace Germanic culture with Russian ignorance and tyranny.

Herself a non-European Power, only anxious for money & the trade of the World on her terms, she enters into a conspiracy to hand Europe over to Russian & French militarism in order that she may have all the trade dealings of the Sea outside of Europe.

It is a vile deed,

I am not lingering in New York to meet politicians—but to see my decent good fellow-Irishmen & get their help to arm the Irish Volunteers I helped to found.

Ireland has no sins on her conscience against weaker peoples—and when Ireland is armed and drilled, please God we shall be masters in our own house and fight only one battle—that of self-defense.

Too long we have helped to plunder & pillage other peoples on behalf of the power that has held us in its grip and for its sole profit.

I repeat I earnestly pray for Germany's triumph over British greed, French revenge, Russian dominance, Servian assassination, and Japanese "chivalry."

England is in bed with fine bedfellows for the Land that claims its policy rests upon the Bible!

Cromwell's murders were also leaves out of that book—and I fancy it is the chief wadding for the British guns in every epoch—whether aimed at American Independence, Irish land, Hindu, Turk, or Tartar—& now the Teuton.

Germany's protestantism is no shield when John Bull sees a market.

I hope he will get it in the neck & learn what it is to inflict war on others. He who has not ever suffered war has been the one power to carry war abroad (as now) & inflict its horrors on others.

When England has experienced in her own sacked & ravaged & bombarded cities, ruined industries starving millions what it is to suffer war, we shall have peace in the World. All who desire peace should hope to see the one power always at war, at length brought to realize the meaning & horror of war.

If the Almighty has a drop of Protestant blood in his veins he will be on the side of Germany in this war, of the most peace-loving people of Europe fighting for their national life, their industry, their commerce—their existence as a great race.

So now, my dear Bigelow, you know where I stand.

Yours ever,
ROGER CASEMENT.

My dear Bigelow,

There is indeed no reason save one horrid one, why I should not be with you bathing in the Hudson instead of grilling & melting in this Inferno. The reason is the inclosed! I am seeing men in connection with arms for the Volunteers daily nearly & hourly often.

I go to Chicago on Saturday to see a Committee of prominent men there & then return to New York, with the help of God I may then strike Malden on Hudson.

A hundred thanks to you for all your kind thoughts—

Yours ever,
ROGER CASEMENT.

This address finds me until I go north to Canada, thence to embark for North of Ireland—

5421 Springfield Avenue,
Philadelphia, Pa., 30 Sept., 1914.

My dear Bigelow,

Your kind card of 16 Sept asking me again to go & see you reached me late.

I've been away—& always am busy—altho' not with politicians as you so persistently maintain! Your insistence that because I am a Nationalist I must be a politician amuses me. I loathe politics & its devotees. I would not go into a Parliament, or Senate, or Congress for £10,000 a year. I have just denounced politics in the inclosed statement of my principles of nationality which went to Ireland 10 days ago, & please God, will be now scattered broadcast all over that land.

The only place I shall end in will be jail!—a British jail for Irish "felony." Of course, if I went out with murder in my heart against the Germans who have never wronged Ireland I'd be a splendid "patriot" but because I want my poor, brave, credulous countrymen to stay at home & if they fight at all, to fight then for Ireland, I am a traitor. Such is the irony of British "democracy"! God deliver me from a democracy that feeds in peace itself & stirs up war & desolation wherever its greed, its lust, its appetite call for conflict. It fights always with other men's lives—in other men's lands—with ravaged & sacked cities of other countries. The day England herself suffers the horrors of invasion & feels war at home—we shall have peace abroad—not till then. The task of civilization must be, surely will be—to destroy British immunity from invasion, so that the responsibility for her intrigues abroad & alliances with others to foment war elsewhere shall fall on the shoulders of the principal as well as of his "allies."

If London suffered what London has caused Brussels, Louvain, Liège to suffer,—there would be no war in Europe.

It is because London & all it shelters of Imperial greed and cupidity is immune and feels it can never suffer, that England has begotten this war of horror against Germany.

I have heard it plotted and planned for years. I saw it designed steadily in the F. O. & I have again & again warned them there of where they were driving. They meant to drive there. They knew it was a crime but—Delenda est Carthago! Germany's crime was German higher efficiency in the walks of international commerce & in sea affairs. The day she decided that she, too, had a future on the seas, that day her doom was decreed.

England fights for one thing only—her interests as the World Emporium. She has two ends in view—1st to destroy Germany as a rival. 2d To rope the U. S. A. into an alliance of World partnership in the Emporium line.

She will fail in No. 1 ultimately even if she wins today. Germany is too great & has too good blood in her veins. Even if England gets her down, with the aid of Russia, France, Japan, & the "Silver Bullet"—Germany will rise again.

But England may succeed in No. 2. I see the signs of surrender here on all sides. The virus of British Imperialism is being inoculated steadily—already the press is thoroughly poisoned & most of the politicians & so-called "public men" (you have at the outside perhaps 2 men in America who could be called statesmen).

The attractions of a World Empire, to be called a "democracy" whereby wealth can be acquired by systematic pillage called 'trade' or 'finance' without the need of fighting—appeals greatly to the class of people who direct things here. German methods appal them. They wouldn't fight any more than the English. They want to dine in peace & have the fine things of life through exploitation—not through embattled strength. The English way of getting what you want appeals to them—it is discreet, "respectable," and sanctimonious. I prefer the German—the "brutality" of men not afraid to die for their country or to pour out their blood in rivers for their faith in their fatherland.

All that I ever did that was unselfish or chivalrous in public life—and I have striven to be both in all my public service—has been done with the image of Ireland before me. I worked for Ireland always—for Ireland & the ideals of my own people when I went to find Leopold on the Congo and Julio Arana on the Putumayo.

And please God before I die I'll do something still for Ireland!

And so my dear old far-off friend of other days—of Lourenco Marques! ah! so far-off now—all this means that I can't go & bathe up the Hudson or meander thro' its woods with you & drink your good coffee. I am, please God, going back to Ireland very soon now—to stand behind the Volunteers in keeping my country's conscience clean if that can be, in this orgie of greed and plunder masquerading under the garb of a "holy war." If I, and those who stand with me in Ireland, can ensure it John Bull shall do his own fighting to "dismantle the German Navy" and "sweep German commerce from the Seas." Let Lord Curson, instead of killing the Kaiser with his mouth (the contemptible cad!) go to the front & face the Kaiser's sons. Let Lord Crewe instead of "venturing the opinion that now the Home Rule Bill is on the Statute Book, Irishmen will rush to enlist," go & enlist himself, as every German prince & peer has done. Let Lloyd George, instead of forging Silver Bullets & Lies of base metal go out as a Volunteer to guard the fields of Belgium & the vineyards of France.

No—these preux chevaliers, instead of bearing the brunt of that war they have plotted & planned for years are calling for "more expensive food & drink" in the smart London restaurants "to celebrate the German defeats"—by the French!

I knew Lord Curzon—once—& I've met Lloyd George & all the rest of them. I'd walk out of any room they were in today & prefer the company of the waiters.

Unless this country makes up its mind to fight, if need be, for its neutrality, Great Britain will destroy its neutrality & compel it to take sides against the "enemy of civilization." I see the game being steadily played here—by the Kiplings, Conan Doyles, H. G. Wells, Winston Churchills & all the rest of the Westminster troupe of artists. They are only beginning today. Just breaking ground—but the trenches are being dug for an assault on American neutrality all along the line—to open fire with a universal howl whenever John Bull gets a serious reverse at sea. Let the German navy score, by chance, any decided naval victory and we shall find a concerted yell for help sent up throughout all the "American press." "Common ideals," "our Anglo-Saxon heritage of culture," "the cause of human freedom" &c &c—all these will be at stake—and a deliberate effort will be made to stampede this people into the camp of the Allies.

I am as certain of it as I was three years ago that this war against Germany would be brought off. The plans are already drawn up & everything prepared & laid.

Two elements alone in this population—perhaps three—will prevent it being carried out—or will try to prevent it. They may succeed.

In any case the thing will be much harder to accomplish than the British Government hopes—And if it succeeds it will end this republic. It will turn this country into a vassal State to that one holding the Empire of the Seas.

Until there is freedom at Sea: equality of sea rights for all: equal opportunity: & Navalism recognized as a greater foe to Humanity than Militarism there can be no peace to mankind; no security against war—but an eternal pledge that War to break that unjust monopoly must surely come, and come again, until the mastery of the Seas is dissolved in the neutrality of the Ocean.

Yours ever
ROGER CASEMENT.

P. S.

You might send me back the "Manifesto." I have only a few copies left here. I sent a lot to Ireland for publication there—but the Censor (or "Smeller-Out" to use the Zulu phrase) who opens all letters may think this too immoral to be contributed to the Irish people. So I shall continue to send it by devious ways. I wrote it, in a heat of passion, jumping from bed with rage, when I read Lord Crewe's appeal to Irishmen to enlist & John Redmond's cowardly & blackguard endorsement of it. He—Redmond—is unmasked at last—& never again will any Irishman who believes in the cause of Ireland do anything but spit upon his name.

My dear Bigelow,

Thanks for your letter of 7th. I am sorry I can't go to stay with you in response to your kindly renewed invitation. I am going West on a long journey and don't expect to be back in this end of U. S. A. for a little time.

Excuse so hurried a line of thanks and regrets.

I never write in a passion. I write only as I think and feel & say with my pen what I should say with my mouth. The "treasonable" document is good sound common-sense and will appeal to those whose good opinion I value most—my own poor countrymen at home.

With all good wishes and kind thoughts

Yours ever
ROGER CASEMENT.

REAL PACIFISTS

By Robert Herrick.

THE song of the professional pacifist is less loud these days, at least in the eastern parts of the United States. Thereto the trampling feet of "preparedness hosts" seem to have drowned out the protests of the peace-at-any-price pacifists. If I am not mistaken, the temper of the country has changed markedly these last six months in regard to the necessity and the right of self-defense. Our people are none the less pacific in desire and intention, but they are more realistic as to their situation and the nature of this universe in which they are obliged to live. We are all pacifists at heart—or almost all of us, including the colonel—but a wholesome majority is beginning to realize that it is not enough to desire peace; a nation, as an individual, must work for it; if need be, fight for it.

The pacifist propaganda is like quack medicine for disease, or worse. That ark of peace which set sail from our shores with so much ill-advised newspaper notoriety can hardly be dignified even as quack medicine: it was comparable rather to the incantations of primitive medicine men or the medieval use of relics. The Ford idea of peace, apparently, is that a sufficient beating of drums and much fervid exorcising of the evil demon will immediately arrest the disease of war and shortly work a "cure," restoring health to the bodies and minds of the fighting peoples. Peace congresses, with their resolutions calling upon all the powers that are to lay down their arms are more like patent medicine. Good women, especially, are prone to this method of relieving their emotions and medicining the fever of war. They like to get together in some conspicuous place, to talk earnestly and vote "strong" resolutions, believing that thus they are doing their part to exorcise the evil demon from the human, especially from the male breast. It is like the attempt to cure appendicitis by the use of a special brand of breakfast food or consumption by a popular cough mixture. The longing for the miracle is, surely, deeply seated in humanity!

A more serious type of the pacifist may be compared to old fashioned allopathic doctors who solemnly believe themselves to be "scientific" when they administer powerful "specifics." They scorn incantations and patent medicines, but they have faith in drugs, especially in their own drugs. Such are the gentlemen of "The League to Enforce Peace," academic in their training, believers in system and method. They have found a sure method for the cure of war, the right drug, specific for the disease. Excellent! But these doctors have failed to take into consideration the constitution of the patient, who in this case has an exceedingly complex and difficult constitution with ancient predispositions towards the war disease. Their specific should work. But if mankind were reasonable enough to take their medicine there would be no need for administering it. Anybody can think up half a dozen infallible ways of making world peace provided he could adopt the world to suit his system. But that takes too long.

INTELLIGENT people have become as skeptical of the old fashioned doctor with his strong drugs, specific for "cures," as of the out and out medicine man with his incantations or of the miracle workers. Medicine has made great advances these last years—in one direction, not in the giving of drugs, but in preventing disease; in finding the causes and curing them; in remedying conditions that breed diseases. Preventive medicine, hygiene and sanitation, vaccination and innoculation against certain diseases such as typhoid and smallpox, pneumonia and tuberculosis—that is the slow way in which diseases are becoming eradicated, not "cured."

The treatment of typhoid and tuberculosis, I believe, varies today very little from what it was years ago, but the danger of contracting these diseases under normal conditions of life is far less than ever before. The wise physician today realizes that little can be done towards curing the sick beyond alleviating discomforts and assisting nature by removing obstructions. Nature must fight it out with a disease once it has become firmly rooted in the patient's body. But a great deal can be done to fortify the system so that the evil germs cannot take root and multiply, also to remove the possibilities of infection. Malaria and yellow fever, tuberculosis and other human plagues have largely been controlled and their destructive force reduced by the patient application of preventive methods to bodily disease.

PACIFISTS should ponder this analogy between war and disease and enroll themselves among those who practice preventive medicine with patience and thoroughness, not expecting quick or spectacular results, rather than with the fakers and quacks, who depend upon fervor, faith, and much speaking for speedy "cures." For war is a disease, an intricate, obscure, and malignant disease of the body politic, likely to attack humanity in epidemic plague form, but also endemic, as the doctors say of yellow fever in the tropics.

Pacifists must realize that once well started the disease will run its course with very little attention to their feeble gestures. Their business is to see that it does not get well started, that the body politic is healthy, that hidden seats of disease are aerated, that symptoms are promptly dealt with. It is lost time to exhort humanity to be good and peaceful when it is suffering from the derangement of the war disease throughout its system. More profitable—apart from binding up the wounds and caring for the patient—is it to set out on the search for causes, near and remote, of the dire pestilence.

WAR, it should be recognised, is nothing more than an excessive manifestation of evil tendencies always latent in human conditions. Flatly, war is simply an acute form of competition and rivalry between groups of human beings. It is curious that we encourage the spirit of competition and rivalry as a sign of healthy activity in the normal working of individuals as long as it does not break forth in premeditated armed strife between groups. We believe in lively competition among our young men in sport, among our grown men in business and politics, among groups of citizens in finance, industry, trade, and among nations in obtaining "spheres of influence," colonization and trade privileges, just so long as these activities do not lead to armed force. We sharpen human appetites and thus feed the germs that ultimately break forth in war fever.

We consider it honorable, praiseworthy for citizens of a peaceful country to obtain valuable concessions of mineral and oil lands in a semi-civilized community, to exploit these sources of wealth, and when they come into conflict with prejudices of ignorant and jealous natives who do not like to see their birthright taken from them for a mess of pottage we fall back upon patter about "manifest destiny," "superior races," and all that, and vote to protect the "interests and property of our citizens" by arms if necessary.

We look on while one section of our nationals insults the feelings and discriminates against members of a stronger nation like Japan, even when it may lead to war with that nation. I might continue with instance after instance where wars are assiduously cultivated in times of peace, and no pacifist ever raises his voice against the abominable wickedness and folly of such conduct, national and individual.

ISN'T here the real field for the efforts of our good pacifists? Isn't it wiser for them to put their enthusiasm and their idealism into the huge task of preventive medicine against war rather than into the futile propaganda they engage in at present? Of course, the humble task of preventive medicine is far less spectacular than the favorite methods of our peace advocates. It is more thrilling to set sail for Europe in the peace ark, with one's expenses paid, even under the fire of ridicule, than it is to inspect and aerate the vile swamp of "dollar diplomacy" and get after those statesmen at Washington who dare traffic in it.

It is much pleasanter to assemble at The Hague with a ray of universal limelight falling on you and pronounce simple platitudes—if you are a woman—than it is to denounce predatory pacific males of your acquaintance who are breeding war germs in their steam heated offices under the guise of enterprise and initiative. It is much more graceful to interview the president of the United States on one of his busy days, as a member of a league for peace, than to look up your congressman and take him to task because he is conniving at the exploitation of Mexico, let us say, by rich capitalists. It is more brilliant to tour the capitals of the warring nations and exhort their chancellors to an immediate peace than it is, let us say, to study the inner meaning of the aggressive foreign trade campaign which we are entering upon with such a blowing of trumpets.

IT is always easier to cultivate a hectic passion for an abstraction, to voice volubly platitudes, to vote resolutions and grant newspaper interviews, than it is to do the small, obscure work of understanding and persuasion on the small obscure points that ultimately swell into disease. The real pacifists are not the men and women whose names are attached to programs, who offer resolutions and lead "campaigns" for peace. They are rather those humble, right-minded citizens who hate greed, and unfair competition, and cowardice, and meanness wherever they find them at work, either domestically or internationally, who know that special privileges and graft lead to shot and shell some day as surely as electricity in the physical atmosphere leads to lightning. They do not believe that the real wealth of a nation lies in its balance of trade one way or the other, in getting ahead of anybody, whether stranger or neighbor; they do not believe that any nation is predestined to take possession of any other nation's or people's lands or goods, no matter how inferior the one may be. And the real pacifists say these things, among others, in season and out, and are ready to fight to prevent such wrongs being done.

JAPAN TIRELESS IN ATTEMPTS TO BROADEN POWER

History of Nippon Shows Policy Has Been Toward Steady Expansion.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

Japan's first contact with the white man taught her the need to protect herself and that such weapons and organization as she had were inadequate. Instead of yielding and continuing to do so, as China has done, the leaders of Japan decided to modernize the country. They brought about the reformation which has caused her to be accepted as one of the great powers.

While a constitution was granted, it is so limited as to leave the power in the hands of a few, with the result that a continuous consistent policy has been followed from the beginning.

These few were clear sighted men who have been determined to so firmly establish their country that not only can no other nation impose upon Japan, but also that Japan will be able to enforce its will in every dispute. Sentimentality has not been allowed to interfere.

Japan Needs Colonies.

In looking over Japan's position certain points were clear. The Japanese islands have an area about equal to that of Montana. They are so mountainous that but one-tenth can be cultivated. With a population of 50,000,000, increasing at the rate of about 2 per cent per annum, it is evident that the building up of large manufactures with consequent overseas trade is as essential as it is to Great Britain. Even with a large trade, a considerable number must emigrate to find a living, just as has been the case with Great Britain.

Unless Japan wishes to lose these emigrants she must have colonies to which they may go. Japan recognizes the fact that a hunt for trade and colonies inevitably causes dispute with rivals which periodically lead to war. Her nearest neighbors are Russia, China, and the United States. China has a population of 433,000,000, Russia 155,000,000, and the United States nearly 100,000,000. In other words, should these nations be equally as well prepared as Japan, they could easily enforce their will in any dispute which might arise.

Strives to Help Trade.

For Japan to hold her own it is essential that she considerably increase her population. From the beginning the Japanese have bitterly resented the white man's assumption of superiority.

For these reasons her policy has been persistently directed to the building up of trade; to the obtaining of bases on trade routes; to the annexation of lands for her emigrants; to the absorption of peoples who can be assimilated; and to the recognition by the white race of the equality of the yellow.

Clearly recognizing that the carrying out of such policies necessitates the complete defense of her territory and the ability to promptly and efficaciously back up such demands as she may see fit to make, she has built up a first class army and navy.

Up to the Franco-Prussian war the French army was the model followed. After that war the German army was closely copied. The British navy was the model chosen for her sea forces.

Gains Control of China.

Japan's disputes with China for the supremacy of Corea date back many hundreds of years. Finally the Chino-Japanese war virtually gave Japan control. At the same time she took frim China Formosa and the Pescadores islands and Port Arthur. Russia, France, and Germany made her give up Port Arthur, which was later occupied by Russia.

Russia and Japan both used the Boxer outbreak of 1900 as an excuse to advance their interests in China. Japan landed troops in Amoy Fookien province, which is opposite Formosa. However, the powers objected so vigorously she was compelled to withdraw them. In the north she could do nothing because of the power and jealousy of Russia.

The expansion of Russia in the north ultimately led to the Russo-Japanese war, as a result of which Japan virtually seized Corea, Southern Manchuria, and the Liao-Tung peninsula.

Japan had a great deal to do with the Chinese revolution and on several occasions tried to take advantage of the dis-Great Britain's consent to the carrying out of her program of almost complete interference in Chinese affairs. In spite of our interest in the open door and in the successful establishment of reasonably liberal government among the Chinese, she ignored us on this subject.

As far back as 1892 Japan displayed interest in the Philippines. In this year she is known to have helped these Filipinos planning insurrection and she has been at it ever since. Her activities with respect to the Hawaiian islands was the cause of their inhabitants' final, most urgent, and successful appeal to the United States for annexation.

Against Hawaiian Annexation.

Japan protested against this annexation. She never has withdrawn the protest. At the time of the Fashoda incident which nearly caused war between France and England, the Japanese had an expeditionary force ready to embark and seize French Indo China in the same way she has recently seized Tsin-Tao a short while ago. Her activities in the Dutch East Indies led the Dutch government to seek an alliance with the United States. Her activities and encouragement of plots against the white man throughout eastern Asia and British India is well known to every resident of these countries who is acquainted with inside facts.

Since the beginning of the present war she has seized a number of islands formerly belonging to Germany. While promising to turn them over to Australia, she has never done so. At the time she compelled Great Britain's acquiescence to her virtual control of Chinese affairs, she compelled us to yield on the immigration question.

Leader of Yellow Race.

While not attracting much attention in this country, this act will be hailed throughout the yellow world as an example of Japan's power and the value of her leadership and thus tend to strengthen her hold among all oriental peoples. Thus step by step Japan is accomplishing her program.

The Russians have been driven back from a position directly menacing her and compelled to recognize Japanese territorial and commercial ambitions in China. Germany has been eliminated from the Pacific. Her only possible oriental rival, China, has been divided against itself and is practically in Japanese hands. European and American trade has already been put in a position where it cannot compete with Japanese trade.

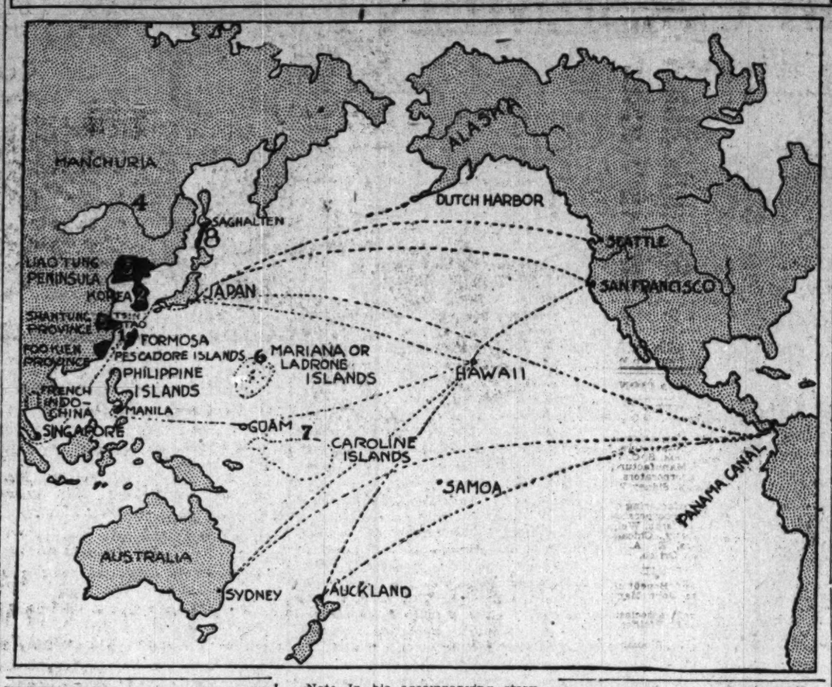
Leader to Yellow Race.

Her population has been increased by that of Corea and soon will be by that of Manchuria, of Shantung, and probably that of other Chinese provinces as well. The yellow peoples everywhere have been stirred up against the white and taught to look to Japan as their leader.

Great Britain is helpless in the Pacific because of the necessity to keep her fleet in European waters to protect herself. France has never had the sea power necessary to exert decisive influence in Pacific affairs.

The United States, through its possession of Alaska, the Hawaiian islands, Panama, Samoa, and the Philippines, has the possibilities of control of Pacific trade routes which we do not begin to appreciate, but which the Japanese thoroughly appreciate and would make considerable sacrifices to obtain.

Territory Brought Under Japanese Control Since 1895



Note—In his accompanying story Capt. Henry J. Reilly tells of Japan expansion as illustrated by this map.

1. Formosa and Pescadores islands.
2. Corea.
3. Laitung peninsula.
4. Southern Manchuria.
5. Shantung, including Tain Tao.
6. Marianne or Ladrone islands.
7. Caroline islands.
8. Lower half Saghalien regained from Russia.

—— Principal trade routes.

PRICE OF WESTERN PACIFIC IS FIXED AT $18,000,000.

San Francisco, May 27.—United States District Judge Maurice T. Dooling fixed $18,000,000 as the "upset" price for the sale of the Western Pacific railway today in the foreclosure suit brought by the Equitable Trust Company of New York.

The court said that its judgment was based on the only concrete facts before it as to the present earning capacity of the road, which is now about $1,000,000 annually above taxes, maintenance and operating expenses.

A special master is to be appointed to proceed with the sale as directed by the court. The decision brings to an end a protracted contest between the various interests concerned with the future of the Western Pacific railway.

HE OBJECTS TO PICTURING SOLDIERS ON LIQUOR ADS.

Descendant of Ethan Allen Writes Army Officials Asking Way to Force Removal of Sign.

William C. Dickerson, a descendant of Ethan Allen and a line of fighting men, objects to the signs of breweries and distilleries which insinuate that American soldiers are drinkers.

He has written a letter to the commanding officers of the central department asking if they cannot compel the disuse of such signs.

The sign he refers to advertises a brand of whisky and pictures two soldiers, one in the uniform of Gen. Jackson's men and another in the modern uniform. It bears the inscription, "From Jackson's Soldiers to Funston's Men."

"The writer believes," Mr. Dickerson protests, "that it is about time the United States army and its uniform sever connection with the old idea that the army is composed of nothing more than a bunch of bums and whisky soaks, but ads like this only serve to help along that impression."

Mr. Dickerson was informed that the army officials could do nothing and the matter would have to be handled by city ordinance.

ERIN'S VICEROY FOUND USELESS AFTER 700 YEARS

Ancient Office Abolished on Recommendation of Last Incumbent, Lord Wimborne.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]

Save for a few of the shopkeepers in Dublin, who look forward to the castle season as the epoch of their annual harvest, there are few who will feel disposed to find fault with the intention of the British government, announced by Prime Minister Asquith in the house of commons last week, to abolish the office of viceroy of Ireland, for some time to come at any rate, and most probably forever.

The evidence furnished by its incumbent, Lord Wimborne, before the royal commission, presided over by Lord Hardinge, engaged in investigating the circumstances of the recent rebellion in the Emerald isle, has revealed to the public the utter uselessness of the post. Well intentioned, Wimborne found that its functions were entirely of an ornamental character, that he was restricted to the rôle of a mere decorative figurehead, and that in spite of the pomp and ceremony with which he was surrounded he enjoyed even less executive power than the head clerks of the various government departments at Dublin.

Had No Authority.

He claims, in a rather pathetic manner, that no one in authority would accord any heed to his warnings as to the imminence of trouble, that his recommendations for the adoption of precautionary measures were spurned, and that his demand for military reinforcements were ignored. He intimates, indeed, that he was given to understand that although he was the king's governor general at Dublin, he had nothing whatsoever to do with the administration of the government of the Emerald isle, which was vested entirely in the hands of his chief secretary, the Rt. Hon. Augustin Birrell, and in the latter's undersecretary, Col. Sir Matthew Nathan.

He was likewise given to understand that although in theory and in official rank Mr. Birrell was merely his chief secretary, yet the latter, by reason of his possession of a seat in the cabinet, was in a position to be far more thoroughly acquainted with the views and intentions of crown and government concerning Ireland. Indeed, Lord Wimborne's testimony before the Hardinge commission went to show that it was such a ridiculous sham that there is little prospect of its ever being revived.

Favored by Nationalists.

It has frequently been suggested, especially during the latter half of the nineteenth century, that the office should be abolished. But curiously enough, this reform was invariably opposed by the Irish Nationalists on the ground that it would impair the rights of Ireland to be considered as a distinct kingdom, and that it might endanger her prospects of obtaining her long sought for autonomy. But now that home rule has been conceded to the Emerald isle by both houses of parliament at Westminster, and by the crown, and that the application of the home rule act, temporarily delayed by reason of the war, is liable to receive enforcement at any moment by means of an order in council, the Nationalists will no longer oppose the abolition of the viceroyalty of Ireland.

The large sums wasted on the maintenance of the costly viceregal court at Dublin castle could be applied to far more profitable purposes and it has been suggested that the money might be employed in the maintenance of a royal residence in Ireland, where either the king and queen, or some of the members of their house might spend a portion of the year, thereby fostering trade and attracting rich visitors to the island.

Not Office for Royalty.

It would not do, however, for any scion of the reigning house to accept the position of governor general of Ireland. It was repeatedly urged upon Queen Victoria that she should appoint some prince of her house to "reign" in her name at Dublin castle, and to hold viceregal court there in her behalf. But she very sagaciously refused to countenance any such project, which was frowned down in the same way by King Edward when he succeeded to the crown. The sovereign, as a constitutional ruler, has often been orced to give way to the wishes of parliament, and to those of the government, for the time being, and to sanction things repugnant, especially where Ireland was concerned. But neither Queen Victoria nor Edward VII. was able to see any advantage to be derived from identifying the monarch or the royal family more than absolutely necessary with acts of policy toward Ireland that have sometimes been dictated more by a partisan pirit than by a sense of justice or public interest. The popularity of the royal family would have suffered grievously in Ireland and abroad had a prince of the blood been obliged as a partisan viceroy to assume the odium of distasteful measures devised by Liberal, Conservative or Unionist cabinets in Downing street and to identify himself with its views.

Viceroyalty Ancient Office.

The viceroyalty of Ireland is a very ancient office, which dates from the reign of Henry II., the first of its incumbents being Hugh de Lacy, in 1172. It is identified in the eyes of the Irish people with every form of English muddleheaded officialdom, despotism, and oppression, for the last 700 years. Castle rule stands for everything that is bad in the eyes of the Irish people. And then it must be confessed that the vast majority of viceroys of Ireland have been men of the most transparent mediocrity.

STEALS RAGS TO BUY FOOD.

Lodger at Industrial League Home Calls Meals "Not Fit for Dog" and Judge Discharges Him.

Fred Theodorf, one of the men who has received aid from the Chicago Christian Industrial league, had no complaint to make of receiving $4 a week and lodging, but he objected to the food served by the league when arraigned yesterday before Judge La Buy on a charge of stealing thirty-five pounds of rags and selling them. He admitted stealing the rags, but said he did it to get money to buy food. He termed the league's food "not fit for a dog." Supt. Harry Morris defended the food as wholesome, but Judge La Buy discharged Theodorf.

Life Insurance
that gives you money's worth—and more

Not only does this new way save you 15% to 40% of the usual cost of life insurance, but it also gives you the right kind of insurance service, based on thoroughly sound, tried and tested principles and scientifically computed rates.

4% Reserves — Low Premiums

The old line companies maintain 3½ or 3½% reserves—we maintain 4% reserves based on a standard table of mortality; consequently our premium rate is lower. Incorporated under Illinois laws, more than 100% solvent and with ample resources, this Association is not an institution for profit. Men and women insurable on equal terms.

SECURITY

The Heart of Chicago's Loop

ASSETS

Nine Million Dollars

A bond of the best class affords you one dollar security for your dollar. Here you secure nearly three to one. Is this margin of security sufficient for you? With such a margin behind your money would you feel satisfied that it was impregnably secure? Have you, in all your business experience, ever been offered more security—have you ever been given as much? Furthermore, it is security such as you have always preferred. It is security prized as highly as any of its kind in Chicago, by all men—the shrewdest, the keenest and the best informed.

THE SECURITY

The security we speak of is Realty—Chicago Realty—Loop Realty—CENTRAL Loop Realty—not realty on Van Buren, on Washington, on Franklin, nor on Lake—but realty that is absolutely the HEART OF THE LOOP—the busiest corner, day and night, in the city. On this site will soon be completed a building of extraordinary efficiency. From a practical, architectural, artistic, engineering and utility standpoint this building is the last word. It is now sixty per cent complete and in daily operation making money. The service it renders the public is essential and in tremendous demand. Not a nickel has been wasted, not a dollar begrudged, to make it the finest structure of its type in this or any other city.

We want you to own a part of this security. We want you to estimate the value of the business and then compare it by reference to the actual figures. We want you to go through our building as now complete. We want you to go from a point seventy-two feet below the sidewalk to another twenty-one stories in height above the street and see for yourself that it is doing the work designed and operating at CAPACITY. We want you to see an enterprise that is one of the most successful of its kind in America—and see it now—when only sixty per cent complete—averaging $151,021.41 a month, or $1,812,257.50 a year.

We want you to see the business done every MINUTE, to watch us turn cash business away because it cannot be taken care of—to examine the sworn official record of the income and disbursements—and then, and not until then—decide that with all this Safety behind your money, your money will be absolutely secure.

THE INVESTMENT OFFERED

The business now being done yields over one-third of a million dollars profit annually. We wish to complete our building and increase our NET PROFITS to $700,000.00 a year or over. The completed building is necessary—is demanded by the public right now. To complete it calls for $1,185,000.00. Of this amount we now have available $813,000.00. $400,000.00 more is required. We invite you to subscribe to a part of this $400,000.00. The assets are over $9,000,000.00—the obligations will be about $2,400,000.00. Is this security—in the form of a most prosperous business and realty, buildings and good will, amounting to over $9,000,000.00—satisfactory to you? If so, we will next show it to you, and AFTER that tell you what PROFITS and extra wealth you will secure by joining us now.

The day you come in your money's worth will increase fifty per cent. If you have five hundred dollars it will become seven hundred and fifty; if you have $1,000.00, it will become $1,500.00; if you have $5,000.00, it will become $7,500.00—and so on. And the same day you come in your money will begin to earn seven per cent dividends as well as be entitled to share in additional profits of the company.

THE PROFITS

Not only do you get security and safety, not only do you secure seven per cent dividends payable July 1st and Jan. 1st—but you also have an ownership interest in this entire property—on a most liberal basis. No bond with such superlatively good backing pays anything like the income—and none of equal worth offers you a handsome bonus—a speculative profit of great importance and attractiveness. This business—now entering upon the most prosperous period of the nineteen years of its existence—has always paid dividends and LARGE dividends. It will make more money hereafter by hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly than ever before when the new section is completed, and we can prove to your entire satisfaction that it will do so.

Act Immediately

Accept our invitation to make an exhaustive examination of this security. Write us and we will arrange for you to make a personal inspection of our property, including the audited records. Then, after you realize how substantial this proposition is, we will show you how very profitable—without sacrifice of one iota of safety—it will be for you to go into it. We promise, with entire confidence, to show you an attractive and ABSOLUTELY SAFE investment.

An inquiry carries with it no obligation to invest—and the right to withdraw this offer or reject any investment is reserved.

NEW YORK JUDGE NAMED BY PRICE AT IRISH HEARING

Witness Says Large Amount of American Gold Was Sent to Sinn Feiners.

DUBLIN, via London, May 27.—The names of Judge Daniel Cohalan of the New York state Supreme court and Dennis Spellissy, a New York lawyer, were mentioned by Maj. Price in his testimony before the Irish commission investigating the Sinn Fein revolt in connection with money sent from America to the Sinn Feiners.

Maj. Price said that $100,000, mostly American gold, had reached the Irish revolutionists during the first six months after the war broke out. The Sinn Feiners then withdrew all their funds from the banks and stopped making further deposits, so that it was impossible to trace later sums received by them.

The witness added, however, that he was certain that large sums had been remitted subsequently from the United States.

Denied by Cohalan.

New York, May 27.—Justice Cohalan said today that it was "absurd, ridiculous" to say that he had "anything directly to do with any money sent from America to the Sinn Feiners.

"There was a fund raised here by Irish sympathizers," Justice Cohalan added, "but everybody in the United States knew of that fund, and Maj. Price was divulging no secret when he told of it on the witness stand."

Lawyer Says "Half Told."

Dennis Spellissy said that Maj. Price had "not told half of what we did over here on this side" to free Ireland.

"I am the national treasurer of the fund which was started to help the revolutionists," Mr. Spellissy said. "My report up to May 24 showed that $47,985 had been received. The fight to free Ireland will be kept up more vigorously than ever."

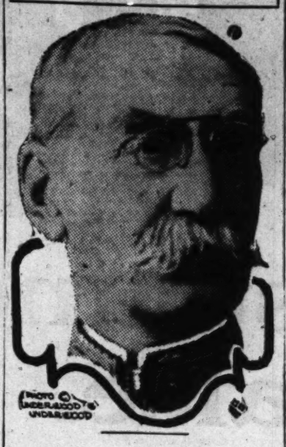
CUDAHY TAX IS COLLECTED.

U. S. Summarily Takes $8,000 from Northern Trust Company, Executor of Estate.

The department of internal revenue has quietly collected from the Northern Trust company, executor of the estate of John Cudahy, nearly $8,000 income tax due on the earnings of $150,000 which Mr. Cudahy made on the board of trade in 1913. Investigators found Mr. Cudahy owed that much on back taxes, but the payment of it was protested. Word came from Washington Friday to collect the tax summarily.

SAVIOR OF PARIS DEAD

Gen. Gallieni, Who Gathered a Big French Army on German Wing and Forced Retreat of Von Kluck, Passes Away.



GEN. GALLIENI IS DEAD; DROVE GERMANS FROM PARIS

Man Who Forced Army of Von Kluck to Retreat from French Capital Expires After Operation.

PARIS, May 27.—Gen. Gallieni, until recently French minister of war and popularly known as the "savior of Paris," died today at Versailles following an operation for kidney trouble.

Gallieni, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, was one of the most brilliant members of the French general staff. His daring stroke against the Germans early in the war not only had much to do with saving Paris from capture by the kaiser's armies, but marked a turning point in the European struggle.

Gallieni became minister of war Oct. 29, 1915, and was succeeded by Gen. Roques March 15, 1916, resigning on account of ill health. He underwent an operation for kidney trouble May 18.

IRISH SOCIETY DECRIES IRISH REVOLT DEATHS

Fellowship Club Resolutions Say Patriots Were Treated as Heathen Subjects.

Resolutions criticizing the English government in its treatment of the Irish rebels were passed by the Irish Fellowship club at its weekly luncheon yesterday in the Hotel La Salle.

The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, We, the members of the Irish Fellowship club of Chicago, recognize the historic truth that Ireland as a nation has never accepted England as her conquerer, that the act of union between Great Britain and Ireland was accomplished by fraud and force, and that Ireland's sons have never surrendered the right to establish national independence on Irish soil; and,

"Whereas, Although the English government extended clemency to the leaders of the recent revolt against British rule in South Africa, this same government is now engaged in the extremest measure of reprisal against the leaders of the most recent uprising in Ireland; and,

Treated Like Heathen Subjects.

"Whereas, The leaders of the latest uprising, scholars, poets, journalists, and patriots of rare literary worth and distinction, were compelled to surrender unconditionally to England, and in harmony with her methods when dealing with heathen subjects, were denied that consideration which obtains among civilized nations to prisoners of war, and were executed with a haste and brutality that shocked mankind;

"Resolved, That we abhor and detest the criminal rule of England in Ireland, and invite the attention of the American people to the hypocrisy and mendacity of Britain's claim as the protector and champion of weak and smaller nations, while trampling upon Ireland's liberties.

Pledge Support to Irish.

"Be it further resolved, That we extend in this dark hour to the people of Ireland our profound sympathy and pledge to them our support in their heroic and unceasing struggle in the cause of Ireland's freedom, a struggle that has won for them the admiration of mankind.

"Be it finally resolved, That we shall ever cherish the memories of Patrick Pearse and his brave compatriots, who in dying for their country reasserted to the world Ireland's undying claim to nationality."

Saloon Case Dismissed.

Charges of selling liquor without a license against William Skidmore and John Dennison yesterday were dismissed by Judge Kearns. A similar charge against Michael J. Fritsel was postponed.

GUGGENHEIM WINS A POINT IN SUIT AGAINST BROTHERS.

New York Court Denies Motion of Defendants to Dismiss Action Seeking Recovery of $10,000,000

New York, May 27.—William Guggenheim today won the first round in his legal fight to recover $10,000,000 from his brothers, Isaac, Daniel, Murry, Solomon, and Simon, when Justice Benedict of the Supreme court denied a motion of the defendants to have the case dismissed because the facts stated in the action were not sufficient.

William Guggenheim charged in his complaint that he had signed away his copartnership rights as a member of the old firm of M. Guggenheim's Sons in Chile mining properties worth $60,000,000 without knowing their value.

KING EIGHT CYLINDER

ANOTHER OWNER ENDORSES THE KING 8

The picture is of Arnold Joerns, 7662 Sheridan Road, who recently purchased a King "Eight." And here is his endorsement:

"I received the surprise of my life the first time I tried to drive my King 8 (my first car). I had been warned that a week would be a short time to learn in. Much to my astonishment I mastered the car in five minutes and drove it through the loop, through the Rush street jam, and home. There were no complications. It was simply a matter of steering, stepping on the accelerator and occasionally pushing the brakes. No shifting of gears, unless I wanted to, and absolute control.

"I can unhesitatingly recommend the King 8 to any one who wants a combination of simplicity, flexibility and power. This car has been a most pleasant surprise to me."

SIMPLICITY, FLEXIBILITY, POWER, ECONOMY —an unbeatable combination in a motor car. When they are mentioned—King 8 is the answer.

KING 8

is daily setting records in the things that COUNT to the pleasure car driver, which other cars have yet to equal.

We have yet to see or hear of any unusual SHOW DRIVING STUNT by any car in the King 8 class that we cannot do as well or better. We openly challenge comparison—we will welcome any competitive test—because we KNOW that its PERFORMANCE will SELL you a King 8, too.

Impossible To Get So Much Motor Car Value For The Money

WE FIND this is the attitude of many people who come into our salesroom—before they know anything about the Maxwell.

Not until the Maxwell is shown and demonstrated to them—until they sit in it and examine the finish—until they ride in it—or perhaps not until they drive it themselves, do they realize what a tremendous value is offered in the Maxwell car.

It is not unusual that Maxwell value should not be known to everyone, because it is uncommon to find such a car for a good margin more than the Maxwell price.

The Maxwell stands absolutely alone in a highly competitive field, for the amount of value it offers for the price.

Appearance—The lines of the Maxwell are decidedly attractive. There is no break in the contour from the radiator to the back of the car. The fenders are gracefully shaped. All metal parts are enameled or nickel-plated. The upholstery is deep and well-finished. From any angle it is a car that the owner can be proud of.

Motor—The engine in the Maxwell car is not equalled by any other four-cylinder engine of its size. And we know of larger and more expensive cars that have less able power plants. The Maxwell engine carries its load through mud and sand or over the steepest grades without a falter.

Quality—The materials in the Maxwell car are the best that can be bought and the workmanship that turns them into finished parts is no less excellent. It is only the large production of the Maxwell factories that makes it possible to put such quality of materials and workmanship into a car selling at the Maxwell price.

Economy—With its other attractive features, the Maxwell is a most economical car to own. Owners get 22 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles per set of tires. And the car is so durably built that repair expense is negligible.

We are sure you want a car such as we have described the Maxwell to be. If you will give us a few minutes of your time we are sure we can convince you that the Maxwell Car is an exceptional value. Come in today.

STATE OF TEXAS, COUNTY OF TARRANT } ss.

Mr. S. G. Kelso of Florence, Colorado, being duly sworn on his oath states that he was present at a test of the comparative merits of the Automatic Vapor Plug and the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor, made in Fort Worth, Texas, on April 19, 1916. The test was arranged by Mr. Marcus Bright of Fort Worth, a director in the Automatic Carburetor Company of Texas, which has the Texas State Agency for the Automatic Vapor Plug, and J. P. Newell, representing the American Device Company of Denver, which manufactures the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor.

A car and driver were selected by Mr. Bright. On the runs made on the same amount of gasoline, in the same direction, over the same roads and under equal conditions, both with the Automatic Vapor Plug and with the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor, there was shown an increased mileage of 50% with the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor over the Automatic Vapor Plug.

(Signed) S. G. KELSO.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of April, 1916.

The American Device Co., Denver, Colo.

Gentlemen: With regard to the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetors which have been installed on the cars we sell, will say that they are all giving excellent satisfaction as far as we know. One of our customers secured twenty-one miles to the gallon of gasoline on a trip over Lookout Mountain, returning by way of Morrison. He had been getting but seventeen miles on level roads and less in the mountains with his closed car.

On our Locomobile demonstrator we have secured a 40 per cent increase in gasoline mileage with the use of one of your devices.

We do not hesitate to recommend your device to our customers and wish you success with it. Yours very truly,

THE HUPP MOTOR SALES CO.,

George Ernsberger, of lawful age, being duly sworn, on his oath states that he is at this time and has been for the past three months driver of the Thomas Automobile, operating between Florence and the towns of Williamsburg, Rockvale, and Coal Creek, as a United States Mail and Passenger Stage; that the average daily consumption of gasoline for the operation of said car on its daily schedule of three trips has been five gallons and a fraction over, up until February 10, 1916; that on said date he attached to said car a Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor and that since attaching same the said car, operated on same schedule and under same conditions, has consumed three gallons of gasoline per day, thus giving an increase of 66 2-3 per cent in mileage.

GEO. ERNSBERGER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, a Notary Public in and for the County of Fremont, State of Colorado, this 15th day of February, 1916.

Gentlemen:

The Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor which you installed on my Ford taxicab last January has proved the best investment I ever made.

My work is very much the same, day after day, and my gasoline consumption has never varied for three years, averaging 30 gallons every two weeks. Since attaching your device I have bought only 20 gallons every two weeks. Further, I haven't had to clean a spark plug.

If I couldn't buy another, I wouldn't sell my Deitz for $50.00.

Yours truly,
DELL STEPHANS.

April 28, 1916.

Mr. Thomas Savery,
City.

Dear Sir:

We are very much pleased with your Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor that you have installed on our new Studebaker delivery car.

The best that we could get out of our car on our delivery route was about 8 miles per gallon of gasoline. After installing the Deitz device we made an actual test by putting 10 gallons of gasoline into the car and running it until it was all used up, while the speedometer showed that we had covered 126 miles from the above amount of gasoline. This was a gain of 4.6 miles on every gallon used, making 46 miles on 10 gallons of gasoline, or an average gain of 57½%.

We certainly cannot speak too highly for the instrument and trust that you will have the greatest success.

Yours very truly,
THE SCHEUER BROS. CO.

KANSAS

Wichita, Kas., May 12, 1916.

On a test of the Deitz Automatic Auxiliary Carburetor held this afternoon, tank and Carburetor were drained and one gallon of "Made in Wichita" Gasoline was put in the tank with speedometer reading 376 miles.

The Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor was then installed, and run started over city pavements and at an ordinary running speed. The motor stopped at Ninth and Topeka avenues with speedometer reading 400½ miles, giving a result of 24.5 miles to the gallon.

Device was then disconnected, tank refilled with one gallon of the same gasoline from the same container. The gallon was consumed at the end of 16.5 miles, running under same conditions, and at the same speed, with speedometer reading 417.41 miles.

This was effecting a saving of 33 1-3 per cent of gasoline consumed and giving an increase in mileage of 50 per cent.

This car was a 1916 Ford Roadster, driven by myself in both tests. With device attached, the efficiency of the motor was increased, giving remarkable acceleration and an abundance of power.

I have seen demonstrated many gasoline saving devices, but have not until today found one that I believed fulfilled every claim of the maker, and that would live up to the broad guarantee placed on this device. Yours very truly,

Dear Sirs: At your request I made a thorough test of the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor on one of the Municipal Garage cars, in my charge, a 1913 Model T Ford.

Running this car over the same streets, in the same direction, at the same speed, with equal power and under the same conditions in every respect, I found an increase of over 50 per cent in mileage with the device attached, over what it was without it.

Yours very truly, W. H. MILLER,
Superintendent.

Mr. C. D. Doychert, Care Montana Device Co., Butte, Mont.

Dear Sir: At your request we equipped one of our Ford laundry cars with the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor and the demonstration made by us showed better than 25 per cent saving of gasoline.

Besides, since the device has been installed we have been saving better than a gallon a day on that car.

Since installing the device we have looked at our spark plugs and find that the carbon has been entirely eliminated.

We have 16 laundry cars with our different companies, and herewith give you our order to equip these machines with the Deitz Device at your earliest convenience. I remain yours very truly,

JOHN SCOVID.

OKLAHOMA

J. P. Newell, Care Marion Hotel, Little Rock, Ark.

Dear Sir: On last Thursday, the 30th day of March, I equipped my Ford car with a Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor and gave the same a thorough test and tryout. Upon draining the car of every drop of gasoline and refilling with one-half gallon, I procured 138 city blocks of mileage without the device—and, under the same conditions, and with the car equipped with an Auxiliary Carburetor, I procured 216 blocks over the same route and under exactly the same conditions, showing an increase in mileage of 48 per cent.

Being so thoroughly impressed with the results obtained, and after still further demonstrations I went into joint contract with Mr. George Bowers of Oklahoma City for the exclusive distribution of the city and state of Oklahoma, contracting to use 1,650 devices for the coming year, 250 of which are to be shipped immediately. For the Benefit of all Automobile Owners who Have Water Cooled Cars:

On May 5, 1916, I tested out the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor. I used Model 13 Ford car No. 5276, that is used in the Street and Bridge Department, City of Dallas.

Without device, with feed line disconnected, I made 8.4 miles on one-half gallon of gasoline, running the car until it stopped.

With device I made 13.2 miles on one-half gallon of gasoline. In doing this I turned around and run over the same roads and went on until I had made the 13.2 miles. Yours very truly,

(Signed) BEN SIRA,
Supt. Street and Bridge Department.

CITY OF DALLAS,

To Whom It May Concern:

For the past three weeks I have been closely watching the practical workings and results obtained from the Deitz Auxiliary Carburetors installed by me as superintendent of the Municipal Garage on a number of the City of Dallas cars, upon instructions of M. B. Shannon, commissioner of finance.

The actual gasoline saving of gasoline on all cars from which accurate records were obtained was over 35% and in increased mileage over 55%.

The cars are all freer from carbon, the drivers report more power and no unsatisfactory results of any kind and I can truthfully say that I consider the device practical and a money saver and cheerfully recommend it to the consideration of automobile owners.

I can further say that I have heretofore investigated a number of so-called "gas savers" and this is the first one that I have found to be practical in every way.

(Signed) GORDON L. VAUGHAN,
Supt. of Municipal Garage.

Simple and Easy to Attach

The Deitz Auxiliary Carburetor can be attached to any car by any man in a few minutes WITHOUT DRIVING A SCREW OR BORING A HOLE in your radiator, manifold or engine, and, best of all, it works automatically.

These two illustrations show how the device is attached to different makes of cars, leading the air and warm vapor from the overflow pipe at the radiator to the permanent air intake at the carburetor.

BIG MEET TO CORNELL; MEREDITH SETS RECORD

Covers Quarter in World Time of :47 2-5—Murray Breaks Hurdle Mark

TABLE OF POINTS

Cornell	17	Harvard	11
Yale	20	Princeton	10
Stanford	22	Bowdoin	5
California	22	Syracuse	3
Penn	18	Penn State	2
Dartmouth	14	Mass Tech	5
Michigan	13

Cambridge, Mass., May 27.—Cornell won the intercollegiate track and field championship in the Harvard stadium this afternoon for the third consecutive year with one of the most evenly balanced athletic combinations that Trainer Jack Moakley has uncovered in many seasons. The Ithaca university athletes scored 45 points to Yale's 20, while the two Pacific coast universities, Stanford and California, tied for third place with 22 points each.

The ability of the Californians is attested by the fact that with small squads they outranked Pennsylvania, which scored 18 points; Dartmouth, with 14; Michigan, with 13; Harvard, with 11, and Princeton, with 10; Bowdoin, 5; Syracuse, 3; Penn State, 2; and Massachusetts Institute of Tehcnology, 1.

World's Mark to Meredith.

Capt. J. E. [Ted] Meredith of the Pennsylvania team, was the individual hero. The famous Olympic, national and intercollegiate champion closed his track career as a collegian by winning the 440 yard run in :47 2-5, which is a new world's record around a turn. The previous time, made by M. W. [Maxey] Long, at Travers Island, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1900, was :47 4-5. Meredith was only two-fifths of a second behind Long's record of 47 seconds flat on a straightaway course.

About an hour later Meredith raced home first in the half mile run, winning from a sterling group in 1:53, which was two-fifths of a second faster than the intercollegiate record made by D. S. Caldwell of Cornell on the same track two years ago.

Capt. F. S. Murray of Stanford fairly flew over the high hurdles, winning the 120 yard event in :15, thus clipping one-fifth of a second from the former record made by A. B. Shaw of Dartmouth in 1908. The Stanford star made the same time in his trial heat yesterday, but a record was not allowed on account of the wind.

Foss Fails to Break Mark.

Cornell nearly went into the record breaking class itself, for F. K. Foss, after winning the pole vault with 12 feet 8 inches, tried for 13 feet 2¾ inches. On his third attempt he cleared the bar, only to knock it off with his elbow.

The real class of the Ithaca runners was demonstrated in the two mile run, when they took the first four places. Up to that stage the other competing institutions were within striking distance of Cornell, Halfacre of Massachusetts Institute of Technology set the pace for the first mile, and then the Cornell group began to move up to the front. Hoffmire, last year's winner, and Potter were shoulder to shoulder at the mile and a half mark. Here Potter went into the lead with Hoffmire second. Frey passed the fast tiring Halfacre on the back stretch and Corwith, by a game spurt, just nosed Putman of Yale out of fourth place.

Mile Race to Windnagle.

Windnagle added his name to those of Ross and Potter as Cornell winners in the mile run. He ran a heady race, taking the lead from Overton of Yale after the latter had set the pace for three-quarters of the distance. Windnagle won by fifteen yards in 4:15, within 3-5 of a second of the record made by T. P. Jones two years ago. Windnagle's spurt carried Carroll of Michigan into second place, while Overton, by a game effort, held third position at the finish.

Meredith's great quarter and half mile races were due to the pace he was forced to set from the start to hold the lead. In the quarter mile he quickly overhauled Wilcox of Harvard after a poor start, but the Crimson sprinter stuck grimly at his shoulder until he was shaken off in the stretch, so tired that Riley of Dartmouth and Crim of Cornell passed him and won second and third places respectively.

Oler Star of Yale Team.

Yale's winning of second place was due in part to Capt. Oler's excellent work in the field events, ably assisted by Braden, Hampden, Gifford, Buck, and Bagel, all of whom counted with small point places. In this respect Yale was like Cornell, scoring in ten out of the thirteen events, although winning in only one.

Michigan's thirteen points came through Smith's first and second in the sprints and Carroll's second in the mile. Princeton also uncovered a fast dash man in W. B. Moore, who accounted for nine of the Tigers' ten points by winning first in the 220 yard and second in the 100. Worthington, Spear, and Riley were the chief point winners for Dartmouth.

Summary of Events.

One mile run—Won by L. V. Windnagle, Cornell; H. L. Carroll, Michigan, second; J. W. Overton, Yale, third; P. R. Wilson, Leland Stanford, fourth; R. S. Brown, M. I. T., fifth. Time, 4:15.

100 yard dash—Won by H. L. Smith, Michigan; W. B. Moore, Princeton, second; E. A. Bachner, Harvard, third; H. F. Vanwinkle, Cornell, fourth; H. I. Treadway, Yale, fifth. Time, :10.

440 yard run—Won by J. E. Meredith, University of Pennsylvania; E. C. Riley, Dartmouth, second; W. D. Crim, Cornell, third; W. W. Wilcox, Harvard, fourth; H. J. Richardson, Princeton, fifth. Time, :47 2-5. [New record.]

120 yard high hurdles—Won by F. S. Murray, Leland Stanford; L. E. Grubb, Cornell, second; L. R. Preble, California, third; J. K. Norton, Leland Stanford, fourth. Time, :15. [New record.]

16 pound hammer throw—Won by C. C. Gildersleeve, California, 153 feet 1 inch; J. W. Leadbetter, Bowdoin, second, 152 feet 4 inches; D. F. Richardson, California, third, 151 feet 9½ inches; C. L. Hageman, Cornell, fourth, 142 feet 2½ inches; C. A. Pudrith, Dartmouth, fifth, 140 feet 2½ inches.

Running broad jump—Won by H. Worthington, Dartmouth, 24 feet ¼ inch; W. Oler Jr., Yale, second, 23 feet 7⅛ inches; W. F. Sisson Jr., Stanford, third, 23 feet 2 inches; F. L. Maker, California, fourth, 22 feet 10¼ inches; F. M. Hampton, Yale, fifth, 22 feet 7½ inches.

220 yard run—Won by W. B. Moore, Princeton; H. L. Smith, Michigan, second; A. F. Van Winkle, Cornell, third; S. J. Treadway, Yale, fourth; F. Kaufman, University of Pennsylvania, fifth. Time, :21 3-5.

Running high jump—Won by W. Oler Jr., Yale; height, 6 feet 2⅛ inches; F. L. Maker, California, second; height, 6 feet 1¼ inches; A. W. Richards, Cornell; J. O. Johnson, Harvard, and C. C. Gifford, Yale, tied for third at 6 feet ¼ inch.

16 pound shotput—Won by H. B. Liversedge, California; 46 feet 2¾ inches; C. W. Spears, Dartmouth, second; 46 feet 1⅜ inches; A. W. Richards, Cornell, third; 45 feet 11⅜ inches; E. R. Caughey, Stanford, fourth; 45 feet 4 inches; J. M. Braden, Yale, fifth; 45 feet ¼ inch.

880 yard run—Won by J. E. Meredith, University of Pennsylvania; W. J. Bingham, Harvard, second; L. C. Scudder, University of Pennsylvania, third; G. M. Taylor, Cornell, fourth; C. Peterson, Syracuse, fifth. Time, 1:53.

Pole vault—Won by F. K. Foss, Cornell; 12 feet 8 inches; S. S. Buck and J. D. Nagel Jr., Yale; W. L. Newstetter and E. L. Sewell, Pennsylvania, and K. R. Curtis, Syracuse, tied for second, at 12 feet 4 inches.

Two mile run—Won by D. F. Potter, Cornell; J. S. Hoffmire, Cornell, second; E. Frey, Cornell, third; J. C. Corwith, Cornell, fourth; J. T. Putnam, Yale, fifth. Time, 9:32 3-5.

RAIN HERE GIVES FLAG TO ILLINI

George Huff's University of Illinois baseball team won the conference championship at Stagg field yesterday by watching the rain drown their game with the Maroons. The Maroons got a man as far as second base in the second inning when the drizzle changed to a cloudburst and the game was called. George and Gunkel were pitching.

If the Maroons had won it was planned to have the teams jump back to Urbana and play off a postponed game on Monday. If the Maroons won both games they would have had a chance to finish half a game ahead of Illinois in the standing.

It will be impossible to play off both postponements, because the Illinois final examinations begin on Wednesday, the date the Maroons are scheduled to meet Purdue at Lafayette. A conference rule prohibits a game on Memorial day.

M'GRAWS RUN UP SIXTEEN IN ROW; BRAVES LOSE TWO

Boston, Mass., May 27.—[Special.]—The Giants made it sixteen straight by defeating Boston in two games today, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. In the ninth inning of the first game Robertson singled and went to second on Compton's fumble. Doyle flied to Collins and Kauff was purposely passed. Fletcher drove in the winning run with a single to left.

In the second game Ragan held New York to five hits, all of which were for extra bases, and the two runs scored were both earned. Benton kept the Boston hits well scattered until the eighth, when the bases were filled with none out. A double play followed, Maranville scoring while it was being made.

Dundee to Fight Wells.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 27.—[Special.]—Johnny Dundee and Matt Wells, English lightweight champion, today signed articles to fight eight rounds here on June 16.

LOOKY HERE, WATCH THOSE GIANTS!

THE New York Giants, who made their string of consecutive victories sixteen by beating the Boston Braves yesterday in a double header, are on the way to break all major league records. The record in the National league is held by the old Providence club of 1884, which won twenty straight. The next best record was made by the Chicago White Sox of 1906, the year Comiskey's men won the world's championship, with nineteen. The third best record was made by the New York Giants of 1904, one of the times McGraw led his men to a pennant with eighteen.

The Giants have to win four more in a row to equal the world's major league record or five in a row to set a new mark. They have one more game to play at Boston and four at Philadelphia before they return to the Polo grounds in New York.

This is how the Giants established the mark of sixteen:

First Tests Next Sunday in 'Tribune's' Tournament for Amateur Ball Players

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Boys, here is the most cheerful announcement made this spring.

Fifty youngsters will meet next Sunday morning at Weeghman park in the first of a series of tryouts. From this and subsequent tryouts two of the best amateur baseball players within a radius of forty miles of Chicago will be chosen to accompany White Sox and Cubs on their final eastern trips as members of the teams.

This tournament, the second held under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE, will be conducted every Sunday morning during June and July, with semi-final contests scheduled for July 31 and the final for Aug. 7. Tryouts also may be held Saturday afternoons if the entry list becomes too heavy.

Field May Reach 500 Mark.

Thirty-nine entries received during the week boosted the total to 381, only eighteen short of the enrollment of last year. Since entries do not close until Wednesday, June 7, it is assured that the record of 1915 will be exceeded by a large margin. If entries come in as they did last season, when 250 were counted during the last week, at least 500 youngsters will strive for the trips with Sox and Cubs, with all expenses paid by THE TRIBUNE from the time the winners start to the time they get back.

Here is the outline of the trip for the successful player accompanying the White Sox:

Aug. 13—Leave for east.
Aug. 14—Probably play in exhibition game.
Aug. 16, 17, 18—Sox in Boston.
Aug. 19—Sox in New York.
Aug. 20—Sunday in New York.
Aug. 21, 22, 23—Sox in New York.
Aug. 24, 25, 26—Sox in Washington.
Aug. 27—Sunday at Atlantic City.
Aug. 28, 29, 30, 31—Sox in Philadelphia.
Sept. 1—Traveling to Detroit.
Sept. 2—Sox in Detroit.
Sept. 3, 4—Sox in St. Louis.
Sept. 5—Back in Chicago.

Route for Trip with Cubs.

Here's your itinerary if you win the trip with the Cubs:

Sept. 10—Leave for Boston.
Sept. 11—On the road.
Sept. 12, 13, 14, 15—Cubs in Boston.
Sept. 16—Cubs in Philadelphia.
Sept. 17—Sunday in Atlantic City.
Sept. 18, 19—Cubs at Philadelphia.
Sept. 20, 21, 22—Cubs in New York.
Sept. 23—Cubs in Brooklyn.
Sept. 24—Sunday at Coney Island.
Sept. 25, 26, 27—Cubs in Brooklyn.
Sept. 28, 29—Exhibition games on way back.
Sept. 30—Back in Chicago.

Three of the best judges of amateur baseball players in the central west have been chosen. Because of the universal satisfaction given last season and their knowledge of the game from A to ism, THE TRIBUNE has named the same men who conducted the first tournament so successfully. They are:

Clarence Eldridge, American league utility umpire.

Jimmy Ryan, former major league star.

Charles Reading, semi-pro umpire.

An entry blank for "The Tribune" amateur tryouts for trips with White Sox and Cubs will appear in Monday's paper.

Unless the entry list becomes so heavy as to call for assistance these men will conduct all the tryouts, giving each and every youngster a fair and impartial trial. There will be no favoritism shown and the winners will be selected solely on their merits and because each of the three judges conscientiously believes the successful boys entitled to the prize. Numerous letters received this year from entrants in the last tournament speak highly of the work of these judges.

Every player is required to be prepared for the tryouts, properly attired to make a presentable appearance on the field. THE TRIBUNE will furnish the balls, but the boys are expected to bring their baseball paraphernalia. Remember, entries close June 7, and none received with a postmark after that date will be accepted. Also bear in mind that if you were over 21 years of age last March you are not eligible.

Watch for First Trial List.

Announcement will be made during the week, giving a list of players to appear for the first tryouts. Following are the entries received last week:

BUSH BEATS 60 YEAR OLD RIVAL IN SOUTHERN GOLF.

Dallas, Tex., May 27.—Youth and ability to putt won the championship of the Southern Golf association today for Reuben G. Bush Jr. of the New Orleans Country club. He defeated Bryan Heard of Houston for the title, 1 up in thirty-six holes. Heard played Bush as a younger man might have played him. Heard is more than 60 years old, but during the afternoon missed what appeared to be several easy putts, which cost him the title. Bush did not play up to the brilliant form that had been expected.

Naperville, 3; Y. M. C. Coll., 0.

Northwestern college of Naperville shut out the Y. M. C. A. college on a wet field, 3 to 0. Kluckhoin held the losers to two hits, fanned eleven, and yielded no walks.

ILLINOIS YOUTH BREAKS WORLD RECORD IN MEET.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 27.—One interscholastic record was broken and another interscholastic record was tied at the eighth annual track meet of the Northwestern Interscholastic association at Northrop field this afternoon.

Oregon High school, Oregon, Ill., won the class A events with a score of 41 1-3. Shattuck Military academy of Faribault, Minn., was second. In class B events Duluth Central won with 33¾ points and Faribault High school was second.

Sherman Landers, 19 years old, from Oregon High broke the world's interscholastic pole vault record, clearing the bar at 12 feet 8 inches.

RAIN PREVENTS SOX-INDIAN TILT; 2 GAMES TODAY

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Chicago's customary Saturday afternoon shower arrived just in time yesterday to thwart the White Sox's plans of staging an awakening at Comiskey park. They had intentions of dragging the fiery Cleveland Indians through the dust, but the contest lasted only long enough for them to retire one Indian, when the umpire decided it wasn't proper to play baseball in the rain, and now the two teams will battle in a double header today to make up for the postponement.

That Owner Comiskey and Manager Rowland were most desirous for a combat was evident when they started the game ten minutes ahead of time and after rain had begun to fall. There were at least 7,500 fans present who wanted to see for themselves just why the White Sox aren't in first place, and Rowland hoped to convince them that the Sox belonged there.

Two Batters Face Scott.

He sent Jim Scott to the slab and had his right handed hitting array in the game, because Cleveland had named Coumbe, a southpaw, as pitcher. Scott hurled a few times to Jack Graney and caused him to pop up an easy one to Buck Weaver, and then Scottie had two strikes on "Tuck" Turner when there was a decided increase in the downpour, which put a stop to the fight. There was a wait of twenty minutes, after which rain was coming down harder than ever, so the umpire announced everything was off. Soon after that the sun came out.

The only part of the program which went through as per schedule was the "preparedness parade" of a bunch of Chicago's amateur players. They are preparing to take the places of the big league stars of today and went to the south side park yesterday to pay homage to one of their former members, Bob Roth, now a shining light on the Cleveland team.

Roth Gets Gold Watch.

Fifteen teams of youngsters all in uniforms marched around the field like soldiers. They belong to the Junior league, where Roth got his start in the national pastime. A gold watch was presented to Bob, and besides that there was a silver cup won by the De La Salle team because it was the best dressed set of boys in the parade.

Second prize went to the Austin club for being the youngest, the boys ranging from 10 to 14 years of age. Other clubs which marched were Eagles, Chandlers, Hermitage Tigers, Iroquois, Ragen Colts, Burnside Terriers, Thirty-fourth ward G. O. P., Melrose Sox, Berwyn Feds, Beachey & Lawler, Drummond A. C., Shamrock A. C., and Quadrangle club. President Owen J. Sheviln of the league was on hand to present the prizes.

It is likely that "Tokio Jim" Scott will be sent back to the slab in the first game today, as he didn't pitch enough yesterday to get warm. Lefty Williams is the candidate for the other game.

WHO PAYS FOR WEAVER'S 'EATS'?

WHO'S going to pay for the food eaten by Buck Weaver on the dining car coming from Washington to Chicago? That was a question perplexing both Weaver and the dining car conductor last night. It was this way: Buck went in Friday morning for breakfast. The conductor was a fan. "I'll bet Cleveland beats you tomorrow," he said.

"You're on," answered Buck. "I'll bet you the price of all I eat in this car today that we win. If we win I don't pay for it. If we lose I pay double."

The result was that Buck signed the checks for his breakfast, lunch, and dinner instead of forking over cash.

"I'll see you when the game's over tomorrow," called the conductor as Buck finished his dinner. But it rained and there was no game. The conductor had to go out on another run and he still has the dining car checks with Buck Weaver's name signed to them.

TINKER REVAMPS CUBS AND VAUGHN WINS, 3-2

Hippo Holds Reds After Pals Score Three Runs in Early Rounds.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Cincinnati, O., May 27.—[Special.]—Shaken up in both offensive and defensive apartments, the Cubs emerged triumphant today from their third tussle with the Reds after a superheated slab duel between Hippo Vaughn and Pete Schneider. Score, 3 to 2.

Manager Tinker shook up his batting order to beat the band, elevating Alex McCarthy to the lead off place and inserting Frank Schulte in the cleanup berth, hitherto held by Zimmerman, who was lowered to fifth notch. Saier also was dropped down a peg. Defensively the infield was changed by returning Mique Doolan to short, from which position he was displaced a short while ago to give Ed Mulligan a trial.

New Combination Works Well.

The new deal worked like the traditional new broom. The Cubs got some of their hits in timely spots and exhibited an entirely different spirit, perhaps because they have become more accustomed to the sudden switch from the north side to the tropics. Doolan made the only defensive error in the game, but it occurred in an attempt to make a swell play in the last inning, and as luck had it the boot merely paved the way to a quick finish in which Manager Herzog slipped a mental cog.

Vaughn outpitched his slab rivel by a narrow margin, but that was sufficient to turn the scale. The Cubs massed a couple of singles and a long fly behind a pass in the opener for two runs, and the Reds never could catch the Tinks after that. Before the locals had their two runs the visitors had accumulated another in the third. From that round to the end neither team could score, and had few chances to do so.

Sharp Fielding Helps Hurlers.

McCarthy, Doolan, and Groh were most stalwart in the defense. McCarthy recovered a hot hit which escaped Saier and tossed the ball to Vaughn for an out that headed off trouble in the sixth. Doolan dashed close to second and scooped with one hand a roller which Mollwits meant for a base hit at the start of the ninth. Groh robbed the Cubs of a score by knocking down Saier's hit close to third in the eighth. Otherwise it would have gone so far that a runner could have registered on it.

McCarthy and Williams tagged Schneider for two hits apiece and one of Aleck's was a triple which led to the winning tally. McCarthy would have had three hits but for Chase, who made a dashing catch of a little Texas leaguer back of short with which McCarthy opened the game. Flack followed that tough break with a walk. Williams singled to right and Schulte to center, scoring Flack and putting Williams on third, from where Zim brought him in with a long fly to Neale.

Williams Sends In Tally.

The Reds countered with one run in their half. Groh walked, Neale sacrificed, and Chase rolled out, but Clarke came across with a single, scoring the run. McCarthy blazed the trail to victory in the third with a rattling drive to right for three bases. Flack drew a second pass. Williams let McCarthy score on a fly to Neale. Flack then stole second, but Schulte fouled out. Zimmerman was passed intentionally, bringing up Saier in the pinch, and he flied to Chase.

A base on balls and Chase's three-base knock over Williams' head scored Cincinnati's second and last tally in the third. The Reds threatened to tie in the fifth, when Vaughn passed Neale and Chase with only one out. Clark hit to Saier, who threw wildly to force Chase at second. Doolan caught the ball, but fell flat on his back. He managed to reach the bag with his heel before Chase got there, saving the play. Griffith kindly grounded out.

Double Play Ends Battle.

In the ninth Doolan again came to the rescue with a swell stop and throw which robbed Mollwits of a hit close to second. Herzog followed with one which Doolan grabbed on the run back of second, but his throw went wild and let Herzog to second. Louden followed with a ringing liner to right. Flack raced in and pinched it, then doubled up Herzog before he could get back to second.

Notes

Cincinnati, O., May 27.—[Special.]—One more game here tomorrow.

The Cubs will quit Redland tomorrow night to engage in a four game series with St. Louis at Weeghman park, beginning Monday.

In spite of Cincinnati's winning streak of two straight, hardly anybody turned out for today's game, although it was Saturday. Perhaps 3,000 paid their way in, and that was twice as many as saw the games of the previous two days.

Williams opened the eighth with a single. Schulte and Zim popped out, then Saier sliced a warm grounder close to third base. Groh blocked it just enough to hold it down to a single. Otherwise Williams would have scored on it.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—Washington went into first place again today by defeating Philadelphia twice, 5 to 3 and 3 to 1, while Cleveland was idle. Gallia outpitched Bush in the first game, in which Jamieson drove in three of the Nicols' runs and scored once himself. In the second game Washington scored all its runs in the fourth inning on a pass to Foster, hits by Milan and Jamieson, an infield out, and a wild pitch by Nabors. Johnson held Philadelphia scoreless until the ninth, when a pass, an out, and a single produced a run. Scores:

ROBINS BEAT PHILS TWICE AND TAKE FIRST PLACE.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 27.—Brooklyn won two games from Philadelphia, 8 to 3 and 6 to 0, and took first place from the home team. In the first game, after Philadelphia got three runs through Pfeffer's wildness in the opening inning, he settled down and pitched in grand style. Chalmers was taken off the slab in the third and McQuillan did good work until the ninth, when three errors and five hits gave Brooklyn six runs and victory. Brooklyn landed the second game by hitting Demaree hard, while Coombs permitted only one player to get past first base and none beyond second.

JOBS FOR WHICH WE DO NOT YEARN: Reading Congressional Records

Competitive Athletics for Girls Required at Englewood High School.

Josephine Campbell

Anna Burgeacon, Dorothea Meyer, Winifred Mills, Elsie Engellstrom, Rhoda Routliff

EVERY girl at the Englewood High school, unless presenting an excuse from a physician, is required to take three physical tests under Instructor Margaret Bell. That means that 1,050 have been engaged in this athletic activity for the last month. In addition to these events intraschool contests have been held.

The first test is the ladder climb for time, in which girls pull themselves up a ladder. Thus far Josephine Campbell, a junior, has made the best time of 0:06⅘.

In the fifty yard dash, meaning one lap of the small track, Louise Rutherford, also a junior, covered the distance in :08.

In the ball throwing contest, in which a ball similar to the medicine ball is used, but lighter in weight, Miss Rhoda Rontliff, a senior, is leading with 70 feet.

The girls' work also is figured by a scoring system. Louise Rutherford is leader with 30 and Josephine Campbell is second with 28.

The accompanying photographs show the finish of a 50 yard race and the start of a ladder climb.

KATHLEEN WINS KENTUCKY OAKS BY TEN LENGTHS

Long's Filly Runs Away from a Good Field — Royal II. Breaks Downs Record.

Louisville, Ky., May 27.—[Special.]—Kathleen, George J. Long's Sempronius-Deema filly, today demonstrated she is one of the classiest fillies in the west when she won the forty-second running of the Kentucky Oaks from a good field by a margin of ten lengths over Jefferson Livingstone's Mandy Hamilton, with Lady Always third. The time was slow, but she had run her field dizzy before going three quarters. After that she merely galloped. The Whitney entry proved a big disappointment.

Royal II. Breaks Record.

In the secondary feature Royal II. got up in the last stride and beat out Water Blossom. Goose's masterful ride got the Livingston horse home in front. The track record for the mile and an eighth, 1:51 2-5, held by Ed Crump, went by the boards. Royal II. ran the distance in 1:51 1-5.

Choice had the best of the breaks on the day and form players quit the meeting far ahead. The meeting, which wound up today, has been one of the best in the history of the track.

The scene shifts to Douglas park Monday.

Summaries of Races.

First race, 6 furlongs—Amazon, 110 [Goose], 2.6, $2.80, $2.20, won; Ed Howard, 110 [Rust], $3.10, $2.70, second; Kleburne, 110 [Lapalle], $4.60, third. Time, 1:12 1-5. Breaks, Ratina, and Dibitri also ran.

Second race, 5½ furlongs—Tom Jr., 112 [T. Kilgarr], $4.50, $3.70, $2.80, won; Jovial, 98 [Shilling], $5.80, $3.80, second; Cheer Leader, 113 [Martin], $3.60, third. Time, :57 2-5. Walter H., Pearce, Velvet Joe, Sophia Attwood, and Broomsweep also ran.

Third race, 6 furlongs—Chalmers, 106 [Murphy], $7.80, $4, $2.80, won; Hawthorn, 107 [Garry], $8.30, $5.30, second; Bringburst, 124 [Taylor], $2.40, third. Time, 1:21 2-5. Dr. Drinan and Bars and Stars also ran.

Fourth race, Baden Baden handicap, 1¼ miles—Royal II., 106 [Goose], $4.90, $2.60, $2.30, won; Water Blossom, 117 [Martin], $3.80, $2.90, second; Marion Goosby, 107 [Annand], $3.40, third. Time, 1:51 1-5, new track record. One Step and Hank O'Day also ran.

Fifth race, Kentucky Oaks, 1 1-16 miles—Kathleen, 119 [Goose], $3.10, $2.50, out, won; Lady Hamilton, 117 [Rust], $5.10, out, second; Lady Always, 112 [Lapaille], out, third. Time, 1:47 2-5. Hansa and Regina also ran.

Sixth race, 1 mile—Solar Star, 111 [Murphy], $20, $2.40, $2.80, won; Conning Tower, 106 [Kilby], $2.60, $2.50, second; John Grund, 104 [Goose], $3.80, third. Time, 1:39. Dorothy Dan, May Bird, Hubbub, and Belgian Trooper also ran.

Seventh race, Advance selling stakes, 3 1-16 miles—Dolly Post, 111 [Goose], $2.60, $2.40, $2.80, won; Panhandle, 108 [Lapaille], $6.20, $3.60, second; Louise Paul, 108 [Vandusen], $4.80, third. Time, 1:48. Grosvenor, Lady Darling, Booker Bill, Anthony's Lass, and Cora Apple also ran.

HOURLESS, 15-1, WINS RACE; LARGE CROWD AT BELMONT.

New York, May 27.—[Special.]—Racing proved that it had tightened its hold on New Yorkers today when a crowd that seemed to exceed in numbers the vast assemblage on the opening day poured through the gates of Belmont park to see the running of the third day's program.

Long priced horses rolled home one after another and the climax was reached when August Belmont's imported colt Hourless won the historic Juvenile stakes from a field of nine richly bred youngsters.

In the short dash of five and a half furlongs the Belmont entry was, with the exception of the added starter, Solveig, the only one believed to have no chance of victory. The brown son of Negofol—Hour Glass II. was making his first start, and had shown nothing in the trials to indicate that he could hold his own with the rest, which included several smart youngsters.

Summary of Races.

First race, 1 1-16 miles—Pandean, 115 [Lobs], 12 to 1, 4 to 1, 6 to 5, won; Sam Mc-Hooks, 119 [Haynes], 17 to 10, 11 to 20, out, second; Saratoga, 110 [Hanover], 9 to 5, 11 to 20, out, third. Time, 1:48 1-5. Armament, Ida Claire, and Stalwart Helen also ran.

Second race, 2 year olds, 4½ furlongs—Federal, 112 [Garner], 18 to 5, even, 1 to 2, won; Yellow Stone, 112 [Dreyer], 5 to 1, 8 to 5, and 4 to 5, second; Wood Trap, 117 [Haynes], 9 to 10, 1 to 4, and out, third. Time, :53 2-5. Uranium and Kebo also ran.

For PLAYERS of WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

FORCING discards is usually associated with spectacular play. All double dummy discards are based on forcing discards, usually of aces and kings. In the long run, however, it is the commonplace discard of small cards which count for most and win or lose the rubber.

It is a common fallacy that at no-trump the declarer should always make a long suit at once, if possible, in order to force discards from his adversaries. Not infrequently, however, it is the declarer himself who suffers most from the discarding.

The following deal was noted at a Chicago club during the last week, and, although an easy game was thrown away, none of the players appeared to notice it:

THE HANDS.

S—10, 5, 4.
H—A, Q.
C—K, J, 9, 7, 6.
D—9, 7, 3.

S—K, J, 6, 2.
H—J, 10, 9, 7.
C—A, Q, 5.
D—A, 5.

S—Q, 8, 3.
H—6, 2.
C—8, 4, 2.
D—K, Q, J, 10, 4.

S—A, 9, 7.
H—K, 8, 5, 4, 3.
C—10, 3.
D—8, 6, 2.

Score, 0—0. West dealt and bid one no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the opening lead.

THE PLAY.

West scored 8 tricks.

At trick five West began to declare that discards were awkward, but he was obliged to complete the diamond suit, as he feared he might not be able to reenter dummy. He did not dare unguard the knave of hearts, as he could not know how that suit was divided between the opponents.

West should have led spades at trick two and game would have been certain against any possible play of his opponents.

Hinsdale.

Rain kept the field in the blind bogey handicap at Hinsdale down to small numbers. W. B. Brown and H. F. Hanson tied at 84 net for first place, F. Van Inwagen finishing next with 85.

GOLF

SKOKIE members who have been "champing at the bit," awaiting the opening of their competitive season, were out in force yesterday for the initial event, a medal play handicap. The turnstiles registered 150 starters, but the Fovargue starting machine was well oiled and the foursomes made good speed until occasional showers slowed them up.

Just before the shades of night had fallen the last player rolled his final putt into the eighteenth hole and then skirmished to the club house to avoid being late for the annual stag dinner.

H. Parish and W. C. Miller tied for low net cards of 71, while F. E. Compton and R. B. Scribner tied at 86 for low gross. Leading scores:

H. Parish, 96—25—71; W. C. Miller, 93—27—71; Isaac McCurdy, 88—14—74; H. B. Fairchild, 95—21—74; O. F. Roberts, 97—23—74; R. B. Scribner, 86—10—76; F. E. Compton, 86—9—77.

Glen View.

The initial match round for the Frazier cup was the feature at Glen View. J. H. S. Lee as well as J. E. Pumphrey were forced to play twenty-seven holes before winning their matches. A triple tie resulted in the blind bogey (60) event. J. H. S. Lee with 87—7—80; J. H. Kelleher, 93—13—80; and C. K. Peck, 97—17—80, were the three deadlocked.

The result of the first match round for the Frazier cup resulted as follows:

J. S. Bartle won by default from M. K. Wilson; Christy Brown defeated S. D. Rowe, 6 and 6; O. T. Wilson defeated C. A. Cockran, 6 and 5; J. E. Blunt Jr. defeated R. M. Steiner, 2 and 1; F. H. P. Olson and A. C. Timm, J. J. Cardwell and H. H. Howick. Low net honors went to H. H. Dietrich and G. M. McConnell, who had 179.

FRENCH BOYS SCORE VICTORY IN RACES BY THE ELMIRA A. C.

First honors in both the road races run by the Elmira A. C. yesterday went to the French family. Bran captured the five mile event, the feature contest, and L. French, his brother, led the field in a three mile run. There were twenty-four starters in each race.

Brother Bran covered the five miles in 27:00, finishing twenty seconds in front of Christian Christianson of the Danish-American A. C. L. French's time in the shorter event was 16:45. Both French boys carried the colors of the First Regiment A. A.

First Lap to Cicero.

Starting from Crawford avenue, the five mile runners sped to Cicero on Armitage avenue, back to the starting point, then to Kostner avenue, and back once more to complete the route. The secondary contest also was held along Armitage avenue. There were nearly 500 spectators at the start and finish line, and more than 2,000 were lined along the course. The races were conducted under the direction of the Armitage Avenue Business Men's club, which furnished the prizes. It was sanctioned and supported by the A. A. U.

Hugo Carlson of the Swedish-American A. C. was second in the three mile. Paul Bram of the Danish-American A. C. copped third honors.

HYDE PARK WINS SOCCER HONORS ON SOGGY FIELD

Beats Schurz, 1-0, in Second Half of Final Contest in the Prep League.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Hyde Park high school won the spring championship of the Chicago High School Soccer league by defeating Schurz, 1 to 0, at Ogden park. Heavy rain made the field almost unplayable. Neither side scored in the first half, but in the second Birmingham after a short run passed the ball to Kennedy, who scored. Colvin, Berry, Hardesty, Mooney, Mason, Olsen, and Dodge played well for their respective sides.

The winning team, which was coached by Alec Paterson, teacher at the school, was scored only on once during the series. Hyde Park wins the shield donated by the Chicago District league. Lineup:

Hyde Park [1].		Schurz [0].
Colvin	Goal	Willing
Berry	Right back	Dodge
Fulton	Right half back	Calef
Briggs	C. half back	Jordon
Nicely	Left half back	Anderson
Simms	Outside right	Mainecha
Waters	Inside right	Olsen
Birmingham	Center	Riegas
Mooney	Inside left	Mason

Goal—Kennedy.

Lane, 4; Crane, 3.

Lane once more proved a hoodoo to Crane, giving the west siders their first defeat in the spring series. The verdict was 4 to 3. The game was played at Sherman park over a rain soaked field. The score was 2 to 2 at half time. Smith, Kasinski, and Carlson starred for Crane, Claussen, Collins, and Karas being best on the Lane front line. Lineup:

Lane [4].		Crane [3].
Eigren	Goal	Zimmerman
Brickwood	Right back	Smith
Zellinske	Rt half back	Hagen
Rusch	Cent. half back	Steinmets

Do you jab rusty steel points into your face every time you shave? You DO—if you use a razor blade like this

Razor blade magnified 430 diameters. This blade has been rusted by the moisture of the air, and must be re-ground to a get a good shave from it.

Don't do it any more; have a perfect shave EVERY shave—it's EASY—use

EDGE-ER-EEN

Your blades will never "pull" again

A PERFECT blade (see cut below) has tiny, fairly regular teeth. But it is steel—and steel rusts very easily. Leave a freshly sharpened blade exposed to the action of moist air (even in a box) and in a few hours the moisture will rust the edge so badly that it will be difficult to shave with.

In this condition it "pulls," scratches, and the rusty particles are jabbed into the skin, where they cause smarting, irritation and other facial troubles. The scratches admit disease germs.

Use Edg-er-een and your shaving troubles will be ended forever.

25c TUBES Sold where razor blades are sold

If your druggist or dealer cannot supply you, send 25c for full size tube.

The Edg-er-een Co., Chicago
The longer I use Edg-er-een, the more enthusiastic I get about it. After eight days use on one blade, I am a complete convert. The shave I got this morning was just as good as the first one with this blade eight days ago. And in the meantime I find that the place just under my chin that has always been a little sore from shaving is now perfectly smooth and well after the eight days.
I see now that in the old way of shaving the rust that accumulates on the edge of the blade was pushed into the skin every day, resulting in irritation and soreness. You have something that fills a long felt want—a sure success.

DOWNPOUR HALTS SPEED TESTS FOR MEMORIAL DAY AUTO RACE

Four Drivers Qualify and Nine Are Scheduled for Trials Today; Fourteen Pilots Ready for Start in Indianapolis Classic.

BY J. C. BURTON.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 27.—[Special.]—Lightning rent skies and a rain drenched track furnished an alibi for nine drivers who did not have their cars ready to qualify in the final day's elimination today for the Inndianapolis race and resulted in a postponement of the trials until tomorrow morning. Only four drivers came under the inspection of the official clocker today and all survived the eliminations, bringing the field of certain starters for Tuesday's annual classic up to fourteen, as ten cars qualified yesterday.

Today's qualifiers and their best laps follows:

Car and driver.	Time
Frontenac—A. Chevrolet	1:42.57	87.72
Frontenac—L. Chevrolet	1:42.63	87.60
Ostewig Special—Haibe	1:43.75	82.80
Delage—Lecain	1:40.12	82.45

D'Alene Betters His Record.

Wilbur D'Alene, the Duesenberg driver, also bettered his time of yesterday in another trial this afternoon, when he increased his average from 88.4 to 89.6 miles per hour.

The cars which are now quartered at the track and which will be given an opportunity to show that they have the requisite speed of eighty miles an hour tomorrow are the three Premiers, Gaston Chevrolet's Frontenac, Ralph Mulford's Peugeot, Eddie Rickenbacher's Maxwell, Jules Devigne's Delage, Art Johnson's Crawford, and Aldo Franchi's Peusun.

Mulford and Franchi were working on their cars today and it is a question whether they would have had them ready to qualify before 5:30 p. m., when the trials close. Consequently they are convinced that the blackest clouds have silver linings and that rain is a blessing to persons following a more hazardous pursuit than farming.

Two Premiers Warmed Up.

Gil Anderson and Tom Rooney warmed up two of the Premiers but the third has not left the factory. Mechanics worked on it all last night in the hope of having it assembled by this afternoon. A driver was selected for it this morning, Howdy Wilcox getting the mount.

Having scruples against driving on Sunday and therefore classifying as the Christy Mathewson of the automobile racing game, Ralph Mulford by special dispensation of the officials will be permitted to qualify his Peugeot Monday morning, although it is customary to close the course the day preceding the race.

In addition to Mulford's Peugeot, the timers will clock the Richard and Eddie O'Donnell's Duesenberg Monday morning. The Richard is now enroute from Cleveland and the Duesenberg will be shipped from Chicago tonight. According to a telephone message from O'Donnell, he got the car assembled this morning and gave it the first test on the Chicago speedway this afternoon.

Interest Shown in Frontenacs.

Interest in practice today centered in the initial appearance on the course of the Frontenacs. Louis Chevrolet's creations are handsome jobs, the aluminum motors and the maroon bodies having the lines of a Michael Angelo canvas.

But "handsome is as handsome does," and the cars did not show sufficient speed in the trials to entitle them to rank as dangerous contenders' Memorial day. They are new and need a through workout. If they get it, they may prove the surprise of the thrill-glutted afternoon.

FORTY ENTRIES EXPECTED FOR DERBY AT SPEEDWAY.

Forty entries are expected for the second international auto derby at the Speedway on June 10, according to President David F. Reid. At present twenty-four cars are on the list and tomorrow Mr. Reid will leave for Indianapolis to sign up other pilots.

The Presto-Lite nominations are expected after the Hoosier event. New entries yesterday included a Duesenberg that will be driven by George Buzane, mechanic for two years with Duesenberg, who will ride with Wilbur D'Alene at Indianapolis.

De Palma has arrived for practice work and will start tomorrow to tune up his Mercedes.

LLOYD WILSON TAKES HONORS IN TOUR OF CHICAGO AUTO CLUB

Lloyd H. Wilson, driving a Westcott car, proved to be the master driver of the sociability run held by the Chicago Automobile club. Wilson, driving on a blind schedule, made out in advance and known only to the judges, drove the distance to Grand Beach, Mich., and return, and landed at the finishing point only two minutes from the secret time. The time set by the officials for the 69.5 miles was 7:24, and Master Sociability Driver Wilson made it in 7:26.

W. M. Gelderman, driving a Pathfinder, took second honors with a mark of 7:29. Mrs. H. Clarke carried off the honors among the women drivers, with Mrs. Charles M. Stewart second. C. H. Fordham won the prize for the best decorated machine on the run. At the noonday stop at Grand Beach, the women engaged in a bridge whist competition and Mrs. W. K. McKay was the winner, with Mrs. H. E. Lammert second and Mrs. J. T. Brown third.

Twenty-Five Members in Tour.

Twenty-five of the club members engaged in the tour, which was the best ever given by the organization. About twenty car owners who had entered for the run were frightened by the threatening weather of early morning and failed to show up when Starter E. A. Turner gave the word at 8 o'clock.

The tourists found the Indiana and Michigan roads but little affected by the rain and had an easy trip. The route followed was through South Chicago Hammond, East Chicago, Calumet, East Gary, Porter, and Michigan City.

After a few hours spent at Grand Beach the return trip was begun and the contestants arrived shortly before dark at the Chicago Automobile club, where dinner was served, prizes awarded, and dancing engaged in.

Participants in the Run.

Among those who patricipated in the run were the following:

J. T. Brown, Moline Knight; H. W. Sehl, Franklin; Albert Eastman, Mitchell; J. E. Callender, Edwards-Knight; George Hibben, Columbia; L. H. Wilson, Westcott; W. W. Rice, King; E. F. Engel, Mitchell; William Gelderman, Pathfinder; E. P. Stevens, Chalmers; E. A. Turner, Chalmers; B. Kronthal, Packard; W. P. Seng, Packard; A. C. Fordham, Buick; D. F. Kellar, Rambler; Victor Ortland, Overland; H. B. Ayers, Scripps-Booth; Mrs. H. L. Clarke, Cadillac; Mrs. C. M. Stewart, Scripps-Booth.

HARNESS NAGS OPEN SEASON AT HARLEM TRACK TUESDAY.

The Chicago Riding and Driving club will open its second matinee season Memorial day at its own track, Twelfth street and Central avenue, starting at 1:30 o'clock.

The program will consist of seven well filled races, in which some of the fastest horses in this vicinity will compete. These horses will leave shortly for purse races on the regular circuits and Tuesday's matinee will show their condition and chances to win.

The track has been remodeled and is now considered one of the fastest half mile tracks in the middle west.

The club represents among its members prominent business men, including L. J. Pentecost, J. J. Murphy, Ralph E. Thomas, George Castle, John R. Thompson, J. R. Waters, Joseph Hoch, George B. Dryden, E. H. Gary, Judge J. C. Dooley, Joseph Hartford, and others

BY JACK PROCTOR.

LOCAL yachtsmen have all sail set for the formal opening of the season on Memorial day, when the clubhouses and boats are scheduled to go into commission. While the Chicago, Jackson Park, and Lincoln park clubs all have arranged elaborate programs to mark the ushering in of the summer season on Lake Michigan, chief interest centers in the proposed doings at Jackson park.

The holiday will be a red letter day for the south side sailors, who after several years of planning are ready to dedicate a new clubhouse. Gov. Edward F. Dunne will be the guest of honor and will take a prominent part in the exercises connected with the opening of the new building.

Program for Dedication.

According to the plans, all ship's crews and their commanding officers are to be on board their respective boats at 10:30 a. m. ready to break out their flags and put the yachts in commission when the boat bearing Gov. Dunne and Commodore William M. Lawton enters the harbor. As the official boat comes to anchor the governor is to be saluted with seventeen guns. The governor is to make the trip from the downtown harbor on board William A. Lydon's steam yacht Lydonia.

After the boats have gone into commission the dedicatory exercises will take place and the building committee will go through the formality of turning the new clubhouse over to the members. The house, which is about three times as large as the old quarters, is considered the most novel building of the kind on the great lakes. It has several large rooms, including a dance hall, women's quarters, shower baths, locker rooms, and other features that are expected to prove popular with the members.

Other Local Clubs Busy.

While the dedicatory exercises are going on at Jackson park the other clubs will not be idle. Both Chicago and Lincoln Park clubs will open the season with appropriate exercises, starting at noon and continuing until evening, when dinner dances will be given. The downtown harbor became well filled with boats during the week.

William A. Lydon's steam yacht Lydonia was one of the boats to appear off the Chicago Yacht club. The big 215 footer has been put through a thorough process of dolling up and presents a fine appearance. Other boats of the Chicago Y. C. fleet now moored in the Grant park basin include the yawl Polaris, recently purchased from James C. Heyworth by Commodore Harry M. Higinbotham, and which will be the flagship of the organization; U. J. Hermann's gasoline cruiser Swastika, Dr. William L. Baum's 100 foot schooner Amorita, and a number of smaller boats.

Cruise to Spring Lake.

Two members of the Chicago Y. C. proved their hardihood by making a cruise across the lake. They were Paul Tietgens and Secretary George L. Weed, who sailed Tietgens' sloop Dorello over to Spring lake to be overhauled and prepared for an active racing season.

Tietgens, who will have his first experience in the local racing game, has announced his intention of going after the Mackinac cup. It looks as if he will have plenty of opposition, with Amorita and other fast boats after the same prize. Frank J. Snite and Roy M. Barcal have bought the class P racer South Shore for the express purpose of winning the Mackinac cup.

H. G. Van Nostrand, chairman of the C. Y. C. swimming committee, announces that several A. A. U. championships have been awarded to the organization and that they will be held in the basin. Walter Hamlin, new chairman of the house committee, has a large force of workmen engaged in renovating the clubhouse and preparing it for the opening.

Gotham Job for George Braid.

George Braid, who has been with Wright & Ditson here for five years, has accepted a position with Wanamaker's at New York, where he will be associated with Tom McNamara, former Boston professional.

In the Wake of the News
by RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

MAY 22.

DIARY I am feeling blue and it is because I hate to hurt men's feelings if I know them or not. I went to another game last Friday, and Jennie did not play but after the game he met me outside the park and took me home.

Last night after supper the phone rung and I answered it expecting to hear Lennie's voice, but it was another voice not Lennie's.

"Hello," said the voice. "Who is this?"

"This is Miss Meyers," I replied.

"Are you the little girl that was out to the game Friday and walked away with that big busher?" the man at the other end of the wire asked.

"I do not know who you refer to," I replied coldly.

"Yes, you do," said he. "I saw you when you came in the park and I had my eye on you all afternoon."

"Who are you, please?" I then inquired.

"Never mind, girlie. I will tell you when I meet you," he said.

"When do you expect to meet me?" I inquired, amused at the man's assurance.

"Tonight, if you'll be home," he said.

"Well, Mr. Fresh," said I, "I will not be home to you tonight or any other time. I am not in the habit of allowing men to call who I have not been introduced to and besides I do not even know what you look like."

"Well," he said, "I don't lead the league in looks, but I got your big left handed friend tied."

"You will not earn my friendship by knocking Mr. Gates," I said coldly. "It happens that he is my fianced husband."

"You're out of luck," he then said. "But let me slip you a piece of advice. Don't sign with him till you're seen me."

"You certainly hate yourself," I said sarcastically.

"I don't hate you anyway," he replied. "When can I see you?"

"Never," I said coldly.

"Honest, girlie," he said, "I'm wild about you and I'm going to see you whether you like it or not. I'm coming down there right now."

"You will find no one home," I said, and hung the receiver up.

He did not come as he realized that I was in earnest. But his voice sounded so disappointed that I can't help from wishing that I had not considered it best to treat him so coldly. I wonder what he looks like, diary.

MAY 24.

I have seen the man who called me up and how handsome he is, diary. May be no handsomer than Lennie but entirely different type. I might of loved him had I not seen Lenpie first.

Monday night he called me up again, just before Lennie came to call. He asked me if I was still going to be mean and I told him I was sorry he considered me mean, but under the circumstances I could not act any different toward him.

"Why don't you come to the game tomorrow?" he asked.

"Maybe I will," I said. "Will you be there?"

"I'm always there," he replied. "I have a regular job hitting fungos and keeping the bench warm."

"Do you mean you are one of the ball players?" I inquired.

"I think so, but Tinker don't," he replied.

"I told you I was engaged," I said. "There can be no flirtation between we two."

"O, look me over before you turn me down," he said. "Come to the game tomorrow and I'll let you see me face to face."

"I can't promise," I said, and hung up the receiver as I heard a ring at the door and knew Lennie had come.

Something made me ask Mr. Weeghman's permission to get off yesterday and go to the game and no sooner had I sat down in the grandstand when one of the Chicago players looked up and smiled and tipped his hat. I knew in a moment that it was he of the telephone. Before I knew what I was doing I smiled back at him and, I am afraid, blushed furiously.

He looked up at me and smiled three or four times during the game. He did not play in the game, but sat in the shed and as luck would have it I was where I could see him constantly. Lennie was far down in a corner of the field playing catch with another man.

After the game I waited outside for Lennie and while I was waiting this man came up and was just going to speak to me when Lennie came out and this man walked away.

O diary what does it all mean and why must he care for me who am already promised. And I do not even know his name and nothing about him save that he is persistent, in love and O how good looking.

BIKE LIST CLOSES TONIGHT.

Entries close tonight for the bicycle race Memorial day morning around the lagoon in Lincoln park. Over 100 entries are already in. Fifty prizes have been hung up, including everything from a fully equipped bicycle down to a single pedal. The race will start promptly at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

MOTORCYCLE STARS COMPETE TODAY ON HAWTHORNE COURSE

With the fastest motorcycle riders in the country on hand to take part in the seven events to be decided at the Hawthorne race track today, which will mark the first of the three days' meeting, followers of the gas machines can look forward to some of the best racing ever seen on a local course if the predictions of the star riders come true.

Today's card will be featured by the five mile F. A. M. championship. The event has attracted riders from coast to coast, and if the track is in good condition records are expected to go by the boards.

Noted Riders in Events.

Such noted riders as Bob Perry, Joe Wolters, Glen Stokes, and others will compete in the event, not to mention the field of local stars.

The first event on today's program will be a ten mile open professional, 61.00 class, the second an open five mile professional, 30.50 class; the third the five mile National F. A. M. championship, the fourth a five mile race for stock machines, private owners, 61.00 class, the fifth a five mile open professional, 61.00 class, the sixth one mile trial heats in the fifteen mile open professional, the riders to be sent away from flying starts. The program will conclude with the final heat in this event from a standing start.

Fans Show Keen Interest.

The event is attracting considerable attention from local motorcycle fans. It will be in charge of the North Shore club and L. J. Leonard will have charge of the track and Fred Huyck will act as starter.

POLICE PREVENT BOXING BENEFIT

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

An effort to stage a boxing entertainment for the benefit of Bill O'Connell, who is broken in health, at O'Connell's gymnasium, 500 State street, yesterday was stopped, when two "harness" policemen walked into the gym and announced there would be "nothing doing."

Some of the classy talent of the ring had consented to go through their training paces yesterday in order that O'Connell might pick up a few shekels. Among these were Ritchie Mitchell, the star Milwaukee lightweight, who is to meet Charley White in the Brewery City Friday night, and several others, including White. Mitchell appeared to show his wares against his brother, Pinkey, in a brotherly four round setto. The boys had entertained the crowd by skipping the rope, shadow boxing and pulling the weights, and were about to enter the ring when the cops arrived and halted the entertainment.

Good Crowd Disappointed.

The gymnasium was comfortably filled when the entertainment was stopped.

Charley White returned yesterday from Cincinnati, where he stopped Milburn Saylor in the first round of a scheduled ten session contest Thursday night. Charley will start his real work at O'Connell's tomorrow for his bout with Ritchie Mitchell.

Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion, will leave today for Denver, where he is scheduled to meet Frankie Murphy in a ten round bout Friday night. Wolgast worked out at the Arcade gym yesterday with Jimmy Travers.

Ever Hammer, the bristling blond tiger who is making a gallant attempt to win the lightweight crown, started preliminary training at the Arcade for his ten round clash with Johnny Duffy of New York at East Chicago on July 4. The Swede will work every day for the battle.

DILLON-SMITH BOUT OFF; SHERIFF AND JUDGE BUSY.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 27.—Sheriff George V. Coffin today announced the Jack Dillon-Gunboat Smith prize fight, planned for next Monday night, would not be permitted. This followed the action of Judge T. J. Moll in modifying, at the request of Prosecutor A. J. Rucker, the restraining order, making it effective until further order of the court, instead of expiring at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

The prosecutor's move was due to the fact that attorneys for the fight promoters had sought a change of venue for the hearing on the restraining order, and it was feared the hearing could not be had in another county after Memorial day, which would have permitted the holding of the fight.

WHITE HOPES TO IMPRESS FANS BY GIVING MITCHELL TROUNCING

Expects to Win Admiration of Ringsiders Before He Leaves to Battle Champion Welsh in Buenos Aires Ring.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

When Charley White, Chicago's star lightweight, battles Richie Mitchell, the pride of Milwaukee, in the ring of the Cream City Athletic club Friday night he will have two things in view. First, and of course most important, is to defeat Mitchell; the other is to put up a battle which will win for him the admiration of the ringsiders. White has fought several bouts in Brewery city rings, but each time he has failed to make an impressive showing. He has not staged any of the classy performances that have marked his bouts in Boston, New York, Cincinnati, and other cities. He has been criticized for the way he fought in other Milwaukee combats, and that criticism has stung, so he is determined to "show up," even if it be at the expense of their boy, Mitchell.

This Milwaukee bout originally was scheduled to take place tomorrow night, but at the request of White it was postponed until Friday. The local scrapper has so much ahead of him that he is certainly going to be run bowlegged if he doesn't exercise care.

Then Ready for Welsh Bout.

Only last Thursday White had a little engagement with Milburn Saylor at Cincinnati and he got that job off his hands quickly, for he knocked out the Hoosier in just one minute. That was one of his classy performances which he would like to repeat at Milwaukee. Then after he gets through with Mitchell he must get ready to battle Champion Freddie Welsh in Buenos Aires, for which place in South America he must sail on June 17.

The matching of White and this boy Richie Mitchell has stirred up considerable bitter feeling between the rival White and Mitchell factions. They originally were matched to scrap in the Brewery city on May 2, but didn't, because Mitchell developed an infection of the foot which for a time threatened blood poisoning. That unfortunately prevented the meeting and there followed claims from the White side that the Milwaukeean had invented the sore foot excuse in order that he might run out of the match. That brought the retort courteous from the Mitchell faction, and the rematching was made just so much easier for Promoter Tom Andrews of the Cream City Athletic club.

Lightweight Boxers Billed for Action.

Charley White. Richie Mitchell

K. O. Chicagoan's Hope.

Anybody who tries to pick a winner in advance of this battle is certainly up against it. Almost anything might happen, for in past performances White has shown there isn't much use in trying to dope him out. His ability to rock 'em to sleep with his strong left hand makes him a possible winner by the knockout route, and in this contest it looks as if he will have to put over the sleep producing wallop if he is to be returned the victor.

In stacking up against Mitchell, White will find he is going against a mitter who is faster and more clever than himself, but lacking in punching ability. Richie has speed, as he showed when he held World's Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh to an even break in ten rounds. He is a good offensive boxer, in fact, a far better in attack than on defense, and this is where his main danger will be when he faces White. Any boxer who meeting a puncher of the caliber of Charley White must have a defense to guard against the damaging results of the wallops which are certain to be shot at him.

Welsh Solves White's Attack.

Freddie Welsh knew how to prevent White's landing his famous left hook on the jaw. He simply stuck his right glove up there to take the punches and his offensive work consisted of shooting left jabs to Charley's face. Welsh also taught Matt Wells, his fellow Britisher, how to prevent being rocked to sleep and Wells fought White three times, once getting the decision after twelve rounds of mixing.

Now it is up to Mitchell, and he will have to be mighty careful if he is going to go the limit of ten rounds. But if the bout does go that far it would not be at all surprising if he scored a popular victory.

CAMPI OUTFIGHTS SHUBERT

New York, May 27.—Eddie Campi of San Francisco outfought Al Shubert of New Bedford, Mass., in a ten round bout in Brooklyn tonight. Campi weighed 122 pounds and Shubert 122.

BECKIE'S JOB by Inez·Haynes·Gillmore

This is the sixth of a series of stories by Inez Haynes Gillmore, the famous short story writer, dealing with the adventures, trials, and joys of the "Ollivant Orphans," which will appear every Sunday in The Sunday Tribune. Each installment will be complete in itself, although the series of stories as a whole will make a delightful novel. You will find the Ollivant Orphans good company, and the author's facile style and apt character delineation will make you remember the stories as among the best works of fiction you have read.

CHAPTER VI.

"I CALCULATE I've earned a rest," Dr. Pierson was saying. "I was 75 my last birthday—an' Henry wants that I should join him in Los Angeles. I'd like to see something of the world before I die. These long cold winters do take it out of me so nowadays and Henry writes about nothing but sunshine and roses."

Dr. Pierson had to scream to make himself heard, for the canaries were shrilling so loud that their breast feathers vibrated.

"You're quite right, Dr. Pierson," Beckie screamed in answer. "And I'm glad for you—just as glad as I can be. California seems such a story book place. I shall love to think of you out there just surrounded by geraniums and calla lillies and palms and all those old missions—and everything."

Beckie was standing before the mirror in Dr. Pierson's office. Mechanically she stood there and mechanically she looked into it. She tugged her hat—in shape and color it could not possibly have been more unbecoming—down over her ears. She did not see the harsh line that the crown made, coalescing perfectly with the seam of forehead and hair; for Beckie never saw herself when she looked into the glass. And now, in addition, a blur dimmed the brightness of her gaze; she was desperately afraid that that blur might grow, might run down her cheek.

"You've been a good, faithful girl, Beckie," Dr. Pierson went on in his fatherly tones, "and so quick and smart. I don't know what I should have done without you. You've always taken such an interest in my work and it's been such a help—your remembering everybody's telephone number the way you do." His long withered fingers fumbled for a moment in the pocket of his formal black waistcoat. "I want that you should accept this as a sort of little present from me; for I haven't really given you any chance to look around."

"This" was three ten dollar gold pieces, only one of which comprised her week's pay. To Beckie's moist vision they shone from little nests of rainbow ruffles; she accepted the gift with the simplicity with which she would have offered it. "O, thank you ever so much, Dr. Pierson. It's awfully good of you. I do appreciate it."

"And if there's ever anything I can do," Dr. Pierson concluded, "you write to me at once at Henry's address—2354 Acacia avenue. Now I must be getting over to see Cousin Martha."

Beckie waited until the outer door shut. She watched the thin, tall, old figure pass the window. It was so frail that it looked like an empty suit of clothes with a head at the top. Through her sense of a material loss, a sharp pang suddenly tore Beckie. Would he live to get to Los Angeles, she wondered.

Then she put on her new spring coat—the shapeless, hueless garment so scorned of Ann. Now the blur in her eyes had precipitated and crystallized. How often had she dusted and arranged the back number magazines, how often changed the water in the aquarium, refoddered the birds, scrubbed the squirrel cage, pruned the geraniums, and trained the ivy which, starting at the mantel, had crept half way round the room! Dr. Pierson, who subsisted spiritually on a gentle philosophy of home manufacture, believed that these growing organisms in some mysterious way helped his patients to bear their agonies. As for the old dentist himself—part of Beckie's pride in her work was that he leaned so hard on her.

She did not tell the family about the change in her fortunes that night; for they were particularly gay. Ann was sending out cards for the modest tea which she and Lainey had decided to give the following Saturday; she brimmed and bristled with excitement.

"Beckie, what's Jane Forester's address? O, yes, of course, 59 Linden place"—"Do you think two kinds of sandwiches will be enough, Lainey?"—"Ed, what does Mrs. MacVeagh serve at her teas?"—"O, of course, you men never notice anything important"—"What's Isabelle Fay's address, Beck?"—"O, of course, 98 Lee. Aren't you a wonder about remembering numbers!"—"I wish I could make up my mind about the cake, Lainey. I don't want it frosted or gooey. If there's anything I hate it's to handle mushy stuff when I've got gloves on."—"What's Joe Jordan's address, Beckie?"—"I know what I'm going to do, Lainey. I'm going to ask Aunt Lottie if she'll lend us her ferns. They're awfully thick now and they'll look pretty swell massed in the bay window"—"O, Beck, what is Elizabeth John's address? This is the last I'll ask. It's such a bore looking it up in the address book"—"That's right. Thanks. You certainly are a wizard."

"I'll tell them tomorrow at breakfast," Beckie said to herself. But when tomorrow came, some unalyzable instinct kept her silent. She left the house, however, at the usual hour and she carried with her the morning paper. Perhaps she carried with her also the echo of Ann's last words, for breakfast closed in a spirited debate between them.

"I do wish, Beckie," Ann said, that you'd get rid of that hat. When I think that you paid $10 for it, I could bite the banisters! Do you want to know what it looks like?"

Beckie did not want to know, but Ann told her. "It looks like a bean pot trimmed with an egg beater. And as for that coat and dress—well, I haven't the words to describe them."

"Well, Ann," Beckie answered in her usual brisk way, "it doesn't make any difference what a homely girl wears. She's bound to look like the dickens, no matter what she puts on. If there's anything makes me tired, it's to see a woman with a face like a meat ax all dolled up. What do you want me to wear—a poke bonnet trimmed with pink roses and a chin strap?"

"No, Beckie," Ann said with her succinct sarcasm, "you're not old enough yet to try to look as young as that.

"I suppose half what you say is right," Beckie admitted, surveying appreciatively her sister's golden brown beauty. "You could wear a meal sack for a dress and a waste basket for a hat and all anybody'd say would be how cute you looked."

"And," Ann went on, ignoring this placating tribute, "you make a great mistake in taking it for granted that you're homely. You're not a beauty, of course, but there's something about you——"

"Oh, yes, I know," Beckie thrust in scornfully, "'while not exactly pretty, the bride has an expression of great intelligence and good nature——'"

"What I mean is," Ann went on, without pause, "is that you grow better looking the longer people know you. You're the kind of person that everything depends on what you wear. And you always look like the old scratch. You could be so much more attractive if you only wore the right colors and the right lines. That terrible brown that you've got on now—it's so hard and so hot at the same time—it's the only brown you can't wear. And, of course, being short waisted, you had it made with a belt a yard wide. If you'd only let me design your things. You see what Bird Barton and I have done for Lainey. But the first thing you've got to get out of your head is the idea that you're so homely."

Beckie Ollivant was certainly not a pretty girl, but she was certainly not a homely one. She was a marked physical contrast to Ann, who had the lush golden brown beauty of a girl-odalisk plus a dash of American piquancy, or of Lainey, who, though vaguely colored, had the nervous chiseling of a Tanagra figurine. Beckie was almost an Indian type. Her features were so pronounced in their irregularity that the first effect of her appearance was of strength. Later, you discovered that hers was a comely ugliness, latest that it developed a kind of splendor. Her figure was more strong than shapely, but in action it had a certain compelling vigor; she moved with the quickness not of a deer but an elk.

Beckie's face grew grave, as she ran over the want advertisements, sitting on a bench that overlooked the frog pond on the common. But she fell to work at once, marking promising looking ads in pencil and cutting them out with the little manicure scissors which she carried in her bag.

. . . . . .

"Say, Matt, who's the new skirt in your office?" Ed demanded with interest that night.

"Which one?" Matt asked, languidly.

"The strawberry blonde over in the corner," Ed answered. "Pippin! I didn't notice her until I came out."

"O, her name's Riley—Theresa Riley—she's been there a week," Matt said. "Flivver, too! The old man engaged her. The old man's a mark for any pretty girl. And I must say he's never made a mistake yet—they're all lookers. But they're going and coming all the time. More than half of them haven't got nut enough to fill the eye of a needle, but he won't have a homely girl round. No use for anything but a peach applying for a job in our joint."

"It's my experience that it isn't much use for a homely girl to apply anywhere," Ed said, cynically. "There's nothing for a homely girl to do, anyway, but make way with herself—as far as I can see. Well, I'm for old Johnson's system myself. Oh, say, Beck, what's Cliff Conroy's telephone number? I want to call him up."

"Lord, what would we do without Beckie to remember all the numbers of things for us?" Lainey said. "That reminds me. When does Bessie Week's birthday come, Beck? It's somewhere along here, I know, and I want to send her a card."

Three weeks went by. That day was the first of many days equally fatiguing and disheartening. The impulse not to tell her bad news hardened to a resolution. Beckie bore her burden and her anxiety alone.

Beckie had had no previous experience job hunting. Her position with Dr. Pierson had been her first; it had come to her through a friend. There were one or two traps of the advertising game into which she immediately fell. The work at one place was delightfully easy—merely to fold circulars. But when she discovered that she was expected to contribute two weeks of work before she drew any pay, she balked. She did not return the next morning. In another place the work was almost equally simple and mechanical—coloring photographs. But when she learned that she must first buy the tools of the trade at the price of three weeks' salary she balked again. She did not return that afternoon.

After a while her native shrewdness taught her what advertisements to answer and what to ignore. Unconsciously, she began to sift and classify them. But although she applied at "the above address" wherever it seemed promising, her application was invariably unsuccessful. There were always plenty of pretty girls in the group of applicants; girls who, because of their beauty, wore their clothes with grace and their manners with authority.

After two weeks Beckie instituted a system of her own. She ransacked the neighborhood into which her first application took her, shop after shop, office after office, floor after floor, just as they happened to come. This process brought her all kinds of experiences. She was refused politely, refused brutally, refused with excuses or without them, ignored utterly. Men received her with their hats on, their coats off, their cigars in their mouth, their feet on the desk. One told her that she was too damned homely for his business. After this last encounter Beckie retreated to the common and sat looking dully over the frog pond until it was time to go home.

But although Beckie's experience continued to pile up an increasing load of discouragement, always in the morning she left the house with the quick, strong step and the straight, bright glance of her unconquerable optimism. And if occasionally Lainey said at dinner, "Beckie, dear, it does seem to me that you look awfully tired when you get home nights. Are you working especially hard?" Ann was quite as likely to cap it the next morning with, "Beckie, I never saw anything like how cheerfully you go to that old office. I can't imagine anything that I'd hate more. Listening to people yowling all the time. And as for Dr. Pierson, O, of course, I realize he's a fine man and all that, but he looks so like a dentist. He has what I call a dental smile. And just the fact that he wears a Prince Albert—it certainly must be ten years since people have been wearing Prince Alberts."

"Ann," Beckie said, "You know you said you'd like to design some clothes for me.

And even the fox minded Ann never realized that Beckie no longer offered any ripost to these thrusts.

"Isn't there something I can do?" Beckie asked herself again and again in those early hours of the night when her tired memory marshaled and reviewed the day's experiences. "Let alone having an art or a profession or a business, if I only had a trade like a boy! If there was only something I could tell them I could do!"

Regularly every Saturday evening she turned over to Ann the $5, half her salary, which was her share of the family expenses. Of Dr. Pierson's $30 she had left a little over $10. When that was gone—not that Beckie's situation was desperate, although to a girl of her sturdy independence it had its desperate side,

They lived—the six orphan Ollivants—on the cooperative system. Ed, the oldest, gave, as fitted his larger salary, the biggest weekly sum to Ann, the family housekeeper and treasurer. Matt, Lainey and Beckie paid equal amounts, but Beckie looked after 16 year old Roland, who was still in high school, and Lainey took care of 18 year old Ann, who ran the house. They were all pleasure loving and extravagant; Ed often borrowed from Beckie and Matt from Lainey. Somebody was always in debt to somebody else. Of course, Beckie would always have a home—a roof over her head and her three meals a day—but she did not want to be an object of charity in it.

And so, in spite of herself—and Beckie's soul was compact of courage and steadfastness—the grind of continual refusal was beginning to corrode. Often now she had to walk up and down the sidewalk before she could pump up the courage to go into the office and emit her stereotyped "I've come here to apply for work," to meet that stereotyped "What can you do?" And now some of the sturdiness had gone out of her bearing. She drooped a little, sometimes from fatigue, sometimes from hunger, but more often from disheartenment. And though she took as much care of her personal appearance as formerly, three weeks of tramping in all kinds of weather had not improved her clothes. The bean pot hat had gone the roughened way of all cheap velvet; the baggy coat had proved to be of a cloth that faded and pulled.

. . . . . .

One Saturday, coming in town from Roxbury, a shred of conversation caught her ear.

"And so I just told him that he could have his old job, I wasn't gonna stand for anything like that. I don't have to."

"Well, what do you know about that" another voice commented admiringly; "what did he say, May?"

Beckie looked around. Two girls were roost on the commons. She stayed there all the afternoon. "I guess I'm about at the end of my rope," she said once.

The keynote of that conversation was struck again in her own home Sunday night.

"O, say, Bird," Ann asked, "I've always meant to ask you how did you come to leave Morgan Rector's to get that swell job you're holding down."

"It came about in the queerest way," Bird answered. "A man named Lewis used to come in to Morgan Rector's occasionally, and one day we got to talking about the books. He seemed very much surprised—at least he said he was—that I'd read so much. And one day he told me that if I'd like a position with the book firm, Robertson-Reynolds, he thought he could get me one. Of course I was delighted, said so, and in a week I got a note from him telling me they would like to see me."

"Just handed to you on a gold platter," Ann said. "Well, that's the advantage of looking like a girl on a magazine cover."

"Well, you needn't talk," Lainey said, "everybody's always offering you a job. It began, Bird, when we were children, when a man stopped up on the street to ask Ann if she'd like to take the little boy's part in a revival of 'Rosedale.' And I don't wonder! O, Bird, Ann was such a wonderful looking little girl—with her thick long mop of goldy brown curls, her great, big goldy brown eyes and cheeks like Baldwin apples. Well, it's kept up ever since. Before old Mr. Snell got that new secretary he asked her if she didn't want the job. Of course, Ann is awfully able and efficient, just as you are, Bird, but I'm sure neither of you would get work so easy if it weren't for your looks."

"O slush!" Bird said.

"O pickles!" Ann said.

Beckie said nothing.

"O say, Beck," Bird asked lazily, "what's Allie Dean's street number? I've got to write her a letter tonight."

. . . . . .

But early Monday morning she was back again invading the business section with a kind of desperate fury In the middle of the afternoon she opened the door of the Renaissance Art company—opened the door and stood for an amazed and an abashed second on the threshold.

It was a big vague room into which Beckie looked—and it was filled with shadows. Heavy curtains of a dull reseda green velvet, hanging in stately folds, shrouded the windows. Gray monk's cloth, divided into squares by a dull wood, covered the walls. Here and there a red print framed in an old green gold or a bust carved and colored as from old wood, gleamed from these squares. The furniture emitted a muted copper glow. There were three presiding genii in the place. One was a coppery, heroic size classic blonde who exactly matched the furniture. A second was a lithe, smoky olive pre-Raphaelite brunette who exactly matched the hangings. The third was a short, piquant, post-impressionist nondescript who contrasted with everything.

Three pairs of frigid eyes turned to survey the short, squat figure suspended in the midst of the meal-sack coat in the doorway. Three pairs of delicate eyebrows flew to their highest altitude.

"Will you tell me, please," Beckie asked timidly, "where I go to apply for a place here?"

The smoky olive brunette answered. "Well, I don't know as they want any girl here. I haven't heard anything about it. There's the office, though." An exquisite pre-Raphaelite gesture indicated a flight of stairs leading to a mezzanine balcony.

Beckie timidly attacked the stairs. She walked around three sides of the balcony until she came to an office, glassed in part way to the ceiling, which bore the name Willard Pray. She knocked on the door. There was no answer. She turned the knob; the door opened; she went in. Inside two men were talking. One, his back towards her, Beckie could not see. The other was sitting in a swivel chair before a businesslike looking roll top desk. He first blotted out the roar of the street by shutting the window, then turned on Beckie a thunderous brow and a sudden barked "Well, what do you want?"

"I've come to apply for a position here," Beckie said.

The thunderous aspect of his face, instead of increasing, melted a little. Beckie's heart gave a leap. "What can you do?" he demanded.

"Anything," Beckie lied desperately.

"What, for instance?" the man demanded.

"Everything," Beckie lied recklessly.

The man bellowed. "Stenographer, typewriter, cashier, bookkeeper—quick! What can you do?"

"Nothing!" Beckie told the truth despairingly.

The man surveyed her for a disgusted instant. And Beckie surveyed him for an entreating one. He was short, stocky, strong looking, with an irregular, pugnacious face, healthily colored. "We don't need any help," he snapped. He jerked about in his chair in a manner that unmistakably closed the interview.

Beckie shut the door quietly. She made automatically in the direction of the stairway. But for the first time her courage threatened to break. She knew that she must not cry; she held her jaw tight with one hand, the other hung clenched at her side. It seemed a long time before she got to the stairs. Finally she stopped and peered about. She had walked past the stairway, made the square of the balcony, and came to the office again. Evidently the window had not again been raised. The two men were talking; their words came clear to Beckie.

"—looked kinder pathetic to me," the other man said.

"Yes," answered Mr. Pray, "but I see a dozen like her every day. I have to have good lookers, Chet. And, Lord, wasn't she homely?"

"Yes, she was homely," Chet answered, "aching homely. And yet——"

Again Beckie made in the direction of the stairway—blindly this time. And now her courage had definitely broken; it poured in streams over her cheeks. She could not descend to face the three successful hours below. She waited, struggling with gasps that tried to turn into sobs. Presently she became conscious that "Chet" had come out of the office, and, gazing leisurely at the pictures on the walls, had passed on the other side of the balcony, was disappearing down the stairs. Beckie watched him out of sight. Suddenly her tears stopped. She lifted her head and threw her shoulders back. With a decisive hardening of her expression, she turned, not in the direction of the stairs but of the office. Mr. Pray looked up from his work when she opened the door, but obviously he was too surprised to speak.

"I've come back to ask your advice, Mr. Pray," Beckie said. "I suppose you're too busy to talk with me. But you've got to. I don't care what happens to me. The worst you can do is to send for the police and have me thrown out of your office, and I shan't care much if you do. But if you will listen to me, I would like you to advise me just as you would your sister or any girl you know; for I don't know where to turn next. I'm desperate. I've been nearly a month trying to get a job and I haven't landed one yet, although I've answered dozens and dozens of ads and applied at hundreds of places on the chance that they might need somebody.

"When I came out of your office a little while ago I got mixed up so on that balcony that I came back here by accident. I heard you and that gentleman that's just gone out discussing me. I heard you tell him that you couldn't give me a job because I was so homely. That didn't surprise me or hurt me—so very much. For nobody knows that I'm homely better than I do. I've always known it. I've got accustomed to it. But what I want to ask you is, what is a homely girl going to do? It isn't my fault that I'm not pretty. I'd do anything in this world if I could make myself over. Nobody enjoys beauty more than I. I adore it. I can watch a pretty girl for hours. And yet, ever since I can remember, I've had to stand aside and see pretty girls take with the utmost ease all the things that I have to half kill myself to get. I don't begrudge them their good luck, but I do think it's unfair.

"And then there's another side to it. Sometimes I wonder that men never think that a homely girl might work harder and prove more faithful than a pretty girl, simply because she's got to—to hold down her job. I'd work my hands to the bone if somebody would only give me a chance—I'd be so grateful—O, all the rest of my life I'd—But nobody will. What am I going to do?"

Mr. Pray's choleric blue eyes had gone from Beckie's face to the brisk scene outside his window. But there his gaze had set; his face had turned to a mask. Now he spoke. "Well, can't you really do anything?" he asked; and though perceptibly he tried to make his voice violent, perceptibly it had become gentle. "Isn't there something you've got on you that's different from other people?"

"I can remember numbers," Beckie answered with the mental limpidity of despair. "It seems to me that I can remember every number that's ever been said in my presence from the day I was born until this moment. When I go out of here, I shan't remember about what kind of furniture there is in this office or what color your eyes are or what the window looks out on, but I shall know that your telephone is 3456 Back Bay, that that picture has a tag with 23,743 on it, and that the address of this office is 673 Boylston."

Mr. Pray swung about hard. "Numbers!" he said. "Numbers! Can you remember numbers? If you can remember numbers, you're the girl I've been looking for for ten years. See here. The pictures in our catalogues run from 1 to 36,000. Now, all those girls downstairs can remember the names of the pictures, the artist who painted them, the gallery where they are hung, and the city where the gallery is, but there isn't one of them can get the numbers, except the big sellers, without looking them up in the catalogue. I can't myself. And sometimes a bunch of a thousand pictures will come in from the factory that have all got to be numbered and numbered quick."

"Mr. Pray," Beckie said eagerly, "at the end of six months I should know the number of every picture in this place."

"All right," Mr. Pray said shortly. "You're engaged. I'll start you on $12 a week.'

. . . . . .

"O," Beckie remarked casually that night just before dinner "Dr. Pierson is going to sell out his practice and go to Los Angeles. He gave me notice the other day, and today, if you please, I walked right into the Renaissance Art company and got a job at $12 a week."

"The Renaissance Art company," Ed echoed. "That's on Boylston street. You were awfully lucky to get in there, Beckie. I've met Pray. They say he's an awfully hard man to please, but he's mighty good to his help. Swell joint, isn't it? When I go in there I'm always hoping those skirts will tear off some cabaret stuff."

"Looks like an aquarium to me," Matt said. "I'm always expecting one of those dolls to pull out a banana and eat it to prove she can live under water."

"I think it's perfectly charming," Lainey declared. "Those girls always look to me like captive princesses in Maeterlinck."

"Well, I'm glad you're out of that dentist office," said Ann with satisfaction. "I'd just as soon have a job with the morgue."

. . . . . .

"Ann," Beckie said privately that night, "you know you said once that you'd like to design some clothes for me and that you'd like to show me how to do my hair a different way. Well, I want you to do that. You see, those girls in Pray's dress like pictures. Now I know I can't look like a picture, but I don't want to look like a comic valentine. I've just borrowed $20 from Ed, and I want you to go in town tomorrow and buy some stuff for a dress that will go with walls about the color of a dirty duster and curtains the color of those olives that look as though they were rotten."

The warhorse scented battle. Ann's slumberous eyes exploded with anticipation. "I know exactly what I'm going to get," she announced after a brief interval of silent concentration. "I shall buy it in Chinatown. It will be a sage green, something with a lustrous surface and very dull, shadowy figure in it of the same color. It's going to be made very high waisted, with a long skirt that just escapes the ground—that makes you look tall."

"You ought to wear a string of dull red beads," Ann went on.

"O my grief!" Beckie quavered. "Necklaces always make me feel as if I was being hung."

"Then I shall teach you how to do your hair. I shall part it in the middle and pull it out soft about your face, and coil it low in your neck."

"It will make me nervous as a witch, fiddling with a hair net," Beckie groaned. "But I'll wear one," she added hastily.

. . . . . .

"Miss Ollivant," Mr. Pray called down from the mezzanine balcony six months later (he was reading from a list of figures that he held in his hand), "what's 987?"

"Cimabue Madonna, the Uffizzi, Florence," Beckie answered.

"13,426?" pursued Mr. Pray, making a note.

"Vermeer Interior, The Hermitage, St. Petersburg."

"29,587?"

"Rosa Bonheur's 'Horse Fair,' Metropolitan gallery, New York."

"6,578?"

"St. Agnes Outside the Walls, Rome."

After a while Mr. Pray returned to his office. Downstairs, Beckie moved from point to point, replacing pictures in portfolios.

A man came into the shop, glanced keenly in passing at her preoccupied face, ascended to the mezzanine.

Beckie, still preoccupied, arose, photograph in hand, and followed him up the stairs. She stopped at the cabinet outside Mr. Pray's office. The conversation of the two men penetrated her absorption.

"Hullo, Chet," exclaimed Mr. Pray jovially. "How's the boy?"

"Fine and dandy," answered Chet. "Say, I see you engaged that homely little thing that applied for a job the last time I was here."

"Whaddye mean—homely?" roared Mr. Pray. "How in thunder can you ever call her homely. That girl's got a bean on her that's the most useful thing in this establishment. Let me tell you her face grows on you. It's got more character in it than all those wax dolls down there put together."

The Frame of Public Favor

Charles Chaplin

IT is not much use to try to tell you anything about Charles Chaplin. You know all about him—I think you know all about him, anyhow. Land knows, enough has been printed to start a Chaplin encyclopedia well on its way. His must have his biography accompanying his picture, however, so here goes for a slight resume. Mr. Chaplin was born in a suburb of London twenty-seven years ago. Both his father and mother were on the stage and so have been his ancestors as far back as he can trace his family tree. Having therefore been practically born on the stage, Mr. Chaplin started his histrionic career at the age of 7, when he did clog dancing in a London theater. Later he appeared in a couple of melodramas. After that he went to school for awhile—to the Hern Boys' college. He has played with Charles Frohman and William Gillette and came to America first to take a lead comedy part with Fred Karno's "A Night in an English Music Hall." He has been in pictures for about three years. His work with the Keystone Comedy company made him famous. Later he went with Essanay and now he is Mutual's darling pet. When he is not working he does the ordinary things any man does. In appearance he is slight and not so vurr, vurr tall. He has brown eyes, brown hair, and a wide and whimsical smile. He is not married.

Essay on the Poor Animals Predestined to Be Movie Actors.

MUCH space, indeed, both in newspapers, magazines, and other publications, has been devoted to the doings of the humans who have cast their lot upon the screen. From their birth until the time they limp slowly out of the picture—they never die—bulletins of their doings are ever before the public eye. You learn that they were born in Egypt or came from an old southern family. They went on the stage from necessity—their family needed food. There they made such a success that it seemed not wise to turn back. Then pictures claimed them, and now you have them at home, abroad, working in their gardens, studying themselves in long mirrors, raising chickens, petting dogs, motoring, airshipping, submarining, marrying—and denying it—and giving advice to those who would but couldn't.

All this space, I say—all this attention—all this thought—is given without grudging to the men and women of the motion picture profession. Yes! But I ask you, What of the animals?

What of the harried beasts wrenched from their jungle homes and hurdled into captivity? What of the pups and cubs and kittens and things that will never know a normal childhood, because they were torn from their simple life by emissaries of motion picture companies, who insisted on teaching them tricks in order that motion picture audiences might clasp their hands and say, as the scene with the trick in it sped by, "How cute!" What, I ask you, do we learn about the animals?

Do they describe with joy and saccharin adjectives the sylvan dell wherein the lion that would like to eat Kathlyn Williams, but doesn't dare, first saw the light of day? No. It's Kathlyn Williams who was born—they tell you all about her, and then they speak of her daring work with the lion. Nothing about the good old southern family the lion came from. Not a word of his ancestors who stalked the jungles performing feats of bravery and gastronomy never before nor since equaled. Nothing about the sweetheart who went away in a corner and died just because she could hear him roar no longer. No. The lion in the picture is just lion—that's all. Ugly big brute—look at his eyes—how can Miss Williams dare?—etc.

Then the camels, patient things! Who ever gives a thought to the camels aside from the one that a camel as a whole is a remarkably ugly beast but useful in the desert? Nobody. The camel is an ugly beast. He probably knows he's an ugly beast. He's no doubt extremely sensitive about having his ugliness paraded on the screen. That's the way he feels about it. But what can he do? Willy-nilly, he must march along en silhouette whenever an Arabian night happens to strike the producer as a good thing to introduce. There never was an Arabian night in motion pictures without its camel, you know. Dey do go togedder. But for pity's sake do give the camel some credit. Say he's a nice camel and forbear to mention that he's ugly. Consider his lineal forbears and cogitate on the problem why is he a camel? Of course, why shouldn't he be a camel? Or why shouldn't you be a camel, for that matter? There's plenty of food for thought for you in that camel as he ambles along the sand dunes, so give not all your attention to the beauteous maid in the palanquin or the hero who, you know, is just about to spring into the calcium light.

In justice it must be said that more attention is paid to the dog in films than to any of his brother or sister dumb ones. We have respect for the dog. He lives with us. We are used to him. When a dog does anything remarkable, however, I ask you if this isn't just what you remark:

"Isn't he cute? Isn't he cute? Perfectly cute! How much patience it must have taken to train him like that!" Surely. That's what you say when, to do the dog justice, you should deliver yourself as follows:

"Wonderful! Remarkable! Case of almost human intelligence. How much patience that dear animal must possess to submit it to so much training!"

That's the way to talk!

Cats the same way.

THE EAST WINDOW.

Sitting in my east window, looking out over the water, I find myself wondering how many motion pictures have staged their water scenes on its broad bosom; how many shipwrecked heroines have been bravely towed to shore by the HE who always comes just in time (if it's a good picture); how many despairing males have stalked on its shores, the black cigar of misery clenched tightly in their—their—clenched teeth; how many boats have burned; how many canoes have turned—how many fish have yearned——? Sitting in my east window, I wonder all these things as I await the express to the nuthouse.

WHY THE PIANIST QUIT HER JOB.

She had slithered over into a sob melody to accompany the slow strangulation of the villain, when she became aware of a commotion in the audience. Looking back, she beheld a weeping fat man making for the piano. He bellowed mournfully as he waddled: "It was my wife's favrut. It was my wife's favrut, lady. Keep on playing it; it was my wife's favrut." He sank into a seat close to the pianist, and for a solid hour kept her playing the sob melody. When he left finally it was with the solemn assurance that he would return on the morrow. Which is why the lady pianist looked for another job as the shades of night drew on.

MAE TINEE'S MOVIE ANSWERS TO FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

MRS. WILLIAM H.: Why don't they show the actresses' feet in the movies? If you are not seeing feet at the particular theater you may be assured that it is not the fault of the picture, but of either the screen or the projecting machine. No reason at all why their feet shouldn't be seen, and they usually are unless, I suppose, for reasons best known to herself an actress might request that this part of her anatomy be left to the imagination.

N.: The people to whom you refer are all with the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

AGNES: In "The Right to Live" Violet Radcliffe played the part of Joe Fraser. Y'wekkum!

ANXIOUS READER: If you will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope I will be glad to mail you the material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. I also will inclose what I have on the doubling process. It is interesting, I think.

READER I.: Marshall Neilan is with Famous Players, Los Angeles, Cal. Yes, I think that Mary Pickford is a dear, and that Marguerite Clarke is a darling.

E. F.: You would like me to answer your question in the paper? Vurr well. I should like to. Lottie Pickford's husband's name is Bert Rupp. Yes, Owen Moore is the husband of Mary Pickford. Anita Stewart is not married. Her picture appeared in the Frame some time ago. I am mighty glad you like the page. Thank you.

STEVEN B.: I cannot give you the names of the directors about whom you ask. If you will send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope, however, I shall mail you a list of the companies and you can write to the companies direct.

A KNUT: Do I think Marshall Neilan would listen to A Knut. Don't call me he, she, or it again. Say she, sir.

R. S. W.: Marguerite Courtot is with the Gaumont Mutual company, Los Angeles, Cal.

DEAR OLD GIRL: "Blue eyes, light curly hair, and a dandy little Shetland pony." Some combinash! You had better send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope for printed material I have on how to become a photoplayer. There may be a chance for you and there may not. Probably not.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

Herewith is presented the first episode of the great, thrilling George Kleine-Tribune photoplay serial, "Gloria's Romance," written by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes as the especial vehicle for America's most charming actress of romance, Miss Billie Burke. For her services as actress in the title role of the serial Miss Burke receives $4,000 a week. "Gloria's Romance" is a photoplay of rare situations and wonderful photography. As a story it has the inimitably brilliant style that characterizes the work of Rupert Hughes. See the pictures at the nearest theater showing them and read the story here. Watch for it every Sunday. The pictures will be shown in the leading theaters. A new episode is released every Monday.

CHAPTER ONE.

"RATHER remarkable, isn't it," said the sick old lion, Judge Freeman, "that the most expensive hotel and the most luxurious resort in the world should be only a few miles from an almost impenetrable wilderness inhabited by Indians that the United States army could never dislodge?"

"Yes, it is odd," said his young doctor; "but the prices here are almost as impenetrable as the knife grass of the Everglades. And as for Indians, the United States navy couldn't dislodge some of these old millionaire squaws from their snobbery."

"I'm afraid my daughter finds it so," the judge agreed. "Here we've been for two whole weeks and Lois doesn't know anybody who is anybody—except Pierpont Stafford's boy, and I'm afraid he's only flirting with her."

Dr. Royce had not been engaged to prescribe for Miss Lois Freeman's ambitions, so he changed the subject. "It's hard to believe that there is a blizzard in New York today when you look at these flowers and see those half dressed mobs wallowing in the surf."

The judge gave a jump and gasped: "Good Lord, hear that scream! Some woman is being murdered."

Royce checked him with a gesture and a smile.

"Sit still, judge; it's only Gloria Stafford having another battle with her governess."

The judge settled back into his blanket, grumbling: "The little devil—always in hot water."

Dr. Royce came to her defense with a curious warmth. "They're driving her with too tight a rein. She's too big hearted and brave and wise to be treated as a child much longer."

The old man sighed: "We fathers with motherless girls to raise are pretty helpless cattle. I can send a criminal to the chair, but I can't punish my daughter: she does what she pleases, and it rarely pleases me. And Pierpont Stafford can run a string of banks and make a railroad system eat out of his hand, but that girl of his has him—I believe they say 'buffaloed'—or is it 'Pittsburghed'? Isn't that Pierpont out there in the surf now? I wish I could go in. Do you think I might?"

The doctor shook his head: "You run out on the links and play a little golf among the palm trees. Tomorrow I may let you have a dip."

"I don't feel quite up to golf."

"Go on; don't disobey. You're worse than —than——" Another scream from the corridor gave him the missing word. "You're worse than Gloria."

He lifted the judge from his chair, thrust a bag of golf clubs into his arms, and ordered him off. The judge pleaded: "Who'll play with me? Will you?"

"Not much! You're had enough of me for today. Here's your daughter. Miss Lois, let me introduce your father. Take him round the links once, won't you?"

Lois obeyed with more grace than graciousness. Her thoughts were on the two strings to her bow. She had had to content herself for her first week at Palm Beach with the attentions of Richard Freneau, a young broker in charge of a branch office at the Royal Poinciana. But recently she had caught the eye of David Stafford, and she had tried to hold it. Freneau was handsome—much too good looking for his own good or the good of any girl or woman he focused his eye upon. Freneau was magnetic and he was great fun, but David Stafford was good business. To capture the son of Pierpont Stafford would be high finance—something tremendous.

The judge, her father, kept his eyes on Lois more than on the golf ball, and landed in the bunkers with regularity. He knew that his daughter was up to some mischief, but he was sure that it was not the innocent mischief of the obstreperous Gloria.

II.

Gloria Stafford, exquisite in her bathing suit, was like a bisque figure come to life—very much to life as she stood outside her bedroom door and held the knob against her governess, who tugged in vain at the opposite knob. Then Gloria let go, and the governess went staggering backward across the room, while Gloria with shrieks of laughter made her way off and down the corridor and out to the beach.

The beach being no less than Palm Beach, she dodged among throngs of the well known, the much photographed, who were also making their way, though more sedately, to the surf. It was 12 o'clock, the fashionable bathing time. To be seen in the water more than half an hour earlier or more than half an hour late was socially fatal.

The governess followed the fugitive in hot haste, but Gloria sought refuge in the crowded ocean. She dived and stayed under as long as she could, but Miss Sidney descried her at once and gesticulated violently, commanding her to come back. Gloria merely bobbled her pert little bonnet and splashed in behind her father. Miss Sidney persisted and Gloria gave her father a push, saying: "You go make her let me alone. Tell her she'll be sorry if she doesn't."

The capitalist floundered out with the apologetic manner of an overgrown schoolboy, for even he was afraid of the governess. And he was not very impressive in a bathing suit.

He made his way to Miss Sidney's presence and mumbled: "Would you mind if Gloria had her morning swim, please?"

The governess explained to him, as if she were talking to another child, that since Gloria had positively refused to work out her problem in algebra she had been forbidden to go into the water. Nevertheless she had flagrantly rebelled, secretly arrayed herself for the bath, and fled. It would never do to let her have her own way.

"Er—hum—I see," said Stafford. He bowed meekly and returned with still less courage to face his daughter.

A widower with a woman-child of 16 is pathetic enough at best, but Gloria was so effulgently 16, so eagerly alive, and so enchantingly pretty that her father was disarmed by a mere glance at her. His anger was sure to melt in a shamefaced smile.

In the meanwhile Gloria had made the most of her stolen moments and with swift overhand strokes had put a number of gleaming breakers between her and the shore.

She turned just in time to see her father beckoning to her with his best imitation of the stern parent. She knew that the governess had cowed him, and she did not wish to humiliate him by her own disobedience.

So she swam back through the heads floating on the water like apples in a hallowe'en tub. It made her boiling mad to be disgraced before all the important people. She could see some of them grinning at her. Her brother David openly ridiculed her and splashed water over her.

She pretended not to see him, but, reaching her father at last, she hurled herself upon him and ducked him under the water. Then she scrambled to the beach. When the enraged governess seized her by the wrist Gloria tried to pull her into the froth. But the governess was too big for her and she haled Gloria out of the romantic sea into a hard world of dry sand and drier mathematics.

Gloria slunk along in a white rage, a storm brewing behind her eyes. She was not often sullen and never morbid. She was made up of joy, sunlight, and mischief, all the fresh and sweet of life. But she loathed being told to do things or not to do things, forbidden, commanded—in a word, bossed. She was poised at the nameless stage between childhood and girlhood. She was not what is termed "out," yet her restive spirit made it impossible for her to be kept "in." She was tired of being snubbed.

Her brother David, some four years her senior, made life increasingly lonesome for Gloria by his freedom and the superior, worldly airs he assumed for her especial torment. In earlier years they had been very near to each other, and now it was bitter to Gloria's proud soul to watch David coming and going at will, dancing every night, and flirting desperately with Lois Freeman, whom Gloria did not like because her brother did.

O, yes, David could flirt his head off, but her father turned white and her governess turned blue if Gloria so much as mentioned a lover in a novel or suggested that she might have one herself at some time in that future which she was waiting for as the next installment of an exciting serial. Gloria was woman enough to resent restraint and child enough to be capable of making a tragic blunder if she ever broke away.

III.

Gloria issued a declaration of independence as soon as she reached her room. It began with: "I'm too old to have a governess!"

"Thanks!" Miss Sidney snapped.

"You're more than welcome!" Gloria snapped back. "I want one thing understood. This is the last time I'll stand being treated as a child. I'm not one. At my age my grandmother was the mother of my father, and if you don't change your treatment of me I'm going to run away and marry the first man I meet."

"People who are always going to do things never do them," said the governess, with the primness of a copybook. "But if you're so old and wise suppose you prove it first by doing your algebra lesson. It's very simple."

"They never made my grandmother learn algebra," Gloria protested.

"They never taught her to run an automobile either."

"That's another thing. My brother has a car of his own and I haven't even a pushmobile. Half the girls of my age have their own motors. I can run one as well as any of them. It's a shame that my father won't buy me one."

"Perhaps if you learned your lessons he might reward you with a car."

This rainbow of hope brought the end of the storm. Gloria beamed and ran to slip out of her bathing suit and into her luncheon frock. The governess almost smiled as she wrote the problem on the blackboard she used for Gloria's lessons. When Gloria came back Miss Sidney pointed to the figures.

"It's very simple, my dear," she said. "You have only to multiply a+b by a+b."

"But——"

"Work it out yourself, dear, and call me when it is finished."

Gloria stared at the problem and felt herself slipping back into childhood at a breakneck speed. She had no more idea of what it all meant than a new born babe. She put on a pair of big tortoise shell spectacles, but they made her look younger th make her look younger than ever and gave her confidence. She could see that foolish a+b, but she could not see why any one should want to know what would happen if you did such a foolish thing as to multiply it by itself.

When the blackboard blurred before her eyes she moved to the window and stared at the glittering merriment of the crowd. Everybody was at play except Gloria: people in bathing suits, yachting flannels, golf togs, tennis things, bicycle clothes, motor gear. They streamed along the walks, the sand, the piazzas, sat in wicker chairs, or rolled along in "afromobiles."

By and by Gloria saw Lois Freeman come in from the links. When Dick Freneau sauntered up Lois deserted her father at once. Gloria did not like the way she ogled Mr. Freneau. Lois used the same languishing expressions Gloria had seen her working off on David.

Gloria wanted to run out and warn poor Mr. Freneau that Lois was a deceitful minx. Mr. Freneau had such lovely, trusting eyes; it was a crime to lure him on. Gloria meditated: "They say he's a broker—whatever that is. I wonder what a broker breaks—hearts probably, if Mr. Freneau is a sample. O, dear, this awful algebra."

She stood pouting at life in general and study in particular. She turned back to her task and stood in so melancholy a posture that Dr. Royce, passing her window and seeing her, paused to study her for a moment as if she were a painted figure in a painted scene. He thought she was painted splendidly well. She was so pretty that she made his heart ache. It ached for himself and then for her, the poor little prisoner. He tapped on the window.

IV.

Gloria turned and recognized her visitor. Her eyes twinkled with affection. She did like Dr. Royce! David had presented him to her. Dr. Royce had graduated at David's college: they were members of the same fraternity.

"You ought to be out here in the sun," Dr. Royce suggested.

Gloria was shocked at the idea. She pointed to the blackboard: "I'm in jail for a thousand years. It will take me at least that long to do this hateful problem."

Royce could not enter her room to go to the blackboard, so he asked her to bring the blackboard to him. She fetched it joyously and gave him chalk and said: "There isn't any answer, though."

He was too polite to say, "Why, this is the easiest thing in the world," but he showed that it was for him by the speed and smiling ease of his chalk work.

In a moment the riddle was solved. Gloria understood it a little less than before, but it meant a release from captivity, and she was so entranced that she flung her arms about him and gave him a resounding kiss and called him "a wonderful, marvelous, angel man."

To her it was a kiss of childish gratitude for the help of older wisdom. She hurried the blackboard back to the easel and began to copy the doctor's neat figures in her own scrawl.

But Royce stood quivering with the unexpected attack. He knew that it was a young girl's kiss given in confidence and ignorance, and it was therefore sacred. But he could not help feeling a thrill of prophetic hope. Soon she would grow up to womanhood and—she must love some one, and why not him? She was very rich, but his own future was gorgeous in his dreams, and Gloria was the most gorgeous thing in his gorgeous dreams.

Then he reproached himself for the mood and grew sad at the thought of the years that must roll over Gloria's sunlit head before he could even pay court to her. And in those years what dangers might she not encounter—dangers to her health, her soul, her happiness? He longed to protect her through them all.

He saw that Gloria had already forgotten him. She had copied his work and she was rubbing out his calculations. He wondered if that were prophetic, too.

V.

When Gloria had the blackboard all shipshape she howled to the governess to come and see her triumph. Gloria regretted the deception; but what other refuge has the weak from the strong?

Miss Sidney raised her eyebrows and doubtless suspected that Gloria had enjoyed outside aid; but she had an engagement of her own with the tutor of a rich young imbecile, and she pretended to be convinced.

Gloria was permitted to call it an algebra lesson, and for a reward she was assigned to the study of a list of the English kings. Gloria did not mind that, for she hid a stolen novel inside the page and read something far more important to her than ancient history—modern romance.

If Gloria had not learned a lesson of any importance that day, neither had her elders.

When dinner time came at last Gloria's maid allowed her to select her newest Paris gown for dinner. And it was a pleasant dinner, on the veranda, with the twilight drawing round like soft curtains, the lamps glowing everywhere in the tropical verdure like little moons, and the glimmering afromobiles spinning everywhere along the walks.

And there was music. The dancing was beginning a little distance away. Gloria tried to sneak a sip of her father's coffee, but Miss Sidney caught her at it and took the cup away. But except for her everything was beautiful and tender; the very atmosphere was full of pleasant reveries. And then Miss Sidney had to look at her watch and ruin everything with the insulting word: "Bedtime!"

Gloria pretended not to hear her and talked vigorously to David. But he only laughed an elder brotherly laugh and lighted another cigaret. She ran to her father and nestled in his arms. He hugged her close, but she could tell that he was afraid of that gorgon governess.

"Daddy darling, let me go to the dance." He shook his head. "Just three dances." He shook his head. "Two? One!" He shook his head. She knew that the governess had given him his orders.

David sniffed: "Little girls aren't allowed to mingle with grownups after dark."

Gloria choked for words and threw him one glance. If looks were smacks in the eye he would have had a good one. But he only laughed the more. Then her father hardened his heart and gave her a run-along-now kiss.

She went along, but she did not run. Once more the rebellion began to simmer in her brain.

Her helplessness was her chief grievance. How could a young girl defend herself from a big governess and a big maid, a flinty hearted father, and a brute of a brother? She was pondering while the maid took off her dinner gown and hung it up and handed her her sleeping suit. A pretty time to go to bed with all Florida calling to her under the moon!

She said her prayers with an absent minded lack of conviction and crawled into bed. The governess and the maid put out the lights and left her. But they did not put out the moon.

The governess had a prosaic soul and she fell asleep in spite of the moon and the music and the pleading call of all outdoors. She even snored!

Gloria could stand everything but that. She stole from her bed and tiptoed to the governess' room to shake her and beg her not to play that tune on her nose. A better idea occurred to her. Seeing the governess' cloth slippers neatly placed on the bedside rug, Gloria pinned them there, whisked back into her own room, and, flinging off her bedgear, slipped into her dinner gown again. She dressed in the dark and got away safely from her room.

She was afraid to face the brilliant lights and the crowd, but she found a nook on the piazza where she could peer in at a window and watch the whirling couples. The tune set her heart to waltzing, and she was so famished for a dance that when old Judge Freeman came into sight she asked him to waltz with her. He shook his head dolefully.

"I'm sorry, my child, but I've been sent to bed, too."

She felt sorry for him, but she wished that people would stop calling her "my child."

She peeked at the ballroom again and watched the rivalry of David and Mr. Freneau for the dances of Lois Freeman. The two men were jealous of each other. David was furious, and Gloria was glad of it.

After a time David had a great scheme. Never dreaming that Gloria was just outside the window, within hearing distance, he asked Lois if she would not enjoy a little moonlight spin in his racer. She said that she would. David said, "Wait right here," and left the ballroom. But Lois did not waste any time waiting. She beckoned Mr. Freneau and told him that she had a headache and could dance only one more dance before she said goodnight. Gloria knew that she was killing time till David could get to the garage and back.

She heard David's car coming. The lights almost revealed her on the piazza. David stopped the car at a side entrance and ran into the hotel for Lois.

Then Gloria's inspiration came. She would save David from that siren and she would get a bit of moonlight for herself.

She dashed across the lawn, and, stepping into the car, commanded it to obey her wild will, and away it went like a magic carpet.

VI.

Her practiced hands and feet knew the steering wheel and the clutch and the brake and all, and there was a rapture beyond words in her power, her liberty, her speed. At last she was being obeyed and not obeying. This leaping monster outran the greyhound and bore her down moonlit lanes, shadowed with palms and beautiful strange trees and shrubs of exotic shape and perfume.

The road ran along the sea and the waves laughed with her. Out in the haze she saw a great full rigged ship loafing along the gulf stream. But she was in a better ship.

She could imagine the bewilderment of David and Lois when they stepped out for their clandestine escapade and found that somebody else had clandestinely escaped with the car. She laughed aloud at the picture.

She could imagine that governess waking at the racket of her own snores and getting up with a start, then deciding to see if Gloria were still in jail. She could see her putting her feet into her slippers and going kerflop! Gloria shrieked at this vision. It would pay her off for some of those cuffs on the ear that she had given Gloria. Gloria had been too good a sport to tell on her, but she had not forgotten them.

She could imagine the governess picking herself up and running barefoot into Gloria's bedroom—the empty cage whence the bird had flown. She could see the panic she fell into, and the funny sight she made in her bathrobe as she dashed out into the corridor and hunted for Gloria's father to give the alarm.

Gloria proved how far she was from having outgrown her childhood by the things that amused and justified her flight. She was a child, but she had possessed herself of this perilous engine. She was flying at forty miles an hour along almost deserted roads, cutting through sleeping villages, little oases in a jungle that closed more and more gloomily, threateningly about the road. She had no idea of the time or the distance. She only knew that at last she was free. At last she was ruling something.

Then abruptly she lost control of her magic steed. It ceased to obey the wheel. It wavered this way and that in terrifying uncertainty. The steering gear had broken.

VII.

With a sudden sharp swerve the car shot from the road and out upon the beach. Paralyzed with amazement more than fear, Gloria was carried across the sand straight into the waves. They rushed toward her as if the ocean were hungry for her. But the wheels sank in the wet sand and the breakers did not capture Gloria. They almost drowned her in their warm flood, however, and she made haste to extricate herself and climb out.

No human being saw that strange apparition, unless it were old Father Neptune, and he must have thought it was Venus rising from the sea again—this time in a very fashionable but very moist dinner gown.

Gloria was only the more exultant from this new experience. She stood a moment on the car, then jumped off and raced a wave to the shore.

She found herself in a wilderness of sand dunes and mysterious bushes. She plunged among them, thinking less of making her way home than of exploring a little deeper this Eden into which she had stumbled.

She did not know what dangers lurked on every hand. There were multitudes of serpents in this Eden—cold, fierce rattlesnakes under the most beautiful flowers. Beneath the moonlit waters of little bayous were hungry alligators; under the unwary feet the quicksands might open; the paths ended suddenly in entanglements of tall sword grass that slashed the skin at touch.

And deep in the fastnesses were the remnants of the Seminole tribes who had fought the whites for years and baffled them till palefaced treachery overcame the Indian wiles. The redmen had never forgiven the whites, and they regarded their intrusions with hatred.

As children scamper into bloodcurdling dangers with laughter, so the child Gloria danced through Paradise not knowing that she was lost in the Everglades.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

She peeked at the ballroom again and watched the rivalry for the dances of Lois Freeman

Analysis Never Revealed an Acid in a Barrymore Jest, Even When the Chemist Was a Victim—Which Could Not Always Be Said of Lackaye's.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE and Wilton Lackaye were, some evenings back, of an after the theater supper party in a Chicago restaurant. A reference to her father, the Maurice Barrymore of a thousand tales, led to the retelling, by one or another of the party, of many of the dead actor's jests, stories, and come-backs. Some doubtless were apocryphal, and in one case at least the ascription was wrong. Miss Barrymore herself told it as one of her beloved dad's most alert retorts. A roar of laughter resulted, but Lackaye appeared to be both surprised and embarrassed.

"What's wrong?" Miss Barrymore asked him. "Didn't I tell it right?"

"Y-e-s; that is, nearly," answered the actor. "You see, I always rather fancied that one; and, as there are so very many to your father's credit, you won't mind—will you?—if I explain that it was I, and not he, who said that."

"Very well; I guess dad can spare it," she consented; "but it is so good that I am sorry to be told it wasn't his!"

The anecdote possesses less point now, perhaps, than when it was first told from coast to coast to Lackaye's credit, and told by nobody more frequently or with more appreciation than by "Barry" himself. The notion that Barrymore and Lackaye were, until the death of the former, formal and duly labeled rivals in wit is a tradition of the stage which has been kept alive and fed largely by Lackaye's dislikers, as Percy Hammond would term them. As a matter of truthful record, Barrymore was the most industrious circulator of the Lackaye bon mots, while Lackaye himself has been indefatigable in preserving the Englishman's repute as one of the keenest jesters in the history of the stage in America.

As to the especial jest concerning whose origin Miss Barrymore was mistaken, nobody who knew both Barrymore and Lackaye in their respective mental and emotional slants would credit it to the former as against the latter. It had to do with a chance meeting between Lackaye and Lew Rosen, a New York "Rialto" character of twenty-five years ago. Rosen, who wrote for a certain weekly. Wherever in the land was a barber shop there could be found a copy of the weekly.

"I have something in this week's —— about you," said Rosen. "Have you read it?"

"No," said Lackaye; "you see, I shave myself."

No Sting in Barrymore's Jests.

There was in his reply an acid which analysis never revealed in a Barrymore jest, even when the chemist was a victim. To exhibit Barrymore in a like situation, that story serves which tells of his being requested by a well known wine plugger to help him out in a new venture. The latter had given up champagne in order to boost a brand of mineral water.

"Promise me," he said to Barrymore, "that you will ask for it wherever you go."

"Certainly," replied the actor; "but—good God!—what if they have it?"

The difference? Rosen, if alive, remains Lackaye's bitter enemy; but Barry's jape was sent down the ages by the goat himself.

An actor who knew both Barrymore and Lackaye intimately undertook, in the writer's hearing, to explain why the American's quips invariably hurt more than the Englishman's, and used as an illustration their respective comments on a third star who, for the fourth or fifth time, had been indiscreet enough in his personal conduct to win first page mention and editorial attention in the daily press. What Lackaye said was, in substance and words, what Barrymore said in the illustration of the raisonnier. The latter's comment was:

"Woodgin's doing this is damnable, damn him! I'm sorry! He's a great artist, and we must do what we can to get him out of this mess."

Said Lackaye:

"I'm sorry—awfully sorry! Woodgin's a great artist—great! We must get him out of this trouble; but, damn him, he's beyond pardon, and doesn't deserve to have us help him."

"You will notice," said the chap who was explaining it all, "that Barrymore buried the reproach by adding praise, while Lackaye, uttering the same sentiments, left the sting in his final sentence. We remembered him for his condemnation; we remembered Barry for his vow to help."

As to the oral encounters of which one often hears and occasionally reads, there appears to be no real record of heroic tournaments of matched wits between Barrymore and Lackaye. The latter takes the loser's end in telling of one casual contest, however.

The two were of a large group of actors who supped together after a night performance. A page boy entered to explain that a gentleman wished to see Mr. Barrymore in the ladies' parlor. As Barrymore started from the room the ten or twelve at table rose as one man and made as if to follow him. He protested. They insisted that they were eager to see the gentleman who awaited Barrymore in the ladies' parlor. Barrymore, on their promise to remain behind if he told the truth, confessed that the person in the parlor was a lady —"a well known lady, boys, and above suspicion, I swear. She—well, you see, she thinks she ought to be on the stage, and I—well, I have agreed to meet her here tonight to talk it out of her if I can."

Nobody ventured a word; everybody looked blandly incredulous. "I must ask that all of you remain here till I return—that nobody ventures to look into the parlor." They bowed in unison. Barrymore walked to the door, turned, surveyed the smiling line, and said:

"Remember, boys, I depend on your honor. On your honor! And I must add that I feel damned unsafe."

When, fifteen minutes later, Barrymore returned his attitude was that of a man who expected to be guyed; but nobody referred to the subject of the late caller. Encouraged, he braced himself and told a new story. Everybody save Lackaye laughed loud and long; he did not even smile. Barrymore, patently bent upon starting something that would lead to forgetfulness of the earlier incident, said:

"I take it, Wilton, that you did not care for that story?"

"No," was the rejoinder. "It wasn't told well and it lacked point."

"But," protested Barrymore, "the others laughed."

"Yes," admitted Lackaye, "as a tribute to the Barrymore vogue."

"The Barrymore vogue?"

"Precisely! Your story was a feeble, self-conscious effort to make us forget your caller in the parlor. Our friends here laughed because they think everything you say must needs be comic. If you separate the intrinsic humor of that story from the dimensions of the laugh it got you'll arrive at an exact estimate of the prodigious value of the Barrymore vogue."

Barrymore seemed to be gasping. The quick come-back expected by the others did not emerge. Lackaye, like a golfer with newly gained confidence, sought to press his drive.

"Don't misunderstand me," he went on. "The Barrymore vogue has been of immense use to me in my social activities. Whenever I desire a good hearing for a story I preface it by saying that it is Barrymore's latest, so that I'm sure not only of my audience but of the laughter and applause."

"Thanks for the compliment, old fellow," drawled Barrymore, without even the suspicion of a flash. "Unwittingly I've tried to repay you in kind. Whenever I have a new story to try out I tell the boys that it's Lackaye's newest, whereupon they all yawn, stretch, and go off to bed."

One of "Barry's" Best.

What has always been regarded as perhaps the best of Barrymore's impromptus was uttered in the post mortem exercises of the American debut of the late Mrs. Bernard Beere, a pretentious and singularly untalented English actress who ventured hither in 1893. Her New York opening was in a theater as large and spacious as the Chicago Auditorium. Indeed, it had been designed for grand opera and was entirely unsuitable for the actress and her play, "As in a Looking Glass." The play itself was regarded that long ago as rather daring and frank in the sex sense. The outcome of Mrs. Beere's premiere was under midnight discussion in the Lambs' club. Barrymore, who was her leading man, explained it thus:

"Theater too big—all right for pageants, spectacles, and opera; but with 'As in a Looking Glass' it was a case of our being obscene but not heard."

In kind was one of Barrymore's treasured by Lackaye from the days when, with Julia Arthur, they were members of A. M. Palmer's fine stock company. Palmer was to do an adaptation from the French, "The Price of Silence." The adaptor was the stage director, who in his dual capacity was inclined to take himself quite seriously. At the first rehearsal he lined the players in chairs across the stage, and, instead of following the sane old custom of reading the play before distributing the parts he undertook a sort of expository lecture.

Eager to make plain his own cleverness in cleaning up a typical Paris play of sex conflicts, he explained that in the original French the wife had gone to the other man's room because she loved him, but that American audiences could have no sympathy for that kind of a woman; therefore it was necessary for him, the adaptor, to devise a new and sanitary reason for the visit.

"Now," he shouted, with the exultant savor of the playwright thrilled with his own cleverness, "we are come to the crux of all drama—the motivation! The reason! The why! That is it—the why! We must know that—why did Simone go to Olivier's rooms?"

The helpless class of pupils in dramaturgy tried to appear as if pondering deeply. None dared a reply. The director glared the "Ah-h-h-h!" of the baffler, and resumed, stalking impressively from chair to chair and shaking his forefinger at the respective players.

"Why—why—why, I ask, did Simone go that day to Olivier's rooms? Why, I ask, did this virtuous wife go to the rooms of the most notorious roue in all Paris? Give me a reason!"

He was in front of Barrymore now, and, pausing, fairly seethed with passion as he asked for the twentieth time: "Why did Simone go to Olivier's rooms?"

"O, I think I know," said Barry, easily. "Rainy afternoon—nothing else to do."

Soft Answer Turns Away Wrath.

When Mrs. Fiske staged "Becky Sharp" in 1899 she devoted at least a week to the rehearsing of a single incident—the picture at the rise of the curtain on the scene of the Duchess of Richmond's ball the night before Waterloo. Five or six small characters, with a few lines apiece, were given to young "society" women with stage ambitions; and to them was intrusted the duty of carrying the apparently careless chatter which was designed to aid in giving illusion to the elaborate stage picture. The effect aimed at was most casual and easy, but to achieve it meant hours on end of the most tedious sort of rehearsing. Each speaker had a place when the curtain rose; each had a cross to make on cue; each was required to be in a given spot when her lines were to be spoken, whether those lines were of question, comment, or response.

One of the young women at the premiere neglected, as the curtain rose, to cross from right to left, in order to be placed to respond to a question asked by Becky. Mrs. Fiske, facing the audience, did not notice the beginner's failure to obey instructions, and spoke the line with a slight turn of her head toward where the minor player should have been. The young woman heard the cue, started, looked helplessly about her, and then crossed to the designated spot at right, where she spoke the line correctly and well—only she had caused a stage wait that seemed minutes long, whereas, perhaps, it was not more than five seconds. Mrs. Fiske contained herself till the curtain fell, and then called the girl to the center of the stage. Barrymore—who, as Rawdon Crowley, was scoring what proved to be the last hit of his career—stood by. Mrs. Fiske, under wraps in the effort to hold back her wrath, listened as the scared girl tried to explain.

"You see, Mrs. Fiske," she said, "I was dumb when I heard the cue, and simply couldn't speak the line on the right side. So—er—so, I just had to wait to speak till I crossed to the other side!"

"Quite so!" interjected Barry, in time to prevent Mrs. Fiske from replying, "quite so! There is a great deal to be said on the other side."

One of the most pungent of Lackaye's was uttered at the expense of THE TRIBUNE'S critic of the drama, Mr. Hammond, when, before coming to the staff of the paper, he served as the publicity man of the Grand Opera house, then under the personal management of the late John Hamlin. Lackaye, performing in that theater, was of the expressed belief that he was not given as much attention in the Chicago newspapers as the merits of his play and art deserved.

"Who is to blame?" asked a sympathetic friend.

"Who," responded Lackaye, like a flash, but the Paid Piper of Hamlin!"

Evening Up an Old Score.

Charles Klein, who was among the victims of the Lusitania sinking, was a small and unimpressive looking man, and perhaps the last being on earth whom a stranger would take to be the author of "punch" plays like "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Third Degree." Klein was one of a group of well known authors who took part in a Lambs' club gambol on a tour of the chief cities in 1909. He and the other playwrights were, in a skit called "Tuesday Morning," supposed to have been called in to doctor a play which did not get over at the Monday opening. His suggestions rejected by the manager, Klein's business was to exit grumbling.

When, at the Philadelphia performance, Klein entered, the big audience gasped its amazement at his unimpressive port. That gasp gave to Lackaye a vague notion that he at last had an opportunity of evening up an old score with the playwright. When at the next performance Klein entered, spoke his few lines, and was given his exit cue, he started for the wings and delivered his grumble, which was:

Wilton Lackaye (caricatured)

"Why was I brought here, anyhow?"

"Why," called Lackaye, cutting in before the next speech of the regular text, "so that the audience could get a good look at you and feel sorry for the actors."

If Lackaye and Klein ever spoke afterward it was because the latter rescinded his vow of eternal enmity registered when the audience roared its mirth.

One of Lackaye's neatest was spoken in the course of a transcontinental trip in "The Bondman," a play by Hall Caine. The writer was serving on the journey from Chicago to the Pacific as herald of the venture; but the play itself was so bad that he could not conscientiously provide the newspapers en route with matter at all complimentary to the entertainment. Indeed, he went to the other extreme and wrote stories that guyed the play and its author, this form of "press work" being offset, in the herald's belief, by other stories having to do with the interesting career of Lackaye in other plays. The star overtook his 'agent" in Denver and said:

"That's great stuff you've been giving the newspapers since we left Chicago—bright, racy, and treating Hall Caine as he ought to be treated. And you've been getting lots of space because it is good. But business has been 'way off in all those towns; and I think that you would best quit kidding and panning Caine. The newspaper men enjoy it; but, as a matter of fact, some of them can't write much better than Caine himself!"

Not so costly to others was Lackaye's address to the Drama league at its first important annual meeting, in 1911, in the Chicago public library. He was at the time acting in Powers' in an unusually bad play, "The Stranger." The league, within the season, had been credited with making business for two or three other plays by means of "bulletins of indorsement." Lackaye faced the eager uplifters, was warmly greeted, and began thus:

"I'm just a bit uncertain how to feel toward your organization. If you've seen my play and bulletined it, I don't think much of your judgment; if you haven't seen it and yet have invited me here to entertain you, I think a great deal of your nerve!"

A Slam Lackaye Enjoyed.

Lackaye relishes above all the other jests and japes of which he has been the mark a telegram sent to him by Eugene Walter, the playwright, on the occasion, in 1912, when, after a battle in court, Lackaye was told by Judge Pam that he might, with perfect legal propriety, withdraw from the cast of Walter's play, "Fine Feathers," in the Cort theater, and go into "Oliver Twist," as Fagin, in the Illinois theater.

The slam in Walter's telegram were caviar to the lay reader without an explanation that the New York Herald, many years before, had abandoned its chair of drama criticism, and had substituted a sort of first night reportorial "notice" of new plays. Kindness was the dominant note of this new attitude toward the stage, so that no play was so much of a failure that its manager could not find a line or phrase of praise in the Herald's review. The writer recalls an occasion when, reading through the theater advertisements in a week day copy of the Herald, he found that fourteen plays in as many theaters used as an argument for attendance the line "'Success'—Herald," although at least eight of the fourteen plays were known to be hopeless flivvers.

No small measure of the Chicago hit of "Fine Feathers" was credited to Lackaye by the reviewers, so that the producer, the author, and everybody concerned—except his fellow actors, of course!—were eager that Judge Pam should deny him the right to go into "Oliver Twist." When, at the first performance of the latter, the evening following the decision that Lackaye was at liberty to do as he pleased in the matter, the actor, made up for Fagin, stepped from his dressing room to the wings to await his cue, a sheaf of telegrams was handed to him. The first opened was signed "Eugene Walter," and consisted of two words—"'Success'—Herald"!

Returning to Barrymore, occasionally, when returning late to his home, he had recourse to the old device of taking along a friend, the animating principle being not only that the presence of an outsider would serve to still the reproaches of Mrs. Barrymore [she was John Drew's brilliant, gifted sister, Georgia, and herself a superb match for Barry at his best in give and take] but also that the explanation of lateness made by the husband would be testified to by the friend. Going home with another man late one morning, Barrymore rang the bell. Mrs. Barrymore threw up a second floor window, looked down, surveyed the pair, and said:

"Ah! There you are, little playmate! Who's that with you—a squarer?"

"No, dear—a rounder!" was the speedy return.

Barrymore is believed to have been the originator of a jape that has, since the gorgeous Tuthill decision in the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, been printed much—that of the suggested test, following a bad performance of "Hamlet," of opening the graves of both writers to see which had turned in his coffin. Also his, by the best authority, is the famous reproof to a chance acquaintance in a Pullman smoker who, after several exhibitions of ill breeding, had rather loftily explained, when asked his calling, that he was a gentleman. "I see," replied the actor—"a gentleman, but not working at it!"

by Edwin Balmer

Herewith is presented the thirteenth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the impending danger to America. Almost out of a clear sky news is received that the United States scout cruiser, Salem, proceeding against orders in the North Atlantic, has encountered the fleet of the league of former European enemies, and has been sunk, a deliberate act of war. Bob is recalled to Newport News. A league of spies swarm the country and spies are even enlisted in the army. Jim, against the protests of Agnes, joins the army. The United States fleet, outnumbered two to one by the league ships, and crippled by lack of men, scout cruisers, destroyers, and battle cruisers, engages the enemy fleet and is defeated after a gallant fight. The Arizona, Bob's ship, sinks and Bob is rescued from his turret by a comrade after Bob had made his subordinates seek safety ahead of him. A cabinet meeting is called to meet the perilous situation in which the country is placed. An angry mob surrounds the White House. Admiral Poe, who has lost two sons by the administration's neglect of the navy, drives the secretary of the navy from the White House; General Stone, of the general staff, forces the reluctant politician president to sign an order for universal compulsory service. Jim, encamped with his regiment in Chicago, receives orders to march to the defense of New York.

(Copyright: 1916: By The Chicago Tribune.)

THE battalion was leaving the park and turning into Michigan avenue; an order was shouted down the column; the clanging of a fire bell warned every one in time how to interpret the order. The battalion sprang to the side of the road and let the fire engine and truck race by. The sky ahead and also the west was glaring red in districts where no factory chimneys should crimson the clouds, and distantly a shot and now a series of rifle shots echoed out of one of the side streets. A number of handbills were blowing down the boulevard; as they swirled under the street lamps they showed great, red letters. Jim Ashby and others of the soldiers stooped and picked up some of the papers. Jim read as he passed the next light:

"Fellow Citizens: Further resistance is useless. We are helpless! Let us make terms before the men of our army follow the men of the navy to death in useless slaughter!"

Kilbane read it at the same time and laughed. "So those are what they're plastrin' up everywhere!"

He jerked toward the windows of a shop which they were passing—a large placard was pasted there with the same red letters as the handbills; other placards appeared on other windows, upon mailboxes, pasted to the fronts of buildings and upon the doors. It was plain that the agents of the prince had had them printed before the great naval battle, ready to put up after the disaster.

Kilbane crumpled his bill and tossed it away. "'Tis too dispiriting! Corporal, dear, will ye be keepin' a close watch on Swenson there? The enemy's advertisin' is makin' him melancholic; he's like to desert!"

The Swede retorted heavily, and every one laughed readily—too readily. The clatter of an aeroplane motor sounded in the sky; every one looked up, but in vain. The aeroplane was showing no light; the roar of the motor sounded louder—it was lower now or more nearly overhead. The men who had laughed the moment before crowded a little closer together and then, at the cry from their officers, spread further apart than they had been before. They had all been on guard duty often enough to know that the regent's spies in or near the city used monoplanes on their errands of destruction. Sometimes they dropped explosives at the gas tanks; sometimes it was incendiary bombs at grain elevators; twice one had dared to bomb the camp and columns of marching men. And there was apparently no catching the planes. They appeared—or rather they were heard—only by night; by dawn they were hidden. A white, blinding spot of light flared suddenly from the roof of the Railway Exchange building, where the battalion turned from Michigan boulevard west on Jackson. The beam of a searchlight shot across the sky, trying to locate the aeroplane, but the clatter of its motor grew less and less without the machine being found. Company F marched on more solemnly. If the regent's people could not be subdued a thousand miles within the American lines, how would it be at the front? Well, they were soon to find out. They turned again, and the railroad station was before them.

A number of civilians were standing beside the station doors, staring curiously at the soldiers as they passed in. Jim received the sensation that one of the most idle looking really was exceedingly alert and that he was counting the ranks as they streamed into the station. Jim's impulse for an instant was to turn back and denounce the man; then Jim smiled at himself for "nerves." He knew—no one better—that the regent had plenty of informers in the ranks who would supply all useful advices of the number and movement of American battalions. It might be one of these men upon whose heels Jim stepped or one who was marching just behind, beside Swenson. The spies were enlisted, but they would not do anything which might disclose their identity now. Jim remembered the wording of the orders, "You will not try to communicate again until on active service."

There was astounding bustle and confusion inside the station. An expert was handling the trains. They were coming in and departing almost constantly. The first battalion of the Twentieth regiment—Companies A, B, C, and D—already had entrained, and a long line of cars with cheering men was pulling out; upon the next track another long train was taking soldiers of the Seventh Illinois regiment, and long trains, with the great express engines pulling them, were arriving. These cars were crowded with people—Pullmans, tourist cars, and day coaches filled to the platform. Jim stared with amazement as he saw the people who were leaving the cars—beautiful, pampered, fashionably dressed women and children and old men and young men of the luxurious classes. Some of them had their servants with them; others shrilled their dismay and helplessness at being unattended. A few only had had Pullman accommodations; the rest had been "herded" in day coaches, crowded together, horrified and sleepless. They were from Newport and from New York, from the Connecticut coast and the great estates of Long Island; and they had come to Chicago in flight, as refugees. They had started before the great naval battle, of course, and nothing much had happened to them; but terror of the fate of Belgium, of northern France, or East Prussia and Galicia, and of Poland under invasion was upon their faces, in their shrill complaints and laments of self-pity.

"Taxi! Taxi! I say, are there no taxis in the town? . . . At the Blackstone! . . . But, you know, it can't be full. I wired for rooms yesterday. I! . . . Filled up for a week, and the Congress, too? . . . My dear, did you hear that? The hotels are full. . . . I'll lie down in a park, then, if I can find a private place! . . . That vile creature that snored down my neck—who was he? . . . Rather sport, I call this! . . . Sport! Agh! It's as hot here as New York and . . . "

Jim had known that for several days the rich had been fleeing the east and that the chief hotels of Chicago were full and the golf clubs had become resorts for refugees and the homes of families who had relatives or friends in the east had been offering sanctuary. But he had not known that people like these had been fleeing west in day coaches which brought them to their destination at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Company F followed company E out on the platform beside the cars which had just been cleared of the refugees, the soldiers boarded the train, found seats, deposited rifles and packs, and—as the train would not be ready to start for some minutes—many of the men went out to the platforms again watching other trains arriving from the east and other companies of recruits going to the cars.

Men wearing sabers and spurs—a cavalry troop—tramped by. Jim gazed at the hats of those who were in uniform and observed that they belonged to the First Illinois cavalry. They had led their horses aboard stock cars on freight tracks far down the yards and were returning to find places in the passenger trains.

A trooper, somewhat slighter and younger than the others, strolled proudly along; and Jim, as he saw him, felt his heart stop suddenly and then race faster. The boy turned more directly toward Jim and each recognized the other.

"AND AGNES?"

"Mart!" Jim hailed. "Mart! So, here's where you are!"

The boy, at the first recognition, recoiled; then, seeing avoidance of Jim was impossible, he approached swiftly.

"My name's Wallace!" he whispered in warning. "Wallace Scott!"

He looked about cautiously and plainly was disappointed that no one seemed to have noticed that Jim had hailed him by another name.

"You've enlisted!" Jim charged him. "Well, why didn't you write home to tell them that, anyway? Of course, they've supposed you enlisted, but they're almost crazy, not hearing from you."

"I've written 'em—or mother, anyway," Mart defended himself. "I mailed it just a minute ago. I was going to write her as soon as we got ordered out of Chicago. I'm not old enough to enlist, you know, but I'm big enough, so I had to come where no one knew me. My name's Wallace Scott, please remember, and I'm 20 years old, and I haven't got any parents or any one else. That's what I've told them and I'll stick to it. I can ride pretty well, you know, so I got into the cavalry. What are you going to do about it?"

"I don't know," Jim confessed.

"Then you'll be a good fellow, won't you?" Mart begged. "Look here, if you try to make trouble for me, you can't do any more than get me dismissed from my troop; you can't get me sent home, and I'll just go and enlist somewhere else; that's all you'll put over."

"I was thinking that would be it."

"And, for heaven's sake, Jim, since I can ride and know a little about horses, anyway, leave me in a cavalry regiment. Jim, I'm with the First cavalry, rated as good a cavalry regiment as any state has, and do you know, except for a couple of the officers, they didn't own a mount? Not a ringboned nag! If it hadn't been for a fine old sport of a colonel and a friend who happened to own a riding academy who lent 'em a hundred or a hundred and fifty horses whenever he could, there wouldn't be a man that'd ever ridden with a troop—except when they borrowed a couple of hundred crowbats for two weeks' summer maneuvers."

"You're going east, Mart?"

"I suppose so; we're here to take a train; that's all I know. I say, Jim!" Mart's hand now caught Jim's sleeve. "How are they at home? You've heard, of course."

"Yes, I've heard," Jim admitted. "At your house every one's well—except for worrying about you."

"Mother? And father?"

Mart had to be assured of both separately.

"And Agnes?"

"Yes; she's all right, too."

"What's the matter, Jim?"

"Nothing."

"Say, what're you doing here, hey? I knew you'd enlisted, too, of course; you didn't stay back. But—well, Agnes hasn't come to yet? Is that it? She's still in a trance?"

"She's broken our engagement, if that's what you're getting at," Jim informed.

"Because you're going to fight! The little idiot. What do you care for?" Mart commented, younger brotherlike. "Then, you haven't been hearing from her? You've been hearing only from your house?"

"No, I've heard from Agnes, too."

"I meant to ask, Jim; anything about Bob Wendell?"

"No, nothing yet."

Connor shouted Jim's name; the engine at the front of the train blew a warning blast. Jim and Mart clasped hands.

"Good luck, Mart!"

"Good luck, Jim!"

Mart ran down the platform for another train; Jim turned to his car and found his seat beside Kilbane. The Irish boy displayed a bit of delicate, belaced and embroidered linen.

"I discovered it thrust bechune the cushions so," he demonstrated. "She was a fine and fair one who dozed here on the westward thrip!"

Jim nodded and Kilbane folded the little lace handkerchief carefully and laid it in his breast pocket. Question of his sentimentality seemed to assail him, however, soon after the train started and he lay back in the day coach seat and tried to sleep. He took out the handkerchief and examined it more critically.

"I was fearing, could this have been the property of any of thim—thim males which was disembarkin' before we got aboard?"

"I shouldn't suppose so," Jim reassured. "It's too small, I should say."

"An' they don't powdher much yet, do they?" the Irishman appealed. "There's a bit of sweet scent in the plush here agin me cheek!"

He replaced the lace token in his pocket and soon was sleeping. Just behind, Swenson and his seat mate slumbered stertorously. Jim lay back and tried to sleep also, but whether because of memories stirred by his meeting Mart, or by the subtle persistence of the faint, feminine perfume which the Irish boy had noticed, Jim remained disturbed, ill at ease, unable to repose. Agnes—she was very sweet and soft to hold, her lips against his and her cheek against his cheek; they were maddening memories! Even if he could return to her now, or summon her to him, she would not want him close to her again. She wrote to him only because, having been betrothed to him, she felt in some way "responsible" for him; she considered he had cast her off, not that she had abandoned him. In going to war he had betrayed her and what they had believed—or what he had pretended to believe with her; he was adding himself, against her will, to the mad millions of the war, bent on destroying civilization and her happiness.

"That Was a Girl When Jim Last Saw Her."

The fleet, according to her, ought to have refused to fight, the army now should be making no move against invasion, and somehow the "moral force" of the people would prevent the regent from conquering or ruining a nation which did not resist. Would it have prevented the regent's spies from blowing up the power plants and the gas tanks and from dynamiting the railroad bridges as they had been planning to do? No, nothing but armed force, soldiers stationed day and night had saved those. Was it wrong to have "resisted" in that manner to save lives and property? No; Jim guessed that even Agnes would not argue that. Well, if it was right to resist the operations of the spies, was it wrong to move to oppose the operations of his battalions? Wasn't it true that nonresistance wasn't possible when you came up against facts? Jim had written that to Agnes; she had ignored it in her answer. She was still in a trance; Mart was right. Agnes was a little idiot, why should Jim care? But—she was an exasperating little idiot and he did care. Partly, perhaps, her attitude hurt his pride. He was going forth to fight, to run any risk, more than probably to die in defense of his country. That was too big an ideal for him fully to feel; he was offering himself to endure extreme danger and privation to help protect definite persons, among whom, first, was Agnes. He wanted to feel that he was going to the front for her; other girls and women were making their men feel that. Even Swenson, the ex-janitor, now snoring in the seat behind, had a girl who came to the camp once proudly and asked for "Private Swenson," and for whom Swenson begged buttons from the corporal's uniform. Kilbane had his girl, who felt he was fighting for her; indeed, the Irishman had several. Jim wanted one—just one. He wanted her to demand and expect brave things of him, courage and steadfastness; he wanted her to feel glory if he were wounded, to be exalted if he—her lover—should fall in battle. But Agnes' attitude cheated him of that; she wrote to him pityingly as if he were a child casting himself obstinately, stubbornly, into danger for no good; if he were killed, she would consider it only the recompense of criminal folly.

Jim sat up straighter and looked about. Many others also were unable to sleep. A boy across from him was opening an envelope, which had been opened before, and was taking out a letter to reread; it was a girl's handwriting; Jim could see that. He had Agnes' last letter in his pocket, but he had no impulse at all to reread it.

A few men were passing up and down the aisles. There was one boy with a remarkably handsome and sensitive face, with thick black hair cut short, and with excellent eyes. He wore the loose blouse and knickerbockers and puttees of an aviator's costume. As he went by Jim watched him curiously. He did not belong to the battalion, but Jim had heard that volunteer aviators would join the regiment when it took to the field. Evidently this was one of the amateur aviators who had volunteered for such service. The boy went forward through the train and then returned. Jim got a better look at his face now, and he sat up straighter, suddenly. The boy, glancing at Jim, also seemed to start, but if he did, he immediately recovered himself and went on. Jim jumped up and stood staring down the aisle. He knew that boy; he was sure of it. But where had he seen him before and under what circumstances? Jim's pulses were pounding. He certainly knew that face, and, though he could not place it yet, the semi-recognition stirred him with hot alarm. Surely he had seen that boy before! Ah, now he knew! He had seen him, but not as a boy. That was a girl when Jim last saw her—a girl in an evening gown and with her heavy hair, uncut, dressed in the latest fashion; she was the girl who laughed at him as he pointed his revolver to frighten her and who dared him to shoot her as she advanced upon him when he backed toward the window in the house of the spies!

MARION MARLATT.

She reached the end of the car, and as she opened the door she glanced back casually and saw him standing and staring at her; she hesitated a moment as though to make sure she was the object of his attention, then she went through the door and let it close behind her. Jim hurried down the aisle and dashed after her into the vestibule between the coaches; he crossed the platforms to the door of the next coach to the rear before he saw that the girl had not gone further; she was standing quietly at the side of the platform of the rear car with her back to the door, which, when the trap over the steps was lifted, opened to the side of the train. There was the customary light in the vestibule which showed her expression clearly.

"Good evening!" she nodded pleasantly to him as he turned toward her. No one seeing her now could have mistaken her for a moment for a boy. To play the part of a man she had not merely put on a man's suit, but had assumed a masculine manner with a cleverness which Jim had not appreciated until now. She employed it no longer.

"Good evening!" he returned, amazed.

She pulled off the heavy leather gloves she had been wearing and exposed her slender white hands and moved her slim fingers in relief at getting them out of their clumsy disguise.

"This is awfully hot," she said, unbuttoning her blouse at the throat and baring her neck. "If any one comes out, keep between him and me, won't you? O, this is very much better!"

So far from suggesting difficulty to herself from his recognition of her she appeared to welcome his finding her as an opportunity for relaxing temporarily from playing her part. Her audacity taunted and tantalized him delightfully.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded with attempted sternness.

"You think it inconceivable that I have turned patriot?"

"Turned patriot?"

"Or, rather," she corrected, "that I may have been patriot all the time?"

"What do you mean?"

She leaned back against the car door and loosened her jacket lower. Plainly she had to fear no immediate denunciation. As she bared her white throat further Jim remembered the wound she had received in her arm when the window before which they were struggling was shattered.

"That cut?" he inquired. "Is it well?"

"Quite," she smiled. "It was only sufficient to make sure that I went to the hospital—not to the smelly jail like the others. Besides being more comfortable, the hospital is not watched at all carefully."

"So you escaped from the hospital?"

"O, quite four days ago." She reached into a pocket and drew forth a box of cigarettes, opened it and offered it to him.

"You are going to smoke?" he asked her.

"No; but I wish you to, if you want."

"You were smoking when—the other evening?"

"Yes; there were reasons then, but—I confess—I do not like it. So, will not you for me? I may cool myself still and a puff of smoke will give me time to cover if any one comes."

He selected a cigarette and held it. She offered him a lighter. "What is it? O, you fear poison?" She snatched the cigarette from his fingers, put it between her lips, lighted it, and puffed a moment, then offered it to him. He took it, coloring, and put it between his lips.

"You do not prefer another?" she asked.

"What are you doing here?" he repeated.

"Have I less right to require that of you?"

"Of me?"

"Yes; you were in that house at the same time as I. Has it never occurred to you since that we might have been about the same business?"

So that was the plan of her audacity.

"Hardly, I should say," he returned coolly.

"Besides, seeing me there, you discovered who I was, perhaps?"

"I certainly discovered who you were!"

"I am Marion Marlatt, of course," she admitted almost casually. "S. D. Marlatt, who is now in jail, is my uncle; some of the others are my cousins; in some ways, of course, I was and am with them, but it should not be impossible to imagine, I should think, that in other ways I am not."

"In what ways, if I may ask?"

"Not in that tone!" she forbade, facing him with eyes suddenly aflame and with her little hands clenched. "I am as good an American as you, I think—and running at least as much risk to do my bit."

The flare up surprised her almost as much as it amazed him—amazed and allured him. If she had been enticing, bewitching before when she confronted him with her cool cleverness, her daring, her reckless audacity, now—suddenly flushed, heated with passion—she had let herself become enamoring. His impulse, irresistible for a second it seemed, was to draw nearer her and grasp her; Jim forced himself, with a physical effort, to draw away instead.

"Your bit?" he repeated.

"Why not?"

"For America?"

"Of course!"

"But——"

"Smoke, please," she requested quickly, holding her jacket close about her throat again. Some one passed through the vestibule without halting; the car doors closed and Jim and Marion Marlatt were alone again.

"If you want to know why I was in that house that night," she burst out, "it is very simple. I lived there; it was my home. Put yourself in my place for a few moments, please, Mr. James Ashby, and tell me what you would have done!"

Jim felt the blood tingling in him at her repeating his name. So she had inquired of him! Then he realised that inquiry on her part implied no personal concern; as one of the spies threatened by him, Marion Marlatt naturally would have attempted to learn how he came upon them.

"When I found out, during the war in Europe, that my uncles and cousins were planning and preparing for the regent to make war here, what good would I have done by denouncing them?" she demanded. "I had no good proof against them, and, besides, lots of people already were saying that the regent had his secret agents here, but the authorities never paid any attention. Pretty soon I got evidence; I admit that, but it wasn't any better evidence than was being printed and published in some of the newspapers every day; and no one was paying any attention to things like that. So I knew I'd simply give myself away if I said anything and gain nothing. My uncles—Mr. Marlatt and Mr. Gervis——"

"The one in whose house you were that night?"

"Yes; where I was living since my mother died; he was her brother; well, my uncles found out that I knew about them and they thought I was with them. They knew I was born here, of course, and was brought up here and went to schools here and had all my friends here; but they were sure I must be like themselves and my cousins; they thought nothing could count compared to the old country. But it wasn't so with me, but I didn't let them know it. They told me a great deal and I found out more and more. So I knew, a long time ago, that this war was coming; but as thousands of other people were saying it and no one was doing anything, the only thing I could see to do was to stay where I was, and—well, see to it, if I could, that some of my uncles' schemes wouldn't work out the way they wanted."

"In other words," Jim challenged her more coolly—he had drawn further away from her and had quite recovered himself—"you want me to believe that you, instead of being in that house as a spy of the regent, were there for the American cause!"

"No," she denied as coolly, "I merely told that to you, as it might prove possibly interesting to you. I don't care a cartridge whether you believe it or not!"

"A cartridge?" he repeated.

The TEENIE WEENIE

DUNCE GETS A MEDAL.

BY Wm. DONAHEY

SUNDAY was to be visitors' day in the camp, and all the Teenie Weenies, from Grandpa down to the Twins, were expected. All the soldiers were greatly excited over the visit, for it had been several days since they had seen their loved ones. The camp was cleaned up in fine order and the little soldiers brushed their uniforms and polished their buttons until they shone like gold, for they were all anxious to appear their very best before the visitors.

As the Teenie Weenie home lay some distance from the camp, a mouse was sent to bring Grandpa, for, having the rheumatism, he was unable to make the long walk.

The little ladies brought dainty dishes they had cooked for the soldiers, and soon the little people were seated about in shady places, enjoying the food and chatting merrily.

Mrs. Lover wheeled the Twins in their new go-cart, to the great joy of Mr. Lover, who exhibited them proudly around the camp.

The Cook made a delicious soup out of an onion leaf and a small piece of chicken liver, and, with plenty of boiled rice and a baked prune stuffed with cinnamon and brown sugar, the army and their guests sat down to dinner.

As a special favor to the women and children the General ordered the entire army out to march in review before the visitors. After the grand parade the army was drawn up in line beneath a bush, and, dismounting, the General stepped out before the line and said: "Men, I have something of great importance to say. Dunce, will you please step forward?"

"Why—I—I—I haven't done anything," stuttered the astonished Dunce.

"Step forward, please," repeated the General, and when the trembling Dunce stood before him he continued: "Men, it is with the greatest pleasure that I can stand before you today and praise the great bravery of our fellow in arms, the Dunce. It was this noble fellow's bravery that saved the Teenie Weenie army from disgrace. If it had not been for his brave stand against a bumble bee, when the rest of the army had fled in fright, there would have been such a blot against our army that nothing could erase it from the pages of our glorious Teenie Weenie history. Single handed this brave man killed the enemy that had put to rout our soldiers, and I am sure that his name will mingle with those of our noblest heroes on the pages of history.

"As befitting his noble conduct I hereby make him a Corporal in the Teenie Weenie army, and the greatest reward within my power I now bestow upon him, the Order of the Tiny Star. 'Big deeds for little men' is the motto of this order, and I am sure you have proved yourself worthy of this medal."

The General pinned the tiny medal to the Dunce's breast and turning to the army he called for three rousing cheers, and they were given with a will.

"Now, sir," said the General, "if there is anything you would like as a reward for your great deed name it, and if it is within our power to grant it, it shall be done."

"I-I-I-I'd like," stammered the Dunce, "to-to-to have a-a-a whole strawberry and a-a-a thimbleful of sugar."

NEWEST SLEEVES ARE ALL ELABORATE

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

By Jean Setvwright.

Drawings by E. C. Kelly.

[Copyright: 1916: By The Chicago Tribune and the New York Globe.]

SIPPING tea, discussing the newest plays, lamenting the dreary continuance of war, are among the diversions of visitors on summer afternoons. This season taffeta seems to be the choice of many of the best gowned women and one can readily understand its popularity, for it is shown in most beautiful colors and wonderful iridescent weaves.

One of the loveliest is a soft pale gray, and this is the color chosen for the gown illustrated at the extreme left of the picture. As if to enhance its delicate beauty, it is combined with gray taffeta changing to mauve, which is used for the upper portion of the skirt and the close fitting bodice. This lovely silk is prettily arranged about the figure in semblance of a bustle, while a decorative touch is achieved in the plaited frill that defines the graceful draping of the silk.

Below this picturesque drapery the skirt falls in many an interesting fold so that the silver bead embroidered motifs shimmer prettily as the wearer of this gown steps back and forth. The fichu and sleeves—in which a skillful disposition of fullness is revealed—are developed in fine gray tulle.

The hat maintains the color scheme, for it is fashioned from a gray horsehair. A dash of color, however, is found in the garland of pink and silver flowers that is laid flat on the chapeau and in the mauve ribbon jauntily bowed at the side.

The model in the center of the group reveals several delightful style features. The long pointed basque pays scant courtesy to any waistline, while the army is complimented in the cartridge plaits that are cleverly held in place by a revolutionary cockade. Generous fullness marks the skirt, whose hem is defined by a narrow band of the biscuit colored taffeta from which the frock is fashioned. Down the front of the bodice appears a row of plain bone buttons that emphasize the prim pretentiousness of the dress.

The sleeves indicate milady's fancy for rather elaborate effects. Made in two parts, the upper section is in the form of a billowy puff with a prettily scalloped frill, while the lower part—similarly finished—is fitted closely to the forearm. These are made of crème tulle, whose exceeding sheerness contrasts daintily with the taffeta. The wealth of Pluto is suggested by the hat of gilded Milan faced with bronze faille and heightened by two upstanding bronze tips.

Gay as the pink tipped apple blossoms is the frock pictured at the extreme right of the illustration. Originated in a lovely pink taffeta, it is charmingly decorated with cross stitch embroidery in rose and gray. The sleeves are made of pink organdie, an innovation that is much lifted, for this sheer material is decidedly cooler than silk for summer wear. The hat, flaring merrily from the rim, is developed in old rose with trimming of the same.

Dainty organdie and lawns are greatly favored for simple summer frocks. While various shades are used, undoubtedly the most popular are pink, in a delicate flesh shade, and pale blue, while the all white gown always has its votaries. A charming model in a salmon pink organdie is made with a quaint childlike bodice rounded at the neck. The sleeves are fashioned with tiny puffs, caught in every two or three inches with a garland of blue forget-me-nots, while the bouffant skirt is inset with oddly shaped embroidered motifs and a narrow rucking at the hem.

Interesting blouses are now appearing and sleeves both long and short are shown. Georgette crepe is found in most beautiful colors, and this sheer fabric becomes more popular with each returning season. Both silk and bead embroidery are used with good effect on the dressier models, while narrow picot edged ribbons prove valued trimmings.

One picturesque blouse shows a rather unusual treatment of the sleeve, for the armholes are outlined by a plaited frill of old rose ribbon that contrasts charmingly with the pale blue crepe from which the waist is fashioned. Three bands of ribbon, unplaited, but adorned by small tailored bows, are set about the cuff, which is finished with a rippling frill, so that one realizes that such trimming is really effective.

With many of the newest street frocks handsome furs are worn. Blue fox and cross fox make admirable scarfs, while delightful capes and deep collars are developed from tailless ermine combined with black chiffon or moleskin.

Ostrich feather boas are also affected by the fashionable woman, and because of their extreme lightness are sometimes chosen in preference to furs.

The mandates of the Fashion Art league will be defied by the fair sea bathers at the various fashionable beaches this summer. When that serious league solemnly proclaimed sleeves for feminine bathing suits it went too far for the pretty maids that haunt the beaches during the warm months. "Knees may show, but elbows are taboo," declared the Fashion Art league. "The long sleeve gives the bather a coquettish appearance."

So this open rebellion has been declared all over the country. "If we must wear long sleeves in the surf to be coquettish, we will sacrifice coquetry for comfort," declared the mermaids in chorus, and the sleeveless sea suits for spring give no indication that the Fashion Art league is on earth or ever had issued a decree.

Early arrivals indicate that striking colors and daring styles will predominate. The lead in fashions on the beaches already shows that the canoe girl, the hiking enthusiast, the angling maid, and all other outdoor devotees are going in for ease rather than style, but withal have not sacrificed the paramount consideration of the eternal feminine. Outing costumes will be "nifty," say the arbiters, and they usually know. A riot of colors prevails for the most part.

Gown of pale gray taffeta made with semblance of bustle in the back, below which is a plaited frill outlining the drapery of the silk.

Gown of biscuit colored taffeta with long pointed basque waist and elaborately bepuffed and befrilled sleeves of tulle.

Delightful frock of pink taffeta gaily embroidered in rose and gray. The puffed sleeves are fashioned of organdie, an innovation to be popular this summer.

MEN AND WOMEN

THE one best argument against woman and her holding public office might be her unfitness as a juror in a criminal case. The hysterical, inexplicable wave of sympathy which overcomes the sex toward the accused, especially in a murder case, might bode ill for the safety of the community.

Woman might be a "regular juror" if the case involved only burglary, or fraud, or arson, or some misdeed not inspired by the brutal elements.

Cave Woman Hysteria.

But if the deed were bloody and brutal her female impulse would not only be to let him off "scot free" but to shower the criminal with real roses and forget-menots as he left the courtroom.

Who can explain this phenomenon of womankind?

Perhaps it's the elemental, cave woman worship of brute strength.

Perhaps, on the contrary, it is the elemental mother love which rushes to the side of a man son no matter how debased or criminal his deed.

And, again, perhaps it's the last word in folly trying to analyze the why of it at all since she is a woman.

The anti-cabaret ordinance recommended for passage recently and excluding the operatic, vaudeville, and dancing features from the better class cafés again raises the question in the minds of thinking people as to whether or no this is the way to eliminate vice and the tendency thereto.

Cabareting or Buggy Riding?

Any café that caters to the musical and terpsichorean demands of its patrons makes itself a target for reform shafts.

Is the dance and music providing café the "one and only" menace to the morals of young folk? Is the city deserving of the ignominy brightly lighted cafés shed over it? Proportionately, is there more vice in the city than in the small town or country which provides little outlet for the excess energy of youth?

Which would you rather have your daughter do—go cabareting in the city or go buggy riding along the unfrequented country roads unchaperoned?

It must be said for the better class city cabarets they provide the chaperonage of older people and many respectable people in their patrons. All frequenters are not rounders and destroyers by a large percentage. Many of them are transients and nice family folk out to see the town. Public opinion would prevent the young folk who patronize these cabarets from acting upon foolish impulses. Even taking into consideration the drink element, the publicity of it all has a restraining influence. The unchaperoned country buggy containing the same brands of human impulse and human frailties has not the protection of an onlooking public.

Getting down to rock bottom, isn't the trouble with the human being and not with the café? Doesn't the solution of vice destruction lie in the hands of parents and their early implanting in the hearts and minds of the young the value of abstinence, purity, and chastity?

The purpose of a jury is to determine the issue without prejudice on the one hand or sympathy on the other and without regard for the consequences of its verdict. Conclusions must be based solely upon the sworn evidence in the case.

Selecting a Jury.

Trying to secure a jury of twelve men of capacity and intelligence, and at the same time without convictions, prejudices, or too sympathetic tendencies, has proven in the Orpet case at least to be a most difficult problem.

A jury offers a fertile field for the study of human nature. There is the unconscious bias of each member of the human family due to race, religion, education, and character. That is why jurors are examined with an elaborate care and minuteness of investigation that sometimes seems ridiculous.

Certain maxims having almost the force of legal doctrines have grown up about the selection of a jury. A defendant's counsel will invariably challenge an Irishman if his client be a Negro.

Jurymen with wives and children are generally supposed to be more susceptible to arguments directed to their sympathies.

Writers, editors, and publishers are not viewed favorably as jurors by the defense. They are "too intelligent"—that is, too prone to theoretic arguments as distinguished from a "broad view." Artists are distrusted by prosecutors as romantic and imaginative. Liquor dealers are believed to be prone to take a lenient view of the shortcomings of humanity in general, while persons of brisk, incisive manners naturally suggest heartlessness to the cowering defendant.

An Irishman is not looked upon favorably as a juror in a criminal case because his natural sympathy is usually with the defense. On the other hand and for the same sympathetic reasons the Irishman is a good juror for the plaintiff in personal injury cases.

In criminal cases Germans, Swedes, and Americans are considered the best jurors. The independent American is singularly adapted to this form of investigation. The native American has an innate capacity to perceive the truth and get at the bottom of things.

Lawyers on each side may challenge jurors peremptorily without assigning any cause whatever. The number of challenges varies with the grade of the offense, from three in a misdemeanor case to twenty in murder cases. The color of the juror's hair, his eyes, or tie, his pompadour, his speech, or just because he doesn't suit the lawyer's fancy is reason enough for his challenge. Almost every lawyer and every prosecutor believes himself to be a past master in the study of character from external evidence, and upon the most trivial pretext will challenge a talesman.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

How I added 12 pounds in two weeks to Helene Barnett's Weight

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THIN ladies, attention! It's your turn now! You won't have to answer to the "Skinnay, Yoo-hoo!" call any more! Just to prove it is possible to take on weight as well as to reduce, I took a model, Miss Helene Barnett, and experimented with her with a view to proving to my correspondents that with the right sort of living, food, and sleep, pounds may be added to your weight. The experiment has been successful, as you may see by the chart recording my model's measurements given on this page.

The experiment, I will admit, was a bit discouraging in the beginning. Four weeks, all told, I have worked with Miss Barnett. The first week resulted in a gain of only one-half pound. Then, during the early half of the second week, Miss Barnett gained three more pounds, her weight registered 112½ pounds on Wednesday evening of the second week's trial. But then a discouraging few days set in for both of us. Miss Barnett became ill—not seriously at all—and if she didn't up and lose the whole precious three and one-half pounds by the end of the week. At this I began to feel alarmed that there was some serious digestive trouble the matter with my model.

However, we kept at it, increasing the amount of oxygen absorbed daily and the hours of sleep, reducing the quantities of the foods that were hardest for her to partake of, and supplying others in their place, and we were rewarded by a gain of a whole pound the first day of the third week.

Remember, at the beginning of the third week Miss Barnett started out with exactly the same weight, 109 pounds, as she carried the first day we began experimenting, having in the interim gained three and one-half pounds and lost them. During the next two weeks she not only added twelve pounds but increased her neck measurements three-quarters of an inch, her bust measurement two inches, her waist two inches, and her hips two and one-half inches.

Miss Barnett is 26 years old and 5 feet 6 inches in height. Her weight should be 135 pounds, according to standard for her age and height. She is determined to work until she has got herself up to standard weight, and if she keeps on as she has been doing the last two weeks I am sure it will not be long before she has achieved the desired weight.

Measurements of Miss Helene Barnett Before and After Gaining Her Twelve Pounds.

	Before.	After.
Weight	109 lbs.	121 lbs.
Neck	11½ in.	12¼ in.
Chest	30½ in.	32 in.
Bust	31½ in.	33½ in.
Waist	20 in.	22 in.
Hips	32 in.	34½ in.
Upper arm	9 in.	9½ in.
Forearm	8½ in.	9 in.
Wrist	5½ in.	5¾ in.
Thigh	19 in.	20½ in.
Calf	13½ in.	14½ in.
Ankle	8 in.	8½ in.

Height, 5 ft. 6 in.

With the additional twelve pounds Miss Barnett says she has never felt so well in her life. Now, twelve pounds doesn't seem to be a tremendously impressive increase in weight. But the difference in Miss Barnett's appearance before and after acquiring the precious flesh is impressive. Her face has "plumped" up surprisingly. This is due not only to the following of the diet, rest, and exercise program which I recommended and which I shall give later in this article, but to the daily face massage of not less than fifteen minutes.

In massaging her face my model used a skin food, the formula for which follows: One ounce of lanolin, two ounces of sweet almond oil, one-half ounce of white wax, one-half ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of cocoanut oil. Melt these together in a double boiler. Then take off the fire and beat until cold, adding little by little two ounces of orange flower water to which five drops of tincture of benzoin have been added. You must beat the ingredients constantly until cold.

Also she massaged her bust and the hollows at the base of her neck with cocoa butter twice a day. The result was a distinctly noticeable improvement in the appearance of her neck and a perceptible increase in the development of her bust.

Now there are three distinct reasons for thinness. Undernutrition is the most common cause. There are two causes of undernutrition. One is due not to eating too little food but to not eating fattening foods (carbohydrates and fats), and the other is due to ailments of the digestive organs. The third cause of excessive leanness is found among the class of people who eat sufficiently and well but who are excessively active.

The first thing, therefore, for you to do before you begin to follow the instruction which I shall lay down for you here, and which resulted in a gain of twelve pounds for Miss Barnett, is to make sure that your digestive apparatus is not diseased in any way. If your physician pronounces any physical ailment, set about immediately to follow his advice and cure yourself before the trouble becomes chronic. The program I outlined for my model follows:

At 8 a. m. she arose; dressed in loose bath robe; practiced before open window deep breathing, beginning with twenty deep breaths and gradually increasing daily. This she followed by a cold dash to throat and chest, followed by a fairly vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel. Then came breakfast, consisting of one-half grapefruit, dish of oatmeal with cream, two soft boiled eggs, three slices of buttered toast, and two glasses of milk.

After breakfast Miss Barnett did some light household tasks, such as sweeping and dusting and tidying up. Then she went back to bed for an hour. She drank a glass of water before going to bed and on arising at the end of the hour she took another glass of water.

At 11:30 she proceeded with her cocoa butter massage, and at 12:15 she ate lunch, which consisted of a bowl of rich soup of some kind, bread spread thick with butter, a cup of hot chocolate, and four large figs.

After luncheon Miss Barnett again lay down for an hour and one-half. Then she arose and took another glass of water; then went for a walk, breathing deeply always as she walked. She began with two miles the first week, varying perhaps to two and one-half and three miles. I forgot to say that before starting for the walk she ate some chocolate candy or rich bonbons (four or five pieces). Before she returned from her walk she stopped somewhere along the route and ate a dish of ice cream or drank a soda.

For dinner Miss Barnett ate cream of corn, cream of celery, or any kind of soup made with cream; potatoes, mashed, baked, or served with cream dressing; generous portion of pork, ham, bacon, or rich beef; lettuce with oil dressing; ripe olives; sixteen half pecans; ice cream and cake or rich custard or rice pudding; large glass of milk.

After dinner I allowed her two hours for recreation, insisting on her retiring at 10:30, however.

Next week I shall continue with my experiment with Miss Barnett. I shall tell how difficult it was for her to accustom herself to some of the foods which were to benefit her. I shall give the instructions for massage of face and bust and neck, also.

Miss Donnelly's Answers.

ELIZA: LIQUID POWDER IS INJURIOUS to the skin. Nearly all liquid powders contain lead or zinc, which is most injurious. This is an effective bleach and it is harmless: Lactic acid, one fluid ounce; glycerine, two fluid ounces; tincture of benzoin, two fluid drams, and water enough to make sixteen ounces. If the skin shows slight irritation, discontinue for a day or two and use cold cream. I shall be glad to send you my lotion for warts if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

FIFTY-FOUR: YOU ARE NOT TOO old to remedy your defects. Any exercise that involves the muscles of the arms and shoulders will develop them. Nothing is better for developing the chest and filling out the hollows of the neck than deep breathing. Practice it as much as you possibly can. Massage your neck with a good skin food night and morning. This is nourishing and will feed the skin. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for deep breathing and keeping the neck young and beautiful if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS VANITY: THIS LEG RAISING exercise will reduce the ankles. Mrs. Lane, my model, who reduced thirty-six pounds in six weeks, found it most effective: Hold knee stiff and raise leg as high as you can, then let it fall to the floor as you count eight slowly. Begin with five times. Alternate with the other leg. Increase the number of times daily up to fifty and more if you can do it without strain. Wear high buttoned or laced shoes when taking your walks and doing your housework.

POLICEMAN: DEFICIENT CIRCULATION and dandruff will cause baldness. The scalp becomes tightened and prevents a proper flow of blood to the roots of the hair. The scalp should be thick, and pliable and move freely over the bones of the skull. I am printing my formula for dandruff for you and shall be glad to send you instructions for scalp massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope: Resorcin, two drams; grain alcohol, three drams; glycerine, one-half ounce, and of rose water a sufficient quantity to make four ounces. Resorcin sometimes undergoes a change of color that gives to light gray or white hair a dingy or yellowish cast. This may be obviated by the addition of ten grains of salicylic acid to an ounce of the solution. Apply this tonic to the scalp every night before you massage it.

F. D.: THE SQUATTING EXERCISE helps to overcome constipation. It is best to practice the exercise in the morning and evening, when clad in a loose garment. Stand erect, with the feet nearly together and hands resting on your hips. Rise upon the toes, then sink the body to the floor in a squatting posture, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the entire body is supported by the toes. You must keep your trunk perfectly erect throughout the movement. Return to original position and repeat twelve times to begin with, gradually increasing to twenty or thirty times. I shall be glad to send you my formula for excessive perspiration if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

L. R. L.: IRREGULARITIES OF food, drink, or sleep may cause a feverish breath, or it may be caused from catarrh, decayed teeth, or a clogging of the bowels. If it is caused from catarrh or decayed teeth, advice of a physician or dentist should be sought. Otherwise a good cathartic would possibly remedy the condition. Mild cases of perspiration may be benefited by bathing the affected part with a solution of hot water to which common baking soda has been added. Another good wash is one or two drams of salicylic acid dissolved in a pint of alcohol. Excessive perspiration is usually the result of a run down system. The first remedy, of course, is to build up the general health.

Housekeeping Mistakes.

Did you make absurd mistakes when you first started housekeeping? Of course you did. Every bride has. So tell us about it. And if you are a man—well, surely you can remember what your wife did. The funnier the experiences the better. For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Keep your story on one side of the paper and within 300 words and address it to Housekeeping Experience Editor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts returned.

Her Bread a Granite Brick.

She was such a dear little thing I just married her without knowing anything about her culinary abilities or any of her special gifts whatever. She did pretty well for a bride, except for a few things, as, for instance, the first time I threw myself quite solidly on the cozy divan of our bungalow den the impact of my body against the wall knocked down a framed picture, not hung but merely balanced on a railing above. I had a good sized lump on my head for a week afterwards.

Then my "honey bunch" tried to tint the walls of a room old rose with clothes dye. As a result, I had to pay a painter to put sizing on and cover it with regular wall paint.

But her first loaf of bread is what I really meant to write about. It came out of the oven a beautiful shade of brown. With my mouth watering, I watched her apply the bread knife. The first thing I knew the knife blade was broken, while the bread had not a mark to show. When I tackled it with a hammer she was reduced to tears. Let it suffice to say that loaf of bread was never eaten. It was just a brick of granite. I took it to the office and had the stenographer cover it with burlap.

For the last five years we have been using it as a doorstop, a paper weight; in fact, anything that needs holding down with something heavy. BOB.

Swelling, Ever Swelling.

A friend of mine has told me of an experience of hers that happened when she was a bride. Her husband was fond of rice, and she decided to cook some for his dinner one day. She went to the grocer's, bought a quarter's worth of rice, and put it on in a gallon kettle to cook. After cooking a little while it began to swell, and continued to swell, and she kept filling vessels with it, till she had her stove covered with vessels full of rice. Of course, most of it she threw out. MRS. O. F.

Here's a Secret, Wives.

Cooking had never been my forte, consequently when my husband of two months announced that he had invited the president of the firm and his wife for dinner the following Sunday, I was seized with consternation. However, I determined to put forth my best efforts and surprise my husband with a "course" dinner.

The consommé was a success but, alas, on attempting to remove the halibut from the pan, after frying, it crumbled and broke into small pieces. I had failed to squeeze the water out and dry before putting in pan (it having lain in chopped ice at the market).

In desperation, I hit on an idea. I must have a second course, and there was nothing available but the halibut. I would create a new dish and serve the halibut on buttered toast as minced halibut.

It was the hit of the dinner and "minced halibut" was a favorite dish in our menage after that. F. P. F.

The Fatal Soup.

I was preparing dinner for one of my first guests and—housekeeping mistake No. 1—made too little tomato soup. At the last minute I filled my own bowl with cold milk, and colored it with catsup. I put the first course on the table and we seated ourselves. To my horror I discovered housekeeping mistake No. 2. I was eating perfectly good tomato soup and the curious imitation was set before my guest. I. B.

Buried Her Dead Secret.

I had never attempted to make bread. I had watched my mother baking many times and, though I had never been taught, I was sure it would be easy, so decided to surprise John with some good home made bread.

One morning after John went to work I started to mix my bread. I mixed it like I thought my mother had done; let it rise and baked it, but when it was taken out of the oven it was just a mess of sticky dough.

Not wanting John to know of my failure I buried the dough in the yard.

When John came in the house that evening he said, "Mary, what in the world are those chickens pulling about?" I gave a look and in my excitement shouted, "O gee! that's my bread!"

The chickens had dug the dough up and seemed unable to pull it apart, but were fighting and dragging it over the yard.

Well, I sat down and cried. E. M.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Ambitious.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

BORN the week beginning May 28, you are in the heart of the Gemini period, which always is two sided in its influence. You like to change your abode, your work, and even your friends, always thinking that beyond the next hill you will be happier. Such is your inheritance. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the sign, Gemini, is the Greek myth of the twins, Castor and Pollux, and so all of its people have a double nature which is constantly contradicting itself. You are apt to talk beautifully and practice badly, but with proper training you can make both natures, as it were, pull together for splendid results.

So it is only natural that you are extreme in your likes and dislikes and change from friend to foe rather easily. It doesn't take much of an effort to turn you aside from what you are doing, though you are really wishing most sincerely to reach the top of the ladder. But you are too self-satisfied as a rule, too open to flattery, traits which you can overcome if you will but admit to yourself that you have these faults.

You have a great regard for wealth and "blue blood." Although domestic in your tastes, you are exceedingly fond of society and the kind of work where you can be conspicuous. Almost always at that bubbling over stage in spirits, you make a pleasant companion and so are in constant demand at society functions. You can be led by commendation, but criticism and blame seem to shatter you if you let them. Try to profit by this sort of advice; it's good for you.

You are musical and poetic to a marked degree; in fact, your literary ability is considerably above the average. At times you are fairly brilliant, but you are not inclined to push these talents, so the world in general does not often know of your hidden worth. If ever you do become a public speaker your instability of opinion tends to lose for you the confidence your brilliant speech has gained. You change your mental platform, so to speak, so often, so people come to distrust you. If you could go on a lecture tour, where you would be constantly moving on, you would be a great success, for in that length of time your listeners would not discover your weak point.

Unusual mechanical ability is another of your inheritances. You seem to have more serviceable and skillful hands than your neighbors and are fond of making ingenious labor saving devices.

You should try to cultivate repose of manner and to surround yourself with wholesome, restful people. Too much excitement is bad for you and is apt to result in a nervous breakdown. So it is easy to see why a Gemini baby should be kept happy and satisfied, for if this natural restlessness is not increased in his childhood he will be so much the better able to cope with his changeable tendencies in after life.

You are loving in instinct and can adapt yourself to home circumstances readily. In fact, you will sacrifice your convenience and comfort for the sake of those you love, if necessary. When your better side has been developed there can be found no more affectionate, unselfish, and self-sacrificing folk in the whole twelve signs.

Explanations and arguments are useless with you, but you can be led gently without in the least suspecting what is being done. The fact that you change your opinions with so little warning makes people want explanations which you cannot give, for you decide more by inner intuitive action than by any line of reasoning.

As has been said, some of your talents lie along literary lines, so you will succeed as a reporter, writer, or publisher; also as a musician, artist, tutor, inventor, and clergyman.

Your greatest married happiness is likely to come from a union with Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19; possibly Leo, July 23-Aug. 23, would make a congenial companion, or Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23.

Your colors are green, red, blue, and white; birthstones, beryl and sapphire; fortunate weeks, those beginning April 26 and Nov. 14.

Josephine and Lauretta.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you kindly tell me what Josephine and Lauretta mean? R. B."

Josephine is the feminine for Joseph, which means "he shall add"; Lauretta, a variation of Laura, meaning "a laurel." Thank you. Come again.

Meaning of Names.

"Dear Miss Blake: Please tell me the meaning of these names: Thomas, Algernon, Carlysle, Archibald, and John. "X. Y. Z."

Thomas has an unusual meaning, being the Hebrew for "twin"; Algernon, from the French, meaning "with whiskers"; Carlysle is another form of Charles, meaning "strong" or "manly"; Archibald, "extremely bold"; John "the gracious gift of God."

Don't Kiss Him, Edythe.

"Dear Miss Blake: Kindly advise me if there is any harm when a middle aged married man kisses a young girl of 18 years. He is of a different nationality. "E. L."

If you are the girl of 18, take my advice and refuse such liberties, whether the man be middle aged, of a different nationality, or your own age. This is a privilege that should be allowed only to relatives and husband-to-be.

She Really Loves.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have gone with a boy for two years. I am 18 and he is 24. We had talked about marriage, but he never had definitely proposed to me.

"Last summer when I was away he came to see me, quite a distance from where we live, and seemed to act as usual, but when I came home in the fall he acted queerly. He would not make dates with me, but if we met any place in the evening he would take me home.

"I kept asking him to come and see me, and he would come, but he started going with other girls. I got angry and said I would quit going with him if he went with a certain girl any more.

"He said he wouldn't, but the next night I saw them together. I can't give him up now. I really love him. Shall I continue asking him to go with me? He never mentions our future any more. "B. H."

Your future will continue to be a blank if you keep on asking him to "go with you," that's my prophecy. You're pursuing the wrong tactics, Miss Broken Heart; turn the tables on this changeable fellow; let him do the asking. Go with your other friends just as if nothing had happened and don't try to settle his affairs for him. If you hold your head high and never give him an inkling as to how badly you feel I am almost sure he will soon be back, his former devoted self.

Just a Hint, Jasmine.

"Dear Miss Blake: When a man leaves you after taking you home from a party what should you say? If he gives you his card should you thank him? "JASMINE."

It's quite evident that this little miss from school is never going to err on the side of impoliteness. On the contrary, she has an overexaggerated sense in that direction. It isn't really necessary to thank a man for just bringing you home from a party. He's the one who ought to thank you for allowing him the pleasure, and certainly he would be overwhelmed if you thanked him for giving you his card. All you need do is to maintain a discreet silence and smile your appreciation, or perhaps gently hint that you would be glad to have him call sometime.

Where's That Love Story.

"Dear Miss Blake—Will you kindly let me know why you did not publish that love story which I sent in three weeks ago? Is it because it was not typewritten? MABEL."

The typing makes no difference, so don't account for my silence on that score. You probably do not realize how many competitors you have and how tastes do differ. Don't be discouraged, come again.

Met Him Only Once.

"Dear Miss Blake: Would it be proper to ask a young man that I had met only once to a party? S. E. L."

That is a rather too limited acquaintance for an invitation, in my opinion. The only extenuating circumstances, would be in case you had known of him in school or among your friends for some time, and your family approved of your asking him.

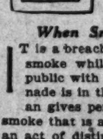
ETIQUETTE by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER



When Smoking Is Taboo.

IT is a breach of etiquette for a man to smoke while walking or talking in public with a woman. If the promenade is in the country and the woman gives permission to her escort to smoke that is another matter. But it is an act of distinct disrespect for a man to smoke in a city street while conversing with an acquaintance of the opposite sex.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

When walking with another man who stops to talk with a woman acquaintance on the street the first man, if he does not know her, should stroll slowly on. To linger near necessitates an introduction, which it is not good form for the woman's acquaintance to make without first asking her permission.

When two men are together and one lifts his hat to salute a woman the other should lift his, too.

In this country a woman bows first. In Europe a man does. The Europeans claim that the latter is the better mode of procedure, as it enables the woman to cut the man if she wants to—a not very amiable reason. The makers of etiquette in our own land may have thought that the method adopted here enabled the woman to ignore, without the affront of an unreturned salute, a delicate and subtle difference.

M. A. W.: It is so much the custom nowadays for young people to go motoring—even in couples—without a chaperon that rules as to chaperonage which obtained five or ten years ago, are at present utterly ignored. The telephone and automobile have broken down many a social convention. It depends upon how young people use their greater personal liberty whether it will continue to be extended to them or whether old fashioned methods will be resumed. I certainly shouldn't motor with any young man unless I knew him well.

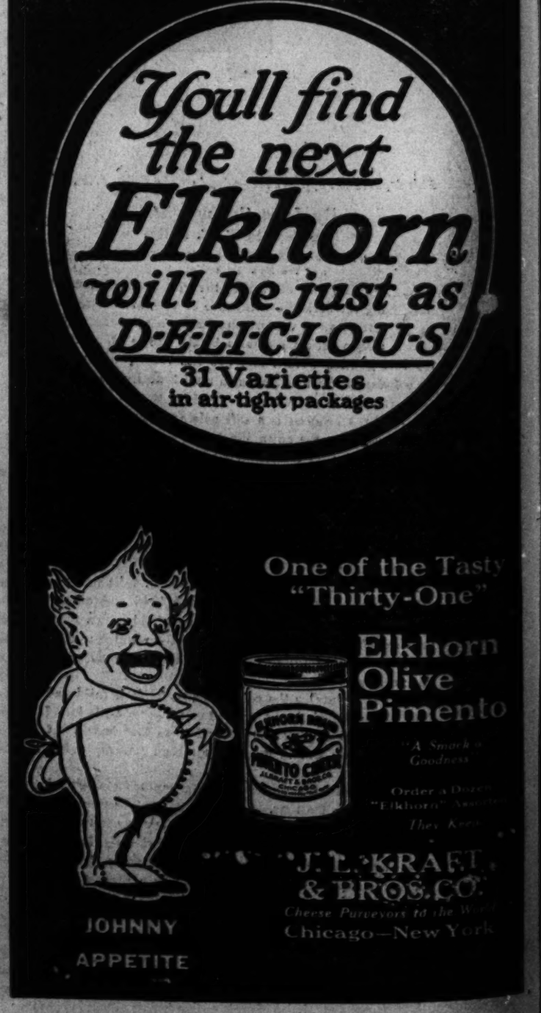
SALLIE: It was not good form for your young friend to spit while walking with you. What would he have thought if you had done the same? But don't discuss it with him. Unless he asks you about the propriety of the act, either overlook it or avoid him.

* *

A. L.: You can quite properly and courteously ask for the return of the family umbrella, even if it was an old cotton one.



Embroidery Design for a Summer Blouse.

Today is printed an embroidery design for a summer blouse. A satin stitch or a combination of satin, outline, and buttonhole give excellent results. Detail drawings show method of working. In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

When a Woman Loves.

BILLY MACDONALD was a teamster for a lumber company. Roaring Mac we called him, because he was constantly singing rollicking songs of the woods in a tone of voice which aptly fitted his big body. Perched high upon his truckload of logs he thought to tease the child, in the field he was passing, by asking her whether she wasn't afraid a snake would bite her bee brown toes.

Elsie was small for her age and in her sun bonnet, short dress, and bare feet looked but a child; but she was past 18, with the warm, brown loveliness of her outdoor life. She answered only with a friendly wave of her hand, but we noticed that she rarely missed being near the road after that when Billy passed, and he always had some teasing remark for the child of the wilderness.

Then the accident came. The chain holding the logs broke and Billy was under the load. The men carried him tenderly to the bunkhouse and the chore boy hastened for the company doctor. Even the doctor hardened as he was to accidents, turned aside his head when he gave his verdict. "Billy might never walk again. Only time and the best of nursing would ever help him."

When Elsie heard of it she came at once to the camp. The men were at work and Billy lay alone in his rough bunk. She talked with him until late afternoon. We never knew what was said, but the next day Elsie came again and with her a minister, who married them. That night we took Billy to her home. Her old parents didn't act any too joyful, but they thawed out a little after we had emptied our pockets for Elsie and her man.

It was years before curiosity caused me to visit the rough farm again. When I knocked I heard a shuffling walk and it was Billy who welcomed me at the door. I quickly saw why Elsie did not rise to greet me. In her arms she held a wee babe and a sturdy youngster was playing on the floor near her chair.

A homely story about lowly people, but if ever a woman's face showed pride of motherhood and loving trust it was that of the little wilderness mother. Not much love in the story, did you say? Why, shucks! There isn't anything else.

Letters of Reference.

I went to answer an advertisement for a chauffeur. I came into the office, only to find that the manager had left about fifteen minutes before.

There was a young girl in the office, and when I asked if the place was still vacant, she said "yes." Then she asked to see my references. I had a few love letters from my out of town sweetheart in my pocket at that time—letters with a lot of them sweet nothings in them and intended for my eyes only. And I handed her two of them, thinking I was handing her my references, and I turned away and got interested in a telephone directory.

I turned when the young lady laughed and you can imagine my embarrassment when I found out my mistake. She handed me the letters, saying letters of reference from your sweetheart are not accepted, and laughed fit to kill. But I was out of the door and down the street before she got over it. X. Y. Z.

Trying On Hats.

My girl friend and I went forth to buy an Easter bonnet. In one of the department stores we stood, with three or four other ladies, beside a counter piled high with hats, trying on one after the other. Suddenly I saw a funny looking one, laden with the most gorgeous fruits, flowers, and feathers that one could imagine. I jammed it on my head for the amusement of my friend. "Just escaped from Ringling's circus," she remarked, and I certainly looked the part, for my appearance was ridiculous, to say the least. Then she must try it on, and our mirth was unbounded. At last we discarded it, to try on others. Then a portly lady, who had been standing near all the while, quietly put it on, picked up her bundles, and, giving us both a wicked look, strode away.

It was hers! M. G.

How It Was Made.

I was escorting the girl with whom I was then keeping company home from a show. On the way we sat down to rest for a few minutes on a rock bench. The crickets and katydids were making all the noise they knew how. At the same time a group of young people in a house a short distance away were gathered around the piano singing some popular songs. The girl's attention was concentrated on the popular songs, and just as I was wondering if those pesky insects ever got tired the girl said, referring to the young people, "Don't they sing beautifully, though?" Although I did not think so I agreed with her. "Yes," I said, "they make that music, as you call it, by rubbing their legs together." E. N.

A Gentle Reminder.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE following is a lesson. It is prepared for Mrs. C. Her need is so fundamental I believe I can help many others by trying to meet it. She and many others have found an unknown and complex something between the money they have and the returns they get that equals almost a great worry, and worry is bad for every human being.

I have prepared this lesson, but I cannot study it for anybody. I would advise Mrs. C. to read it more than once, and be ready to answer a quiz on it. If she cannot to that extent hold the important facts in mind, it will do her little good.

As for me, I got right down to hard work and went over some of these details many times, cutting out and adding, multiplying and dividing. This is the way to do problems—they will not do themselves. If I seem to parade my own virture, it is because I know that it would have been easier and more popular to have written about wedding breakfasts. Yet the working of such problems ought to be considered as much a necessity as a virtue. Make a virtue of the necessity and do it enthusiastically, if you can.

Though I have given many details and think I have worked out a list of supplies ample for twenty-one meals for two people at 10 cents a meal, I have not space to outline all these meals. Mrs. C. must do that herself, though I am giving all the suggestions I can. But here is Mrs. C.'s letter which inspired this lesson, and perhaps others to follow:

"As I read your column with a great deal of interest, I am going to ask if you will give me some suggestions about solving an almost impossible problem in diet. The case is this: I am a married woman who works long hours downtown, have no children, and at present my husband is out of work. He had a small business of his own, but lost everything therein. We are keeping house in a small three room apartment. My kitchen is tiny and inconvenient, but the little flat is attractive, modern, and in a good locality.

"What I want to ask you is, can you suggest some articles of food that can be easily prepared and yet have a definite food value? It seems a little dicult, I know, for in the case of vegetables that require a long time to cook it takes my whole evening to prepare dinner, and I am always tired at night. If our diet is necessarily limited and restricted, owing to lack of time and conveniences, I wonder if fresh fruit will compensate as far as health is concerned?

"I have thought of a fireless cooker, but our rooms are so tiny, though comfortable, that I hesitate about adding another thing. Besides, such food requires preparation in the morning, and it seems to me that it will be impossible to add to my work and keep my health. Any suggestions you may give will be greatly appreciated."

See how Mrs. C. finds the favorable side—her flat is attractive; her rooms are comfortable, though tiny! She will get on, but she has to learn that there are no vegetables, except the dried beans, peas, and lentils, which require long cooking. Long cooking in much water is a mistake. The green vegetables are largely water; so is fruit. Neither furnishes fuel and energy, and we must have these latter or we wear ourselves out fast. Green vegetables and fruits help in the digestion and assimilation of foods but contribute little actual nourishment.

The main thing you, Mrs. C., would need a fireless cooker for would be for cooking cereals. Here is a substitute: Buy you an inexpensive stone crock, a little larger in size than the two quart aluminum fireless cooker kettle, with a cover which will clamp down. Put a 3 cent three legged wire stand in the bottom, line the crock with several thicknesses of newspaper, and put it over the stand; prepare your cereal on the stove, cover tight, put in the jar, fold down the lining paper over it, and put another crushed paper over, put on the stone cover, and leave over night. In the morning your cereal should be beautifully done. Heat some of it up for breakfast and, if it is bland mange type, use the rest with cream at night for a dessert. You can add an egg and sugar to some cold cereals and bake as a souffé.

If you want oatmeal, put one cup of rolled oats in your kettle, a little salt, and two cups and a half of cold water. Stir this over the fire till it boils and thickens well, then cover and put in the crock. It will be beautifully jellied in the morning if prepared (in ten minutes) at dinner time. Use eight slightly rounding tablespoons of cornmeal to two cups of water and cook in the same way. This will be stiff enough to fry in the morning in a little bacon fat.

Of course you have a double boiler, in which most cereals must be cooked for at least one hour, even if of the quick cooking type, but remember that when cooked straight over just enough fire to keep them boiling they will cook in about one-fourth the time if stirred constantly. Teach your husband to do the stirring. He ought to volunteer.

The frying pan is the friend of those who have little time to cook, but must be used judiciously for such things as scrambled eggs, drying a vegetable puree, and frying a little bacon. But most useful of all is that two quart aluminum fireless kettle, supplemented, if you can find it, by a little pint boiler with a cover, not one which clamps, necessarily. This latter would be used for onions, and even for potato stew, because these, if cooked often in the other kettle, may flavor the cereal. It is ideal to have a kettle just for cereals.

In this two quart kettle, covered while cooking, you may make over a fire a delicious potato stew, restful, or change it to a soup, which is more restful yet to a tired body. Use one pound of potatoes, sliced thin, and a half cup of water, or start with a cup, until you get used to this kind of cooking. If making soup, it need not all cook away. Add one or two onions, sliced, or some celery. When done finish with a little cream and butter, which adds greatly to its food value.

In this same kettle, in about the same way, you may cook glazed or plain sliced carrots, a delicious dish of stewed onions [finished like the potato stew or chopped and added to thickened milk for a cream soup], kohlrabi, turnip, summer squash, etc. It is better to cook string beans and greens in an enameled kettle.

In this same two quart kettle, with four times their measure of water, you may cook the dried green split peas, adding an onion and carrot, starting them in cold water, and after they boil put them over the simmering burner, all in one-half to two hours from the bag. Sifted and dried in the frying pan, these are palatable as they are, but are made delicious by the addition of butter. Bacon fat may be added. This puree will keep several days and may be warmed up, or in five minutes a pea soup may be made by adding hot milk. You get a great deal of good food for your money by using these peas or lima beans or any others.

But let us be more definite about this matter of food value. One cup of dried peas, costing 5 cents or more, according to where you buy, will furnish enough for two meals for two people, or four portions, and each of these portions will yield 200 calories each. If you add three-fourths of a cup of milk to each portion, there is another hundred calories; a pat of butter adds another. With two slices of bread and butter, 400 calories more, you have a meal to which you may add a celery or radish relish [of insignificant caloric value] and some fruit.

Big hominy, cooked in this same kettle over the tiniest bit of fire for a long time or for an hour and then in the crock, is splendid buttered, as either a cereal or vegetable, or with milk as a cereal. The liquid in which it is cooked, if combined with one egg per cup, sweetened, and flavored, makes a delicious corn or cup custard and one as nourishing as one of milk.

Now, how are you going to learn food values for yourself? Well, first fix in mind a few facts such as that dried peas, cereals, and meals yield 1,600 calories a pound, and a pound is two measuring cups. If you divide each pound into sixteen portions, each of those will have a caloric value of 100. This 100 calories in most of these 1,600 things is two tablespoons of the raw material.

Now, how shall we learn about the actual fuel or energy value of any food? Take any food table, but it is easiest to get bulletin 28 of the United States department of agriculture, with the title, "The Chemical Composition of American Food Materials," to be had by sending 5 cents to the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C. Suppose you want to know the fuel value of potatoes. Look under "vegetables." In the last column of the table you will find "fuel value per pound." The edible portion of a potato averages 385 calories per pound. A pound of potatoes is four just below medium sized ones, so each of these contains about 110 calories.

Law compels the makers of package goods to put the weight on the package. Look for it, then find out the fuel value by determining what part of a pound it is after you have found the fuel value of a pound.

When you once have begun to learn the values of food in this way, you will soon know almost unconsciously whether you are getting what you need to maintain health and energy, and will not let a disordered stomach drive you to eating either too much or too little.

You can arrange a meal with high food values at the beginning or at the end or in the middle, but do not have heavy ones throughout nor, for that matter, light ones. Light foods at the start are good when you are hungry or you may eat too much. A ripe olive has a high calorie value, yet may be used as a beginner or relish. For 10 cents you can buy a can of ripe (black) olives which says on it "Net weight of fruit content nine ounces." I found seventy-seven olives in that nine ounces. Each pound furnishes 1,136 calories. Finish the problem for yourself. You get real food from the olive and almost none from the radish, but the water and minerals in the latter make it invaluable.

To eat intelligently it is necessary to understand the long range of value between the fresh vegetables, which may contain up to 95 per cent of water and contain from eighty-five to three or four hundred calories per pound, while olive oil contains 4,000. Butter contains 3,600, and when a pound is divided into thirty-six pats each is worth 100 calories. That amount of butter you see yields more than a whole pound of celery or lettuce.

Nuts contain a great deal of oil, so are often too heavy to eat at the end of a meal, but are good for a meatless luncheon.

The problem of balancing is omitted in this discussion, but is considered in the table. Bacon, eggs and cheese are here and give what meats does in building material, but the meat problem is left alone this time.

Allowing each person 2,600 calories of food per day, the total required for the week for two would be 36,400. See what you get in the table:

Amounts.	Cost.	Total Calories.
4 pints milk	$0.20	1,870
8 half pints cream	.80	1,265
1 dozen eggs	.28	*800

2 pints strawberries	.40	180
1 dozen bananas [cook them]	.10	1,000
¼ pound cheese	.15	1,000
½ cup olive oil	.15	1,000
Totals	$4.61	$36,650

*About. †Per pound packed.

The leftovers from this will probably be corn meal and oatmeal, tapioca, and perhaps sugar. Some people want much more butter than others, and when much is used in cooking it flies and is not counted, but notice how much food value it adds! Here we have calories and to spare. Any cereal may be substituted for those given without changing this allowance. The prices given were those prevailing May 18, but are nearly standard. Count everything added to this money total as a luxury, since here is ample food for a week, unless the article is something that is substituted. Innumerable variations of this program could be made.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I AM postmistress in this small town, and there comes to my window each day a crippled girl, and although she looks eagerly and hopefully for a letter she seldom receives one. As if misfortune enough were not a sufficient handicap—for she has one leg cut off at the knee—she is disfigured with a birthmark. Her home life is none too pleasant, as she is frequently reminded of her helpless, almost useless condition, and in addition to this she cannot read or write. Yet she enjoys getting letters, for I read them to her and help her in every way I can. I see so often in the Corner that persons ask for the address of some one to whom they may write, and I have thought that perhaps some one might take pity on this poor girl and send her a card or letter. I know this will rejoice her, for she has every letter she has ever received treasured away. If some one wishes to do a kind deed and make a lonely heart light just write a line to this child. Her initials are M. C. I inclose some stamps for thoughtless ones who may wish the address and do not send stamp.

"Postmistress."

Here is another chance to do a kindly service to a lonely girl. I wish it were possible for "Postmistress," who has asked that her name be withheld, to make some arrangement by which this girl might be taught to read and write. The ability to do this would help her make her life worth while. I shall hope to receive applications for the address and name of M. C. and that she may soon be cheered by the letters and post cards for which her friend asks.

He Could Pay the Freight.

"I wonder if there is any one among your readers who has a boy's bicycle to give away. I am the boy and I am 11 years old. I live almost a mile from school, and if I had a bicycle I could go back and forth much better, and, besides, I have to go to town almost every day. I have tried to sell papers and to do many other things to get money to buy the bicycle, but I did not succeed. I think I could manage to pay the freight if any one has a bicycle to give me. H. S. C."

As I have said before, I do not like to ask for bicycles too often, but the plea of this boy touched me, and I hope it may have that effect upon some one who has an unused wheel to give away. If so, send to me for his address and make the child happy.

She's a Music Student.

"Have any of the readers of the Corner some popular music, either old or new; some classic music for the first, third, and fourth grades, and a music roll that is not needed? I am a girl 14 years old and have been taking music ever since I was 6, but I live about a mile from town, and carrying music that distance in my arms wears it out quickly. I would be glad to make some crochet patterns or anything of that kind that I could in return for music or a roll. A. C."

This is a modest request, and I hope it may be granted. I am sure there must be some one with the music desired and, I trust, with the roll for music also. Send to me for the address, inclosing stamp, please.

Offers Silk Pieces.

"I wrote a letter to Nancy D. and sent her some post cards and she wrote me such a nice letter, thanking me for them. I will try to look after her and to send her cards every week and some silk pieces. If there are any others who would like silk pieces I will send them if they will pay postage. J. C. P."

I am always glad to hear of acknowledgments that have been received from those to whom cards and other tokens of remembrance have been sent, and so I publish this note here. If any one wishes to get the silk pieces offered by J. C. P. will she please write to me for the address, inclosing stamps?

Invalid Wants Magazines.

"I am a shut-in and I have rheumatism in my legs and am not able to be out much. I wonder if it would be asking too much to request somebody to send me magazines. I would be so thankful for them. I am poor and I can't afford the money to buy them, and the time seems so long when I am alone all day. When frying doughnuts a nice way to flavor them is to put a few cloves in the kettle of fat. Also orange peeling, dried and grated to a fine powder, is delicious flavoring for cakes and puddings. Mrs. F. B."

Write for the address of Mrs. F. B. and send her a magazine now and then.

Can Never Walk Again.

"I am sending you the name of a dear boy, 17 or 18 years old, who cannot walk and has not walked since he was 2 or 3 years old. At that time he had an illness which paralyzed his legs so that he can never walk again. He is fond of reading to pass away his lonely hours as a shut-in. If any one has books, magazines, or papers to spare, or anything else which will cheer him, I know he will appreciate it. His people live out in the country and are poor financially and are not able to buy books or anything of the sort for him. I myself am an invalid and shut-in, and know by experience how much he will enjoy anything that is sent him. His initials are O. M. Mrs. L. E. B."

Here is a chance to cheer up a lonely heart, and I shall hope for a number of requests for the name and address of O. M. It will be better to send articles directly to him after securing the address from the Corner rather than to bother the kind friend who has made the application for him with letters and inquiries.

Flowers and Books to Give.

"I have lots of slips and flowers, magazines and books, and feel perhaps I could help in some of these ways. I wish you could put my name on file, and if requests from my vicinity come in you could put me in touch with the writers. I am much interested in the Helping Hand and would like to do what I can to be of service to the readers of the department. Mrs. L. W. H."

This is a generous and practical offer and I trust that those who read it will aid in making it useful. Applications for the articles offered I hope may be accompanied by stamped and self-addressed envelopes for reply.

Remnants to Make Over.

"If any of the sisters have quilt pieces or remnants which could be made over into children's clothes to send to a tired and needy mother the kindness would be greatly appreciated. Perhaps I might help them in some way. At least I hope they would write to me. L. O."

Who will answer this tired mother's appeal? In a letter to me personally she tells me she has four children, aged from 3 years to 10, three boys and one girl. Will some one write to me for her address?

Wants English Correspondent.

"Could any one give me the address of an English girl who would like to exchange letters and post cards with me, an American girl of 20? I would be so much interested in a foreign correspondent. My grandfather came from England, and I think I could write interesting letters to any one who would care for them. I inclose a few stamps for your work. Amateur."

I trust the wish of the young girl may be gratified, and I shall be happy to put her in touch with any English correspondent, either directly or through some Cornerite in this country. Let me express my hearty appreciation of the consideration shown by the gift of the stamps she sends. So many of our correspondents omit stamps, in spite of the repeated requests to send those or stamped and self-addressed envelopes for reply to their inquiries, that the postage is a serious drain upon the Corner. Therefore, such thoughtfulness as that displayed by Amateur receives genuine gratitude.

She Lives in Hope.

"I thank you for the addresses you gave me. I was able to send flower seeds to each one. Thank you, too, for sending my address to the different friends who sent me nice quilt pieces. No, I don't look forward to getting a parrot or a graphophone. I know I shall never have money myself to buy these things, and I am afraid no one will have them to give me, but I thought maybe some one might happen to have one of them to give away—you can't always tell. I won't be disappointed, anyway, although I live in hope. But remember me if any one does offer any of these things. I love music so well and wish I had some of it in my home. When you print the things I offered to the Corner you can add a natural hair switch, on the order of chestnut brown, which I will give to some one who can use it. My hair is so mixed with gray now that I cannot wear it any more. I wish that any one who writes to me about it would send a sample of her hair and a stamp for reply, as the switch would be of no use to any one if it did not match her hair. Mrs. A. E. S."

Although I share with the writer the fear she may not get the articles she asks for, I print her letter on the chance of her wish being granted, as she has fulfilled the desires of so many others of our constituency. The switch she offers will doubtless be sought by some one, and I will give the writer's name and address if the application is accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Large Family in Need.

"Has some reader a parasol to give to a little girl of 13, whose eye was seriously injured in an accident and whose father is a poor struggling farmer with a sickly wife and six children? They live twelve miles from here, over a sandy road, and must come in once a week to have the child's eye treated by the doctor. They would also like an old or discarded violin, if any one has one to give away. I know these people are worthy. They are thrifty, upright, and hard working, but poor, and necessarily live barren and empty lives. I will see that any gifts are sent to them, if mailed or expressed to me. A letter to any prominent person in this place or to the minister of the Congregational church will bring the return guarantee that the family is all I have represented and that I may be trusted to pass on to them anything that any one is kind enough to send. I would give them more myself, but there is a limit to my ability. Mrs. A. H."

I do not know if the violin desired can be supplied, for there are many applications for such instruments; but I am sure some one must have a parasol to give the child in order that she may shade her injured eye on the long drives to and from the doctor's. I do not doubt that other little gifts will suggest themselves to those who know what are the needs and desires of a girl of 13. Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope when writing for the girl's address.

Wants Songs and Piano Music.

"I have had so much good from the sisters in the Corner that I am glad to offer my mite. I have some magazines that I will be glad to send to some one who will pay postage on them. Here is a prescription to destroy bedbugs: Use gasoline on the beds and mattresses, but be careful to have no light or fire near it, as it is quick to catch fire. I would be glad to get some of the music that 'Just Me' has to give away—the piano music and songs—and if any one would like to have some violets I would be glad to send some. I am so sorry for the shut-ins. My father has been a cripple for the last fourteen years, and my mother fell two years ago and broke one of her legs and she has been a cripple ever since. J. J."

I am sorry to report that all the music offered by "Just Me" has been given away elsewhere. Has any one else some to give this Cornerite, and does any one wish to have the magazines she offers or the violets? If so, write to me for the address, inclosing stamp.

Magazines and Patterns.

"I love to read and take many magazines, not one of which is ever thrown away or destroyed in my home, but after having loaned them to my friends close around I give them to those who are unable to subscribe for them. I make a lot of tatting and have some pretty patterns and will be glad to exchange or send patterns to those who want them. I don't care so much to exchange, as I take so many papers with the patterns in them. I think tatting is such a nice employment, especially for those not able to do heavy work. It does not strain the eyes as does crocheting or drawn work.

"Mrs. S. L. F."

I am sure many will be found to take the benefit of these offers and I hope applications as to how to address her may be accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

An Unjust Boss.

DEAR Miss King: In writing you I represent nine girls besides myself. We are all employed as clerks in the same department of a large mercantile house. The man who does the buying is at the head of the department. There is one other girl in our section, but she is not represented here. We—that is, the ten of us—come to you for a little advice. None of us is new in the department, and we all have good records with the firm.

"Up to about three months ago our boss was fair enough to all and treated us with some consideration. I wouldn't say he was ever exceptionally nice to any of us, but we were satisfied, as we didn't expect unusually kind management.

"About three months ago this man developed a flirtation with one of the girls in the department, and since it began he has been a regular tyrant to the rest of us. We would have no cause to complain if his interest in this girl only meant special privileges for her, but as his attentions and pleasantness as to her increase, his harshness and meanness develop toward the rest of us.

"We have stood it quietly for some time, but he is getting so unjust and intolerant that we are all up in arms against him. We have hesitated going to the man higher up because we have seen so many fail to accomplish anything by complaining of a superior. That is a method which seems to work only one way. When a head of a department reports unfavorably of a subordinate, be the complaint fair or unfair, that subordinate is either immediately dismissed or severely reprimanded. We have known of cases where employés were dismissed summarily for going to the superintendent to make accusations against the heads of departments. For this reason not one of the girls is willing to be spokesman in carrying a complaint.

"To show you how unjustly our boss is using his authority, I would mention—

"On several occasions he has refused to allow the girls to go home when they were ill.

"He allows no one to leave the department except at noon hour.

"Twice he has succeeded in giving credit for unusually big sales to his favorite which really should have gone to other girls in the department, and these sales meant a bonus to the clerk.

"He has reported the girls to headquarters by exaggerating slight errors—mistakes so slight that other heads of departments pass them up with a word of caution to the girl.

"To these oppressions one girl is excepted.

"These are a few of our grievances, and we ask if you can suggest a means of relief. We don't want this man to lose his position, but we do want to be treated with some degree of fairness and be allowed the privileges which the clerks in all other parts of the house enjoy. We would appreciate a suggestion from you.

"M. B. M. AND ASSOCIATES."

You say your boss exaggerates your mistakes when reporting them. If you intend to make a complaint about him, be sure you are perfectly honest in your condemnation. In comparison to his extravagant kindness to one girl, his attitude towards the rest might seem a little harsh.

Be sure you have sufficient cause, and then, if all the girls agree, a simple plan would be to write to the superintendent, giving him a plain statement of the facts. This document should bear the signatures of all the girls.

It would be unwise to mention the other girl in a written report. Leave her out of the matter.

You must be ready to back up any complaint you make against the head of your department with sufficient proof.

If this man is as contemptible as your letter suggests I think you are justified in making a complaint. He has no right or authority to forbid you the privileges allowed to the rest of the employés.

Before and After Marriage.

Then the Fire Started.

Before we were married he was forever complimenting me on my beautiful hair, and used to say it reminded him of the setting sun on a harvest evening. We have been married almost a year and the other day I was drying my hair on the back porch, when he came along and said: "For the love of Mike, go inside or you'll set the whole block on fire." What followed can best be imagined.

Expects to Die After the Pie.

"One night before we were married he said, when I had made some candy, "It is delicious, but I would eat rocks for you."

Ten months after "the big occasion" at dinner, after tasting the pie with which I had had bad luck, he said: "Every time I eat down at this table I expect to die before I leave it."

Alas! alas! how men do change.

Marked Down.

We have just been married two weeks and my hubby is a partner in a woman's ready to wear store. Many were the hours he spent in our sweetheart days telling me that he wouldn't part with me for all the gold in the world. But last night I was awakened suddenly by my husband placing his hand on my arm, and he distinctly said: "A bargain, madame, at $5.98." W. E.

The AMATEUR GARDENER by Eben E. Rexford

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to the Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

The Care of House Plants in Summer.

SOME persons put their house plants out of doors in summer, leaving them in their pots. This is a good plan if they can be given a reasonable amount of shade and care is taken to see that they never suffer from lack of water. Because these plants have been grown in the house where they were not exposed to hot sunshine, it is necessary to give them some kind of protection from the heat which characterizes most gardens in summer.

Sometimes they can be placed where trees or bushes will break the force of the sun's rays. Sometimes they can be given a place on the east side of the house, where only the forenoon sunshine will reach them.

If there are no trees or bushes, and the eastern side of the dwelling does not afford a place for them, I would suggest making a screen of lath for them. Support this on posts four or five feet high. Put the lath on the frame in lattice fashion, leaving the width of a lath between each strip. This will be sufficient to break the force of the sun without unduly shading the plants.

Some persons will prefer to keep their plants on the veranda. This plan has its advantages, because the owner of them will be likely to give them more attention than she would if they were placed in the garden.

If some distance away from the house they stand a much greater chance of being neglected, and neglect is something that must be avoided if you want to keep your plants in fine condition through the summer. They must be watered regularly and liberally if out of doors, because evaporation takes place much more rapidly there than indoors, as they are exposed to the action of wind and warm air. If allowed to become really dry at the roots, as they will if not given constant attention, they will receive a check from which they may be a long time in recovering, therefore, make it a practice to see that they are kept well watered.

You will have to use twice as much water on them as you would if they were in the house, so be generous in the quantity you apply. There will be little danger of giving too much.

Others turn their plants out of their pots and put them in the ground. Here they make rampant growth, and the owner of them congratulates herself on their improvement. It is true that they do improve when turned out of their pots and given a chance to grow under natural conditions, but when fall comes and it is necessary to lift and repot them, the check which results from a sacrifice of a large share of the roots they have sent far and wide in the soil of the garden more than offsets all the "improvement" that has been made.

It is impossible to take them up and pot them without great loss of roots, and the loss of these roots means a corresponding loss of top, for a plant with mutilated roots must have its branches pruned away proportionately. You cannot save the entire top when half the roots that must support it have been cut away. An attempt to do so will be disastrous.

If you do not lose the plant, you find that it has been so seriously injured by your attempt to make a few roots feed an overbalancing amount of branches that it seldom recovers until late in spring, and all your care and attention has been wasted for a season. I would not advise any one to pursue this method of summering her plants.

Others make a practice of sinking the pots containing a plant in the ground up to its rim. When this is done the plant can be lifted on the approach of cold weather without any disturbance of its roots. But there is great danger of harm being done to plants treated in this manner, because the impression will be that because the soil about it is moist, the soil inside the pot must be equally moist.

Here is where a great mistake is made. The walls of the pot will prevent moisture from soaking through from the surrounding soil to a great extent, and the soil in the pot will often be quite dry. To guard against this danger you will have to keep close watch of your sunken plants and see that they get all the water they need during the hot, dry season.

If your plants need pruning or cutting back to make them more bushy, give this attention early in the season. It isn't wisdom to let them develop growth which must be trimmed away when they are brought into the house in the fall. Prune as needed, and throw the vitality of the plant into the branches that you expect to make use of next fall.

If any plant seems to require repotting, do the work now. This will give it a chance to recover from the check which always accompanies a disturbance of its roots early in the season. It is poor policy to put off necessary work of this and other kinds until about the time the plants are to be brought into the house.

Rooting Oleander Cuttings.—J. O'D. B.: One of the surest methods of rooting any kind of hardwooded plant is to drop the slip into a bottle of rainwater, which should be suspended in the window in such a manner that sunshine can get to the base of the cutting, but not to its top. This can be easily regulated by proper adjustment of the window shade.

Let the bottle be a wide mouthed one. As water evaporates, add more, so that the bottle will be half full at all times. It may take weeks for the slip to put forth roots. Only half ripened wood should be used.

When roots start and have grown to be an inch or two long sift soil into the bottle until they are entirely covered and wait a week or ten days before attempting to remove the plant. Then break the bottle and remove soil and plant without disturbing the roots if possible.

Fern trouble—[Mrs. M. Y.]—About all that can be done for a sword fern that is infested with scale is to cut away the old fronds and allow the plant to renew itself.

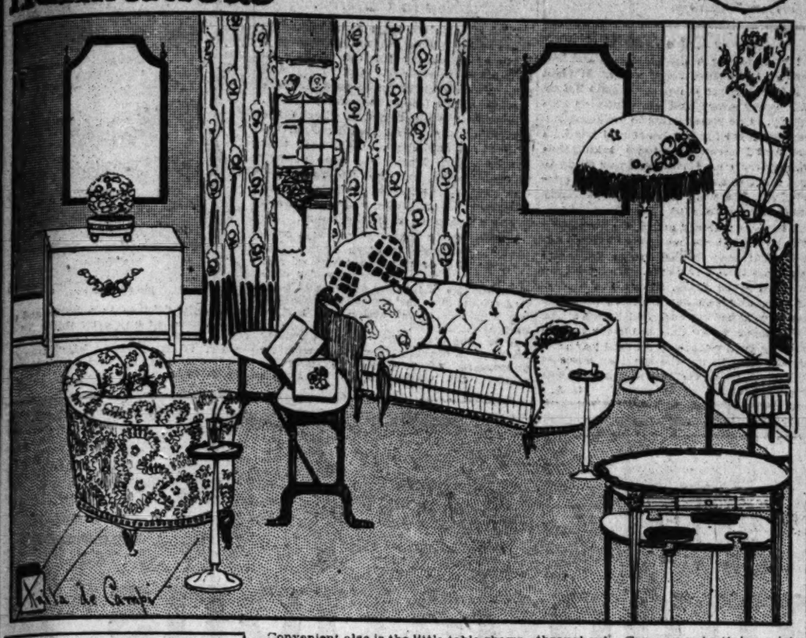
The Home Harmonious

Home of the Bachelor Maid.

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

Is there any such being left in the world as an old fashioned old maid? Women in plenty there are living in "single blessedness," but the word old maid somehow no longer seems to apply to them now that they have learned the value of economic independence. No more coos, no more gurgles and shaking of "cork screw" curls, no more derision and opprobrium. The modern old maid is a sort of superwoman looked on with wonderment by the male contingent, and with a tinge of envy if the truth be told by the "happily married" female members.

Time was when it would have been a shock to the community if a young lone woman should take an apartment and settle herself down to all the comforts of home. Now the woman alone [quite through her own choice, in nine cases out of ten] goes housekeeping—not in defiance of the old time conventional idea that a woman needs "protection," but with intelligent indifference to such an obsolete suggestion.

The modern self-supporting female has found her own work is her best protection, and that she can do her best work if her abode makes for privacy and unhampered freedom from the restriction of constant surveillance and interruption. So she selects a little flat, furnishes it according to her own ideas of ease, hires a maid by the week if she can afford one, or occasionally by the day for the weekly cleaning, if her means are limited. She cooks most of her meals at home and has some downtown according to her own convenience, but she is not dependent on boarding house fare.

As one clever, self-respecting young wage earner expressed her situation to me the other day: "Until people grow accustomed to the independence of having what they call bachelor quarters my reputation may be jeopardized, but please the good Lord, my digestion will be unimpaired. I don't care to marry, but that is no reason why I should be barred from the privilege of having a home, which I am myself capable of providing for myself. I want wholesome food, hygienic, comfortable, and artistic surroundings—a place where I can live my life and receive my friends without interference or conjecture. Of course, I have selected an apartment of unquestionably good standing, and I have given credentials that establish me as a most desirable tenant. In time people will acknowledge the practicality of my course, and for the present my personal comfort takes precedence over personal comment."

The whole apartment was comprised in three rooms and bath—virtually two rooms—that is, a living room and bedroom, for the kitchen, known as a kitchenette, was little more than a large closet.

The living room was none too large a room, and it had to serve as dining room as well. She wanted a davenport and she wanted a chaise longue, but there was not either room or money enough for both, so she hit upon the little sofa shown here, as it seemed to combine comforts. The back and arms in one, with good, springy upholstery suggested ease in any attitude, its eighty-one inches invited full length repose, and its high arms afforded all the luxury of a chaise longue to one who wished to lift her feet off the ground and lean back and read. It had the advantage over the chaise longue in that one could switch about to either end.

This little sofa with its Adam style legs and beading formed the keynote of the room. Naturally the Adam motif repeated itself throughout the room, though there was no pretense at consistent period furnishings. A pair of Adam mirrors and a small Adam chair were noticeable. The other furnishings were varied and rather modern in character. The color scheme and the scheme of ornament were distinctly modern.

Here is the combination of colors, daringly employed: The portieres between the rooms were in yellow, the color of dry mustard, and the tables and mirror frames were enameled deep royal blue. The standard lamp was gray with a cover of gray silk, trimmed with many colored modern school flowers, some in silk and velvet appliqued and some padded; it was lined with light bright lemon color. The owner told me gleefully that it had been "turned out" by her mother.

The little reading table, with a book rack made to it, is a delightful personality. The pair of drop leaf tables with oblong instead of oval drops charmingly adapt themselves to several uses. Opened out and stood end to end, they make a refectory shaped long narrow table, and set side by side in the middle of the room, covered with one cover, they make a large square table. With flaps down and pushed against the wall they serve as consoles.

Convenient also is the little table shown at the right, with its nest of tiny stands. This is one of the novelties of the season. The little stands may be scattered about the room within convenient reach of guests who have come for a smoke and a chat, or a cup of tea. Each top is just large enough to accommodate a glass, or a plate, or an ash tray as the case may be, and when not in use, they are tilted away into the table shelf. The top of the same table has an adjustable tray, large enough to hold a goodly tea service, and below this is a little drawer for cutlery and lunch napkins.

The window shades are made of double faced cretonne so that they look equally well from within and without.

Women who work are not anxious to spend their leisure hours on domestic labor, so when they furnish they dispense with much that would require careful dusting and polishing. Few small ornamental objects may be found in their rooms. Bric-a-brac is kept pretty well in restraint as it should be.

Never have I seen a simpler, daintier bedroom. It was all in pearl color, with chintz flowered on a pearl colored ground. The fabric was stamped in basket weave with little criss-cross lines. The wall paper and fabric were evidently manufatured by the same producer; they were probably designed for use in the same room. The side wall was in solid pearl colored basket weave fabric paper, with a band border in colored flowers conventionalized, and the same flowers were printed in all over on the chintz that was used for bed cover. It was utilized again in the made to order French chintz furniture. The latter was merely a framework of enameled wood, with light weight, adjustable chintz boxes to hold shirt waists, lingerie, hats, and shoes, fitted into the frames.

The kitchenette, opening into the living room, had royal blue and gray as the predominating colors. The kitchenware was in blue enamel. The gas range and icebox were nicely concealed behind especially fitted doors.

On the floor was a round deep blue box ornamented with a gay little painting of bright colored flowers. It looked inviting and I sat myself down: "Will you please," said my hostess, "get off my stove?" It was a fireless cooker and she proceeded deftly to lift out of it various covered pans, containing, among other things, a good little casserole of chicken that she had "started" and left sagely to its own devices before setting off for work in the morning. There was a perfectly good supper all hot and ready. Certainly a woman has the advantage of a man in the game of lone housekeeping.

Adjectives have a nimble way of jumping about. The qualification "jolly old" heretofore almost exclusively used in conjunction with bachelor, now disports itself merrily before the cheerfully accepted good English word, "spinster."

Answers to Inquiries.

E. H. S.—Old ivory would be a better choice than gray for the enameling of your woodwork to go with buff walls.

J. M. H.: It is a mistake to have the upper part of your room dark and the lower part light; the reverse is the correct way. It is considered in good taste now to have the rooms done as your rooms are, with the same decoration throughout. Can you not attain variety by the use of attractive cretonnes, or chintz, or other such fabrics for your draperies? This would be your best method of treatment.

* *

P. W. B.: Yes, mulberry draperies and blue paper, properly blended, will go well with fumed oak furniture and oriental rugs. The harmony should be gentle and pleasing. About your staircase, of course it would be better if the stairs, too, should be done in mahogany. What is it you wish to know about your dining room? Yes, French gray and pink should make a pretty bedroom.

* *

E. S. H.: I think it would be better to leave the opening undraped. If your furnishings, etc., are ornamental, rugs figured, etc., use unfigured draperies, and vice versa. Yes, I think voile curtains would be nice throughout. Pretty ones in a fine quality can be had hemstitched and ready to hang from 75 cents to $1 a pair. Choose the cream ones.

* *

V. E.: I believe that a light gray tinged with taupe would be more attractive in your rooms than the yellowish brown. Nothing goes better in a young man's room where Navajo rugs are used than real clay color for the side walls. With Circassian walnut in your bedroom, I should like either a light yellow fabric paper or a dull blue. For your draperies in your living room the darkness of the tapestry and mission wood seems to call for a corresponding depth of color in the draperies. Would you like an old blue or a mulberry taffeta, with broken stripes of gray, matching the side wall, in this room?

L. L. M.: I believe that if you write to the firm from whom you buy the material for your puffed shades it will give you directions on how to make them. This is impossible to do without correct measurements of your windows, etc. I am sorry not to be able to accommodate you. Austrian shades are, I suppose, made of Austrian cloth.

* *

A. D. H.: No, I cannot better your suggestion as to the stain for your hall. Mahogany pink is always good with mahogany furniture, but if you prefer a contrast use a neutral green. Old blue is also effective with it. Figured paper would be permissible in your large reception hall if your furniture, draperies, rugs, etc., are unfigured. It is well to avoid overornamentation.

Hair on Face and Under Arms

This method for removing superfluous hair is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its vitality you must use De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory. It attacks hair under the skin, as well as on the skin. Imitations of De Miracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that De Miracle alone contains which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms as well as from face, neck and arms. Insist on the genuine De Miracle and you will get the best hair remover ever offered the public. Be sure to buy De Miracle by name and you will avoid disappointment. Furthermore, you will get the only depilatory that contains a binding guarantee which entitles you to your money if it fails. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer does not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. A-7, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

ELITE STYLES says "It is worthy of the highest praise." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

RED PIMPLES ON NECK AND FACE

Spread Rapidly on Shoulders and Body. Itching and Burning Intense. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My trouble began in small red pimples which soon grew larger, festered and came to a head, then dried and formed a crust somewhat of a yellowish color. My neck and face were entirely covered with eruptions which spread rapidly on my shoulders and body. They were in the form of blotches and the itching and burning were so intense that I was obliged to scratch and irritate the affected parts.

"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They instantly cooled and relieved the trouble and one week's use completely healed me." (Signed) Miss Cecilia Wells, Valeene, Ind., July 21, 1915.

Sample Each Free by Mail

With 32-p. Skin Book on request. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Sold throughout the world.

To Quickly Relieve Soreness and Inflammation

Rub in a few drops of Absorbine, Jr. It is surprising how promptly it penetrates and acts—how clean and pleasant it is to use and how economical, because only a few drops are required to do the work.

In addition to being a dependable liniment, Absorbine, Jr., is a safe, powerful, trustworthy antiseptic and germicide which doubles its efficiency and its uses.

When applied to cuts, bruises, and sores, it kills the germs, makes the wound aseptically clean and promotes rapid, healthy healing. It allays pain and inflammation promptly. Swollen glands, painful varicose veins, wens, and bursal enlargements yield readily to the application of Absorbine, Jr.

Absorbine, Jr., is sold by leading druggists at $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle or sent direct postpaid.

Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c in stamps. W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 308 Temple St. Springfield, Mass. (Advertisement.)

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

My little nephew whose clothes were often made from his father's old ones, was asked by a caller if he was in a hurry to grow up into a man like his father.

"Yes," he answered cheerfully, "and I hope I'll be big—'n father, too."

"Why is that?" he was asked.

"So I can't wear his old clothes made over." Mrs. J. D.

After dinner the other evening I was blowing rings to the quite evident amusement and delight of my three little nieces, who made demand after demand for more "smoky rings." However, after a while the novelty wore off for little "Duchess," who said, "Now blow us some stars." R. B. J.

Francis attends kindergarten. His father is superintendent and sometimes visits the kindergarten. He has always found his young son at the head of his class, until his last visit, when he found Francis last in the row of little tots.

That night his father asked: "Francis, how did you happen to be at the foot of the class today?"

And Francis was ready with this answer: "Well, father, it doesn't make any difference. They teach the same at both ends!" M. A. S.

My big brother was planting cherry trees and the neighbor's little boy was watching.

"I think those are apple trees," he said importantly.

"No, they are cherries," replied my brother.

The little fellow, greatly humiliated at his ignorance, said dejectedly: "I guess my thinks aren't much good." L. S.

Ernest was told to rock the bed and quiet his infant brother. This he did for a few moments and then said, "See here, Thomas, you needn't fink I'm going to rock you all day, for even if you do cry it won't hurt you; it's good for your health's department." I. M.

We have twin babies and a little boy came with his mother to visit us. He looked at the twins for awhile, then asked his mother: "Are they cheaper if you take two?" L. H. K.

Dick was in excellent spirits one evening when his father, a professor in a college, had some particular work he wished to do at home. Dick's good feelings were evidenced by the amount of noise he was making and thus disturbing his father. He was, after a time, made to sit upon a chair and told to remain there until he could keep quiet. After sitting in perfect quiet for a long time he startled his parents by saying, "I have not moved for a long time, papa; but my think didn't stop a bit." A. L. H.

Eleanor is the youngest of a family of ten children. A little boy came next door to visit and became her playmate. His name, the same as that of his father and grandfather with "the third" added, puzzled Eleanor. They went to call on the nurses at the hospital.

"What is your name, little boy?" asked a new nurse.

"Austin Doyle, the third," he replied as usual.

"And what is your name, little girl?"

Not to be outdone she answered: "Eleanor Flynn, the tenth." M. R.

My small son was going to town one cold winter night with his aunt. As she seated him in his cart and tucked the blankets around his chest and neck he exclaimed: "Auntie, please don't cover up my talk next." M. W. D.

My brother-in-law presented my nephew with an American flag which could be hoisted and lowered by means of a string and explained to him that a flag is only lowered at half mast when somebody dies. It so happened his mother had a severe headache on this particular day and so raising the flag three-quarters up he said: "This means somebody is sick." R. H.

My little nephew came to exhibiting a hatful of marbles.

"I won these from Willie," he said proudly.

"Why, Bobbie!" exclaimed his mother. "It's wicked to play marbles for keeps. Go right over to Willie's house and give him back his marbles."

"Yes, mother," said Bobbie obediently. "Shall I take that vase you won at Willie's mother's card party and give it back to her, too?" H. J.

Mother was being complimented by the guests at table upon some excellent bread which had been baked that afternoon. Elsa spoke up eagerly: "And I helped to make it, too, didn't I, mamma?"

"Yes, dear," mother answered.

"Yes," continued Elsa, speaking confidentially to the guests, "I always like to help mamma knead the bread; it gets your hands so clean!" R. W. C.

Marie had been away all the afternoon and when she came home her mother exclaimed:

"Marie, where have you been so long? I was afraid you were lost."

"Well, I wasn't lost," Marie replied. "I knew where I was all the time." R. O.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Stage Fright.

It was during the production of a school play that I made a proposal of marriage. At a certain point in the play I was to say: "My husband is coming. Will you befriend me?"

Instead in my excitement I grasped the young man's arm and cried: "My friend is coming. Will you be my husband?"

It brought down the house. L. K.

Furnishing His Home.

There were four of us out walking one evening and the young man I was with was talking of how he was going to furnish his home when he got one. Naming about all of the things that go in a home, he happened not to mention a piano, and I said, "Why, aren't you going to have a piano?" and he replied, "What would I want with a piano? I cannot play."

Before I thought I said, "Well, I can play."

The other couple had the laugh on me and I was much embarrassed. W. W.

Frying His Chicken.

Among the crowd he was entertaining was a school teacher. During the meal she said: "O, that I could fry chicken for a man as well as this."

He immediately took up the challenge.

They were married, of course, in time for her to prove to him her ability as good purveyor of fried chicken the following spring. H. S.

How to Get a Slow One.

I was staying in the southwest and had known her before going away. We had kept each other company a little before my going away and corresponded regularly. One letter came to me accepting my proposal for her heart and hand. I am sure I never wrote to her asking that she marry me. However, I was ready to get married and arrangements were concluded. We were married immediately upon my return.

I have repeatedly asked her regarding the letter, but she has never changed her plea that she received such a letter and supposed it was from me. We have been married seven years, have a son 5 years of age, and can say we have been and continue to be very happy with each other.

Whoever wrote that letter for me did mighty good work, and it might pay some of the girls to try the stunt on some of the slow ones, for my wife says I was awfully slow. G. A.

How I Won My Mate.

Saved the String.

A wealthy widow's son was among the young men who were my friends. He was considered the "catch" of the town and I felt flattered to find him so attentive to plain little me. He always brought nice boxes of candy whenever he called, and usually gave me the wrapped package as he took his chair near the fire. I absentmindedly rolled the string into a little ball each time and placed it in the library table drawer, folding the paper in a neat way at the same time. After we were married he told me that he was convinced I was thrifty by the way I saved the string. Although he isn't a bit stingy he hates to see anything wasted. So that's how I won my mate. R. C.

A Fish Story.

When I was teaching school in a lonely lumber camp during the spring months, a young man came there to hunt and fish. I was simply daffy over his hunting togs, but he paid little attention to me—a country school teacher.

One day I saw him fishing near my boarding place. I went out and called: "I'm some fisherman myself. Come and get me."

He did and I caught a whopper of a fish—the first and only one I ever did catch. The young man's attention was caught as well as the fish and today we are living in a cozy little flat in the city. B. A. G.

She Took the Agent, Too.

I was busy with my work when a life insurance agent came to the door and asked to be allowed to explain the value of such precaution if we were not insured. I demurred because I did not want to waste time and my hesitation gave him his chance.

After making the matter plain he suddenly asked: "Can't I persuade you to induce your husband to take out a policy?"

The man was young, fine looking, and a good talker, hence my listening when I did not intend to. But this question was one too many for me and I laughed heartily, saying: "Only one thing stops me. I can't do an impossibility—I have no husband, and you must get me one if I am to boost your business."

The agent blushed, stammered, and apologized, then we discussed various questions, coming back to insurance, in which I invested, taking out an endowment policy as he recommended.

We enjoyed the preliminaries so much he asked to be allowed to call, and, learning through a friend of his sterling qualities, I grew to love him, while his was love at first sight, so when he asked the great question I was ready with my yes, and today we are one of the happy couples that are beyond the divorce courts. L. A.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Corns Come Off Like Banana Peel

Wonderful, Simple "Gets-It" Never Fails to Remove Any Corn Easily.

Parents Should Know This Splendid Remedy

Simple Laxative Compound Helps to Correct Constipation in Children.

MARIE GAFF

With all children there are times when the bowels fail to act naturally and it becomes necessary for the parents to administer a remedy. Cathartics and purgatives should never be used, as these agents afford only temporary relief, while their violent action shocks the system unduly. Mrs. Eva F. Gaff, 517 10th St., Washington, D. C., says that her little girl, Marie, had been subject to constipation, and that she found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin the best remedy because of its mildness, and now always keeps a bottle of it in the house.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of simple laxative herbs, free from opiates or narcotic drugs of any kind, and is an ideal remedy for children because of its mild action and positive effect. Its use tends to strengthen the impaired bowel action and restore normal regularity.

It is important that parents should know of a dependable remedy with no unpleasant after effects, griping or strain. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin costs only fifty cents a bottle and can be procured at any drug store. To obtain a trial bottle, free of charge, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for whom this advertisement is published.

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

SMART STYLES FOR THE WARM WEATHER

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers

No. 1299—Dress in guimpe style for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 5½ yards of material 36 inches wide or 5 yards 44 for the overblouse and skirt and 2¾ yards 36 or 44 inches wide for the underblouse or guimpe.

No. 1,300—Blouse with plain or puffed sleeves, 34 to 42 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 2⅝ yards of material 36 or 44 inches wide to make of one material throughout; 2 yards of figured material 36 inches wide or 1⅝ yards 44, with 1¼ yards of plain material 36 or 44 inches wide to make as shown in the front view.

No. 1,301—Shirred skirt with applied box plaits, 24 to 32 waist. For the medium size will be needed 6¼ yards of material 36 inches wide, or 5½ yards 44 inches wide to make of one material; 5 yards 36 or 44 inches wide, with 1¼ yards 44 inches wide for the plaits to make as shown in the front view.

THE designs offered in pattern form today will suit the different needs of a great many women. They might be a welcome addition to the bridal outfit of the June bride and would suit a dozen different occasions in the life of the average woman.

Their keynote is simplicity, as is the keynote of the most expensive French creations of the season. As for their color, never was there possible a greater variety than right now, despite all the threatened alarms of dye shortage. There is not the least excuse for monotony of tints.

Gray is one of the favored tones. Gray combined with military blue is an extremely smart combination. Then plaids are to be immensely popular in the soft pastel shades, as well as in the brilliant hues. Rose and bright blue are also much exploited and black and white as well as sulphur yellow are in great demand. Then, too, there is a new peacock blue which is going to prove becoming to many types of women.

Figured foulard silk is always pretty for summer wear. Large printed motifs on satin backgrounds are extremely effective. White taffeta is pretty for dressy wear. Organdy, while not common this season, is among the most delightful of summer materials. Italian cloth or silk is handsome for sports garments and is one of the most popular of summer wash materials.

Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

She Was Naturally "Flirty."

The nerviest flirt I ever ran across was a widow—a stunning one, to be sure. I learned afterwards that she tried to attract attention from married men just to make their wives jealous. I was slightly acquainted with her, and when she rode by in her runabout I tipped my hat as a matter of courtesy in answer to her flashing smile and bow. Immediately afterwards it happened (?) that she had trouble with her machine and asked me to assist her. Then as a reward, she said, she made me get in beside her and permit her to take me the rest of the way to my office. I hesitated, but fell into the trap. Instead she took me speeding through the streets, taking care to pass my house, where my wife sat on the porch, several times, unheeding my remonstrance and laughing at my evident discomfiture. Afterwards I wished I had jumped at the risk of breaking my neck. For you see I had to explain to my wife, who was and still is skeptical. "'Nuff said!" O. E.

She Kicked Him.

One evening last summer while out for a walk with my chum I overheard a remark made by one of five boys: "Gee, she's classy; watch me get her." He stooped on the sidewalk before me, blocking me from walking further. "I beg your pardon," I said, trying to walk on, but he didn't move. "Get out of the way," repeated, but he refused to move, so I gave him a kick in the face and knocked him flat on the sidewalk. "How do you like that?" I remarked. He was so angry when he saw the pedestrians gazing that he was ready to strike me. Talk about your nerve! P. G.

Varied Activities of Women.

Mrs. Howard Gould is going to establish a school for Chinese girls in Peking, where they will be taught by the Montessori system.

At the present rate the indications are that Pennsylvania will lead all the other states in the number of divorces granted this year.

Miss Elizabeth Rossa, who has been appointed telephone operator in Sing Sing prison, is the first woman ever employed in the men's prison there.

In the practice of the almost forgotten art craft of print inlaying, Miss S. F. Avery, a Maine girl, is at work at the Widener Memorial library at Harvard.

After being elected mayor of Sawtelle, Cal., Mrs. Ellen F. Alldrich refused to accept the office, declaring that she wanted a lowly position so that she could mingle with the people.

Miss Annie Longfellow Thorp, granddaughter of the poet Longfellow, has been declared to be the most beautiful girl at Vassar college. She is also said to be one of the brainiest girls in the college.

Mrs. Margaret C. Goodman, a society woman of Toledo, O., has taken up a vocation that is unusual among women—that of deep sea diving.

The Washington Irving high school for girls in New York City maintains a thorough course in electric household appliances.

The increase in marriages of 1915 over 1914 in Great Britain indicate that there were no less than 80,000 war brides last year.

Hair on the Underarm Removed with El Rado

Women fairly revel in the comfort and cleanliness of hair-free underarms.

El Rado removes hair from the face, neck, or underarms in the same simple way that water removes dirt. The sanitary El Rado first dissolves the hair,—then it is washed off. Much more agreeable and pleasanter than shaving. El Rado is absolutely harmless, and does not increase or coarsen later hair growth. Money-back guarantee. At all toilet counters, 50c and $1.00.

If you prefer, we will gladly fill your order by mail direct, in plain wrapper, if you will write inclosing stamps or coin. Pilgrim Mfg. Co., 14 East 38th Street, New York.

RUPERT HUGHES

This Remarkable Story Starts In Today's Chicago Sunday Tribune

In today's Chicago Tribune—on pages 4 and 5 of the colored section of this issue, begins the greatest story of the year, "GLORIA'S ROMANCE." The motion picture version of this remarkable story, featuring beautiful BILLIE BURKE, has been appearing at the better picture theaters. You have had an opportunity to SEE this delightful story in picture form; now you may READ it in word-pictures sketched by the noted novelists, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes. It is an entirely new story, published in The Chicago Tribune for the first time.

In "Gloria's Romance" you read the romance of a beautiful society girl. You follow eagerly—enchanted—this laughing, girlish Gloria, as she leads you among the festive throngs of exclusive society at gay Palm Beach—midst the silent, wonderful Everglades of Florida; then you whirl away with her back to father's magnificent mansion on New York's famous Riverside Drive. She confides in you her loves and her perplexities; her wonderment at the rapidly unfolding life of charming womanhood upon which she is entering; her impetuous—but read the story! You'll find it in the colored section of today's Sunday Tribune.

At the tremendous cost of nearly a million dollars "Gloria's Romance" has been "filmed" by the celebrated producer, George Kleine. Winsome Gloria is charmingly portrayed by adorable MISS BILLIE BURKE, the star supreme, supported by a brilliant company headed by Henry Kolker. "Gloria's Romance" is the most costly, most elaborate motion picture novel ever presented. Without consideration of cost, the greatest factors in literary, theatrical and motion picture endeavor have been combined to give you something exceptional in photographic art. See this artistic photo-drama at the better theatres.

These are the factors that make this the year's greatest motion picture novel. The star, Miss Billie Burke; the all-star supporting cast, headed by Henry Kolker; the authors, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes; the producer, George Kleine. This, then, is a literary treat of unusual merit. See the motion pictures at the better theatres. Read the story appearing serially—beginning today—in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. Turn NOW to pages 4 and 5 of the colored section and start this fascinating story.

Her Engagement to Thomas Jerrold Bryce Has Been Announced.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Helen Glenn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs John Glenn, 1131 Forest avenue, Evanston, to Thomas Jarrold Bryce of Chicago, the son of Mrs. Thomas J. Bryce of Columbus, O. The date of the wedding has not been set.

First of June Brides Plan to Wed This Week.

By Mme. X.

DEAR, dear! This is such a strenuous moment in the country's most strenuous community! On one hand Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and her forces are calling us all to march on June 7 for a cause at least seventy-five years old—votes for women. On the other her sister, Mrs. "Sam" Chase, is sounding the bugle for women to march on June 3 for a cause a few months old—national preparedness.

Then Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, and others are summoning the clans—local and visiting—to the convention ball in the Harold McCormick gardens on June 6, while Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Allen Haines, and the rest of the Casino entertainment committee are rounding up the community to the opening night next Friday of the famous Casino "movies," when that much talked of drama, "Cousin Jim," will have its "premiere" at the Strand theater.

Nor does marrying and giving in marriage take a back seat in these fervid times. Two notable weddings will occupy society's attention within the next week. Two of Chicago's most attractive and popular girls will forsake the ranks of the young and carefree spinsters and adventure on the more complicated paths of matrimony.

Miss Keith First June Bride.

On Thursday next—June 1, that is—Miss Katherine Keith and David Adler Jr. will be married at St. Paul's Universalist church. Mr. and Mrs. Edson Keith, the bride's parents, are occupying, temporarily, Mrs. C. M. Ely's charming apartment at 936 Lake Shore drive, where the wedding reception will be held after the church ceremony.

Mrs. Ely will appear as a sort of presiding genius of the Adlers' early married life, as, besides being married from her town residence, they are, after their wedding trip, going to occupy the lodge of her new place on the boundaries of Lake Bluff and Lake Forest. This is an excellent opportunity to try "love in a cottage." Mrs. Ely has fitted up for herself this lodge in quaint, adorable Dutch style, and she plans to make it her country headquarters until the new, main house is ready for occupancy. As Mr. Adler is her architect, this domiciling of the "newly weds" in her cottage during her summer sojourn at Biddeford Pool is a happy arrangement from all points of view, as it enables Mr. Adler to superintend personally every inch of the building of the new abode. For Mrs. Ely it is like sitting next your doctor at meals.

Billings-Nichols Nuptials.

Two days later than the Keith-Adler nuptials, June 3, the marriage of Miss Margaret Billings to George Nichols will be celebrated in the beautiful Gothic nave of the Fourth Presbyterian church at 4 o'clock. This impressive "dissenting chapel," as a devout Church of Englander called it, is a perfect setting for such a function. Its harmonious background of stone and carved wood, its lofty pillars, its richly tinted beams, and glowing stained glaze windows make it one of the most imposing churches in the west. If its acoustic properties came up to its artistic standard it would be a near perfect religious shrine. But they don't.

The south side guests to the Billings-Nichols wedding will have to make a wide detour to reach their north side destination, for that afternoon the loop district will be entirely given over to the huge preparedness parade. One of the organizers of the parade telephoned to the Billings residence to get Dr. Billings, the bride-to-be's father, to head the phalanx of physicians in the fine of march. The organizer got Miss Billings on the telephone and told her his errand.

"My father can't do it," said Miss Billings.

"Why not?" inquired the organizer with rapidly developing indignation.

"He's got an engagement that afternoon," was her response.

"Not one he can't break, is it?" well restrained ire in the tone.

"Yes; I'm going to be married that day."

"Well, can't you postpone your wedding? Are the invitations out?"

"I can't. They are."

So Dr. Frank Billings will not be in the parade.

Feature of Suffrage Parade.

It is a curious combination of circumstances that brings the two Ayer sisters, Mrs. Fairbank and Mrs. Chase, out at the same moment as brigadier generals enlisting marchers in parades that are almost simultaneous.

The suffrage parade was first on the field in the matter of organizing and choosing of date. The cause its advocates are seeking to advance is not a popular one, but it is one that has been slowly developing strength for seventy-five years. Those who believe in the justice of it are as firm in their conviction as were the early Christians in their belief in the teachings of Christ.

One of the striking features of the suffrage parade will be "the wedge," an imposing arrangement of stunning looking women with Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor at the head of the wedge. Behind her will be Mrs. Ray Atherton and Mrs. Laurence Armour. Behind these two, three others; behind the three, four others, and so on. Mrs. George Higginson, Mrs. Morris Johnson, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Austin Niblack, Miss Cudahy, Miss Herrick, Miss Newberry, and Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis will be others in this wedge.

Those who are organizing the big preparedness parade are backing a fine and inspiring idea, one that cannot fail to appeal strongly to every truly patriotic American. But do all the thousands who are eager to march in this parade mean the same kind of preparedness? And, if so, what kind? And why has the desire for it sprung up in a night? Why was it not a national issue years ago?

There are unquestionably two motives behind the organization of this parade; the first is a sincere and ardent belief in the necessity of rousing the national legislators at Washington to the needs of the nation; and the other is the almost equally burning desire to outdo New York. The latter is a product of our youthful, unripe state. Let us try to confine ourselves to patriotism and not mix it up with local pride. All our local pride has not enabled us to abolish the Rush street bridge crossing or to make Grant park a pleasant place for the eye to rest on or the feet to wander through.

The Casino "movies" next Friday night at the Strand promise to be the occasion for an enormous number of before the show dinners. Among those entertaining guests that night will be the Roy McWilliamsea, Arthur Meekers, Charles Strobels, Robert Dunhams, Laurence Armours, C. H. McCormicks, Kenneth Goodmans, Charles B. Pikes, A. S. Peabodys, William McCormick Blairs, Leroy Fullers, Hamilton McCormicks, Robert Hall McCormicks, William R. Linns, and Dorr Bradleys.

There will be an amusing prologue to the show in the shape of photographs, stationary and moving, by George H. High, which he took of the Casino "movie" drama as it was in the making, photographing the creator of the play's action, C. W. Hitchcock, as he was drilling his amateur troupe, and the actors as they were training. There will also be camera studies of Casino skaters, professionals and amateurs, including many distinguished beginners in the initial contortions of learning the art, which scenes will doubtless give much joy to all but the victims of the photographic lens.

The sale of the seats shows that the buyers are not constant "movie fans." They have gobbled up the more costly downstairs seats and not been partial to the balcony. Now any real movie devotee knows that in most movie theaters the upstairs seats are the most desirable and the most expensive.

The proceeds of this first night's performance are to be handed over to the Casino governors, who will in turn give them to the American Red Cross, to be used for American needs.

Convention Ball a Hindoo Fete.

The convention ball on June 6, in the gardens of the Harold McCormick place is to be a Hindoo fete. Under the direction of Mrs. John Carpenter and her committee there will be a big yellow tent for supper and another one for dancing and music. In case the night is a fine one this second tent may cede its place to a canopy of stars. Other smaller tents or pavilions will be in the corners of the garden. The lights will glow, not through the conventional Chinese lanterns, but through what will look like big, translucent oranges.

The music, which is in the hands of Mrs. Charles Hamill and her committee, will not be the usual strident brass band, but will consist of the softer stringed instruments and the inspiring burble of the now so popular saxophones. This will fill the night with melody, not clamor, and be more suitable to the scene.

The largest dinner given that evening before the ball will be Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick's. She is to entertain a hundred women at her residence in East Huron street. Many of her guests will be visiting suffragists and wives of convention delegates and Republican leaders. It will be a unique and interesting affair. Women are learning the art of dining together and giving to such dinners the same significance and brilliancy as inheres to men's dinners.

Other dinner hosts that evening will be Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Cochran, and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cramer.

On June 7 will be held a reception at the Congress hotel for the delegates to the Progressive national convention, which Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, George Porter, and other prominent Progressives are getting up.

On June 8 Mrs. George Higginson gives a dinner for Maj. Henry Higginson of Boston and her other house guests.

That same evening Mrs. Henry Dibblee gives a dinner at the Saddle and Cycle club.

Among those who have rented their apartments to convention visitors are Mrs. E. K. Rogers of 1223 North State street, whose tenants will be the August Belmonts of New York, and Mrs. George Clarke of East Division street, who is setting her flat in order for Senator and Mrs. James Wadsworth of New York state.

The Cornelius Vanderbilts will not be the guests of the R. T. Crane Jr.'s, as at first announced. The Cranes won't be here for the convention, and the Vanderbilts will be with a large party of friends at the Blackstone.

New Work for English Women.

Meanwhile from across the water come descriptions of different scenes from preparations for our energetic festivities. Old England, as belated as we in her "preparedness" policy, is struggling with the problem of how to supply the places in the factory and at the plow of the men called to the trenches.

We have heard many stories of the gently nurtured women who have gone to work as day laborers in the munitions works, but up to now not so much about the way women have tackled the agricultural question.

At a meeting in one of the English shires, where our whilom fellow citizen, Amyas Northcote, presided with his fair young daughter, Cecilia, aged 21, on the platform by his side, the question of getting women into the fields to till and sow and reap was urged. A burly, churlish old farmer, with true British conservatism, violently opposed the idea, saying that women were not fit to take the places of men in that kind of work. Pointing a finger to Miss Cecilia Northcote, who had been earnestly canvassing the countryside for women volunteers for agricultural labor, he challenged her to come and do a week's sheep herding for him. She immediately accepted the challenge and started in two days afterward, inadequately prepared as to costume, but valiant of soul.

The weather was as vile as possible that whole week; day after day of rain, with consequent heavy mud underfoot. Miss Northcote began her work with the handicap of a bad cold, but, though wet to the skin every day, she carried out her contract.

Daily she arose before 6 o'clock, bicycled three miles to the field of her labors, where she took entire charge of 104 fat sheep till evening. Her work included feeding the sheep, which meant carrying heavy bags of barley across the fields, and, as the account says: "Shaking in between forty and sixty heavy 'hirdies' every day." [a quarter to the one who first tells us what a 'hirdie' is].

In spite of cold, exposure, and strain, she came through triumphant and gave her week's wages—15 shillings—to the British Red Cross.

This might be cited as an instance of British grit were it not that she is half American, her mother having been Miss Helen Dudley, a sister of Peter and James Dudley of Chicago, which makes the plucky Miss Cecilia Northcote a cousin of the clever and charming Mrs. John Root. She is on the paternal side a member of the well known Northcote family and a granddaughter of the late Lord Iddesleigh.

Her brother, Dudley Northcote, enlisted at the beginning of the war. Because of previous training he had had when he expected to go into the navy [which ill health prevented] he was immediately made a lieutenant and has been set to drilling British volunteers. He has been eager to go to the front and pulling every string to get there, so perhaps he will arrive in time for the big summer campaign impending.

Selecting a Suffrage Slogan.

To go back to the suffrage parade a moment, the slogan contest has brought forth over 800 replies. Mrs. Paul Welling and Mrs. James Field have had the matter of selecting from these a hundred to be submitted to the judges for the winner of the $25 offered.

Among these echoes of which have come our way are:

Bugle call!
Votes for all.
All the rage—
Suff-rage.
* *
This is leap year!
We propose to vote.

The recruiting station organized at 1450 North Clark street by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, Mrs. Harriet Herrick, Mrs. Sweeney, and others is increasingly active. They sent out beflagged automobiles soliciting recruits for the parade from the western precincts of the Twenty-first ward on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday noons and afternoons. They held last night a successful rally and are forming an efficient organization whose usefulness will not end with the parade. In fact, it may be said to have only just begun.

A striking and distinguished Chicago quintet, four bachelors and one benedick, are recuperating at French Lick Springs so as to be ready for the extra social service expected of them convention week. They are William B. McCluer, William H. Comstock, Frank Cramer, Walter Chandler, and Bernard Rogers. There are empty places at many a bridge table and on the Chicago Golf club links during their absence. They will return June 5.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Woman's Party Plans to Hold First Convention

By Hazel Whitaker.

A WOMAN'S political party is no longer a dream; it's nearing actuality just as fast as the calendar approaches June 5. At least part of Susan B. Anthony's vision of 1878 is to be fulfilled, and it is the hope of the women that the years of watchful waiting are soon to end.

The Congressional union came into being in 1913, when the Democratic party happened to be in control, so it was to this party that these women first appealed. But it wasn't until last fall, after the San Francisco convention of women voters, that the matter was treated at all seriously. Since then the signs have been a bit more propitious, due in a large measure to the constant lobbying that has been carried on by the women. Now the unionists feel that all that is needed to finally break the attitude is a demonstration of their power, such as has never before been attempted. Hence the woman's party and the convention here June 5, 6, and 7.

Every state is now organized, and the women who have the vote in the twelve western states may soon use their power towards obtaining the same privilege for their eastern sisters, for they control one-fifth of the electoral vote. Old party lines are being thrown to the winds; as one instance, Mrs. Margaret Zane Cherdron, the only woman to have ever cast an electoral vote for president, a Republican, too, has renounced her party allegiance and refused to be a representative to the national convention here, to work for the woman's party, which has but the one plank—suffrage by national amendment. From Arizona already thirty women have announced their intention of coming to aid in this demonstration.

Congressional union headquarters, at 12 East Washington street, are just about the busiest, buzziest place in Chicago at present. What with a telegram from Mrs. Phoebe Hearst saying she would defray all of the three day convention expenses at the Blackstone theater, to the news that a telegraph company would install wires in the theater for convention news, just the same as it is doing for the men, things begin to look very real!

The thirty meetings a day campaign, under the direction of Miss Mabel Vernon, a national organizer, is doing educational work at every possible turn. The partial program for the coming week covers meetings at the Columbia School of Music, a parlor meeting at the home of Dr. Mary A. Girard, 618 Hyde Park boulevard; one at the Eleanor club; the Third Ward Woman's Republican club, at the Woodlawn Baptist church; Mrs. Avery Coonley's Riverside home, Chicago Single Tax league, Hungarian Thalia club, and at the Garfield park refectory.

Miss Mabel Vernon, Mrs. W. D. Ascough, Mrs. Albert C. Muhse, Miss Doris Stevens, Miss Margaret Whittemore, Miss Elsie Hill, Miss Lucile Dunham, and Miss Gertrude Beasley are some of the well informed speakers who surely do carry conviction in their words.

The convention credentials committee convenes next Sunday, in the Michigan Boulevard building, and continues at the Blackstone on Monday, when the convention formally opens. Speakers for the opening meeting in the afternoon will be Mrs. Ida F. Mackrille of Sacramento, Cal., a member of the national advisory council; Miss Lucy Burns, vice chairman of the national executive committee, and Miss Maude Younger, who has been one of the most active lobbyists at Washington this last winter as well as secretary of the national advisory council. An evening reception closes this day's program.

On Tuesday the women from the voting states will be given an opportunity to tell the others just how much political strength the vote has given them. On Wednesday a noon luncheon at the Auditorium starts off the big day, and the evening will be turned over to the men. The "big stars" from each of the political parties will have a chance to tell what his party will do for the cause of the women. And thus, amid continuous band music, the Woman's party will be launched.

Here are a few of the many prominent women who will be present:

From the west: Mrs. C. S. Haire of Montana, Mrs. Dora Phelps Buell, Mrs. Leonard E. Curtis; and Dr. Carolyn Spencer of Colorado, Mrs. J. A. Keating of Oregon, Mrs. Lilla Day Monroe of Kansas, Miss Anne Martin of Nevada, Mrs. Margaret Zane Cherdron of Utah, Mrs. Sara Bard Field, Mrs. Elizabeth Gerberding, Miss Maude Younger, and Mrs. William Kent of California, and Miss Marie Ernst of Oregon.

From the east: Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, Mrs. Robert Adamson, Mrs. Emanuel Einstein, Miss Marion May, Mrs. Charles R. Beard, and Miss A. Evelyn Newman of New York.

From Washington a number of notable women will come, including Mrs. Harvey Wiley, wife of the pure food expert; Mrs. John Jay White, Mrs. Gilson Gardner, Mrs. Boughton Wood.

Miss Doris Stevens

Miss Doris Stevens is said to be the most beautiful woman in the Congressional Union. Her home is in Omaha, Neb., but she has been in the union's organization work in New York. Recently she became a citizen of Kansas in order to vote. She will be one of the leading women of the convention. Miss Ruth Astor Noyes of Washington, D. C., was formerly a Chicago girl. She is one of the organizers for the union and will attend the Woman's party convention. Mrs. Bertram Sippy is a Chicagoan and state chairman of the Illinois branch.

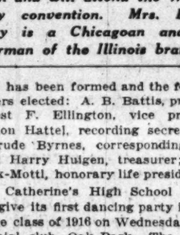
Pillsbury's Bran Apple Pie



Now you can enjoy all the delights of the most tempting Apple Pie with none of the usual penalties. People who have been barred from eating pie for years, because of weak digestions, now eat pie made with Pillsbury's Health Bran, with no bad effects at all.

Use This Recipe:

BRAN APPLE PIE

2 cups Pillsbury's Health Bran, 2 cups Pillsbury's Best Flour, 1½ cups butter (or half lard and half butter), 1 cup cold water, 1 level teaspoon baking powder, ½ level teaspoon salt. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together, then add the bran. Rub in half the shortening with the fingers. Add water little by little, stirring it in with the knife. Knead into a firm dough, roll out to a thin sheet and place small pieces of butter close together all over it. Then fold up and roll out again as before, repeating the process until the butter is thoroughly assimilated by the dough. Prepare the apples the same as for ordinary apple pie. Brush top of pie over with cream before baking.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME.

Newport Brings Out New Idea for Raffle Prize.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—I leave it to you, if you were getting up something for charity and were simply put to it to think of some "stunt" which would add funds to the budget, would it in your wildest dreams occur to you, even if you lived very well, indeed, to offer a day's entertainment at your home as a bait for people to bid for? Are you complacent enough about your position in this world to think the offer of a day at your house would bring in a large sum?

Well, here is a brand new idea in raffling. The people of Newport—some of them—have that complacency which, I take it, all modest Chicagoans lack. One of the features of a forthcoming charity event is to be the raffling of chances for a day's entertainment at one of the most exclusive cottages of the summer colony. Just who the hostess is to be has not yet been divulged. But the charity is the Allied Bazaar, which is to give its public entertainment on June 8. The committee is now giving daily teas in the committee rooms at the Biltmore, where it discusses plans.

Mrs. Philip Lydig has contributed fifty hats, bought of a Fifth avenue milliner, to be sold to the highest bidder at the fête.

Peacocks Enliven Garden Party.

The New York Zoölogical society gave a party last week and two of the peacocks took it upon themselves to act as hosts. They seemed to feel responsible for the hospitality of the occasion and they managed to make out of a modest and retiring entertainment just such a conspicuous affair as you would expect a peacock to give. They strutted in and out among the guests on the terrace and when things seemed to be getting a little quiet one of them broke up the playing of the band by taking his stand behind the leader and apparently taunting him with the plainness of his uniform. The peacock spread his own feathers and with every note played by the orchestra uttered a discordant squawk, squawk.

All of the guests who were merely members of the four hundred tried to act exactly as they have acted at every other party throughout their lives, i. e., as if nothing had happened to which they had not always been accustomed. However, the trombone player laughed until his instrument fell out of joint and the music had to be suspended while the peacock was led away from his part toward making the party a success.

Mrs. Philip Rhinelander II

The recent marriage of Miss Lebrun Parsons, one of the prettiest of the young women in New York's smart set, to Philip Rhinelander II., member of one of the wealthiest families in New York, as an event was a great disappointment to many New York social wedding fans—in that they were not invited to it.

One of the largest assemblages came together that has ever attended this annual garden party, and they pronounced it the most unusual they had ever come to. Among the guests and the reception committee were Mrs. Mitchel, wife of the mayor; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Edgerton L. Winthrop, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Miss Anne T. Morgan, Miss Elisabeth Marbury, and Mrs. John R. Drexel.

The New York Zoölogical society has long been a pet interest of the smart set. It got to be "the thing" years ago, when it was fostered by the grandparents of some of those whose names now appear in its list of members.

Russia Buys Widener Yacht.

If you've got a yacht to dispose of, the thing to do is to sell it to the Russian government. Every one is doing it. I myself went to Russia by way of the north pole and was preceded by something called an "ice breaker," which was nothing more nor less than the palatially luxurious yacht of the Duke of Connaught. When we put in at the until recently undistinguished Russian port of Archangel, the British captain took me all over the delicately furnished and beautiful plaything and showed me his own quarters, with bath and done in pale gray, which had been the private cabin of the Princess Patricia. If I had set about to picture how an ice breaker looked, I should of course have got my image incorrect in almost every particular. But I could scarcely have thought up anything so inappropriate to the sound of the word as this million dollar yacht of the governor genegal of Canada.

The latest little purchase of the Russian government is the steam yacht Josephine, which has been the property of the estate of the late P. A. B. Widener. This magnificent toy of one of our deceased millionaires is going to be used as a scout cruiser in the Baltic. There are distinguished ones of our financiers who only wish that it would run between Raumo, on the Finnish coast, and Stockholm, in Sweden, with staterooms on it for sale at any price. For although Russia seems to go in for these little luxuries for war purposes, it provides extremely indifferent passenger accommodations to the rich and great who are so suddenly and unexpectedly called into this unaccustomed path of travel.

The Josephine cost the Russian government something like $500,000. It has been fast at East Columbia avenue pier on the Delaware river, at Philadelphia, ever since the Titanic went down. George Widener and his son, Harry, lost their lives on that occasion. P. A. B. Widener declared after that tragedy that he would never again set foot on the Josephine or on any other vessel. He kept his word and members of his family likewise abided by it.

The Josephine will probably experience quite a shock when it takes up its new duties. The contrast between the life it will lead "at the front" and the one it led cruising with fashionable parties through unharassed waters will be notable. However, I can think of no body of men better able to enjoy the comfort and luxury of the Widener yacht than the Russian naval officers, and if only the Josephine can be sneaked past the German war vessels at the entrance into the Baltic we may be sure it will be appreciated; but has any one thought to mention how it is to get there? The vessel is equipped with submarine signals, wireless, and powerful engines and is furnished in the most expensive style.

Joining the Summer Colonies.

Mrs. Marcus A. Hanna left the Plaza hotel last week for Seal Harbor, Me., where she will spend the summer.

Junius S. Morgan, son of J. Pierpont Morgan, will join the summer colony at Glen Cove, L. I., having rented for the season the house of William H. Potter of New York, near East Island, the Morgan summer home. Mr. Morgan and his bride, who was Miss Louise Converse of Boston will pass the summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt were planning to go to France the last part of this month, but have now postponed their excursion until the latter part of June. This is not the first time they have deferred it. They expected to go some time ago, but Mrs. Vanderbilt, as you know, has not been well.

As I think I mentioned, she was operated on recently, and her friends now whisper that she has not done overly well. The family has preserved the utmost secrecy about the affair from the start. More or less intimate acquaintances do not know what the operation was for. Everybody said at first that she had come out of it superbly well, and now they say it was not wholly successful. Mrs. Vanderbilt had been dieting to reduce her weight, and it is rumored that she thus undermined her resistance lamentably.

However this may be, it is certain that she accomplished her original purpose in dieting, if this was to acquire the figure of a girl. I chatted with her for quite a while a few days before she was taken sick. As we stood facing each other at a little tea I thought how marvelously slender she was. She is a tall woman, and if you had looked at her that day from the shoulders down you would have said she was 18.

She had on a clinging plum colored broadcloth suit, with a fur trimmed Russian coat that reached almost to the hem of her skirt, and she was indeed graceful in it. But she did not look well. Her slender neck was crossed with a million little lines, and she kept toying with her long pearl necklace nervously.

Redfern Corsets

Back Lace and Front Lace

$3.00 to $25.00

BEAUTY is the Bride's ideal. "What so rare as a day in June?" says the poet, and the bride has chosen June as her own particular month. So has she chosen Redfern—beautiful in itself—to enhance her charm and beautify her trousseau. For the foundation must be correct, and a Redfern Corset is the correct foundation. In Back Lace and in Front Lace, and in a wealth of variety from which to choose for the wedding, for the "going away" suit, and for the leisure of the honeymoon.

"Q" for Quality

SIEGEL COOPER & COMPANY says

There is one big store event that we are more proud of than any other we have created in our entire 29 years of pulic service. It is an event, too, which many stores have copied and which some store in every American city should copy. We call it our

"Progressive Sale"

If the spirit of America could be summed up in one word that word would be spelled "Opportunity." In Europe, in Asia, in the Orient, a peasant, for the most part, will always be a peasant and an overlord will always be an overlord. A laborer must always labor and his children must labor after him.

Here, we never know what tomorrow will bring forth or even what today has already brought forth. The janitor who tends our furnace probably owns our flats. Yesterday's newsboy is today's Alderman, and his son will probably be our tomorrow's "Leisure Class."

That is why our "Progressive Sale" means so much to those who are giving their lives to the business of keeping store. It is their opportunity—their chance to show their ability—their opening through which they may pass to bigger salaries and finer jobs.

Come and See a Store Run By Its Employes

For this Progressive Sale is run entirely by our employes. It is managed by them from top to bottom. Even the prices at which the merchandise shall be sold are marked by them. They are responsible for the volume of the business, for the satisfaction of the customer, for every detail. And this responsibility invariably opens the way to bigger and better things for many of them. In fact, State Street has for many years called us "The Training School or Merchants."

Advance Sale Begins Tomorrow

This great Progressive Sale will start a week from tomorrow. The store forces have been organized. Captains have been appointed. The merchandise is pouring in and being marked as rapidly as possible. But we want this to be a perfect sale, and it will take a week for everybody to be ready for the big event.

In the meantime however, we can not very well close a store like this for a week while the preparations are going on. And so we are allowing advance selections and purchases to be made just as these goods come on to the floor.

Our stock rooms are filled with merchandise. The goods are being marked at dangerously low prices and sent down stairs as rapidly as possible. And, judging by the way they are marking these goods, many a store captain will have established his reputation—before the REAL sale ever begins.

Some of Their Offerings

On the advertising desk we find that one captain is offering Women's Coats in both plain and sport models for $12.50 that we have been selling at from $15.50 to $22.50 and some girls' coats both cloth and silk for $4.85 that we have been selling at from $6.00 to $8.50. Another captain is selling women's union suits at 39c where our regular values have been 65c and 75c. And we find such other values as these:

Men's Mercerized Lisle Hose, 15c. Men's Shirts and Drawers, at 19c.
Women's $1.25 Envelope Chemises, at 66c.
Women's $3.50 to $5 Two-tone Shoes, at $2.79.
Men's Negligee Shirts, at 39c. Women's $1 Gloves, at 78c.
Hand Made Irish Lace Medallions, at 25c dozen, each, 2½c.
8 spools of J. J. Clark's Machine Thread for 14c.
$1.20 Voile Curtains, pair, 79c. $1.50 to $3 Corsets, at 98c.
Women's $1 Accordion Silk Hosiery, at 48c.
$40 to $60 Indestructo Dress Trunks for $25.
$27.50 Wilton Velvet 9x12 rugs for $21.40.
$10 American China Dinner Sets, 100 pieces, for $6.95.
$3.50 Clothes Wringers for $2.19. Women's $25 to $30 Suits for $13.50.
Misses' and Juniors' $20 to $25 Suits for $11.50.
$6.50 to $10 Silk Skirts, at $4.90. $2 House Dresses for $1.50.
Silk Dresses for small women and growing girls, $15 to $20 values, for $9.50.
And 60c pound boxes of chocolate covered almonds for 43c.

So you see there is a tremendous lot of good merchandise already coming through a week before the sale really begins. And you are welcome to it beginning tomorrow morning. This is an event which everybody who thinks of America first and who believes in the American idea should patronize.

Four Famous HOTELS That Invite Transient Guests

It is a mistake to feel that residential hotels do not welcome transient guests. Each one of the four hotels named invites your patronage no matter how short your visit may be.

Accommodations may be secured on either the American or European plan; service is on the same scale of luxurious comfort provided by downtown hotels, with a corresponding scale of prices.

But instead of the noise and distracting confusion of the loop, these hotels are surrounded by palatial homes, are immediately adjacent to the Lake shore, south parks and boulevards. Instead of the "solitude and crowds" that is so depressing, their atmosphere is pleasantly social and homelike. You won't feel like a stranger in Chicago if you stop at a home hotel, among home people, in a beautiful neighborhood of homes.

News of the Religious World

Sunday Evening Club Closes Its Ninth Season.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Sunday Evening club will close its ninth season this evening at Orchestra hall. Services will be resumed on Oct. 1. The speaker tonight will be the Rev. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, president of Andover Theological seminary, affiliated with Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass. His subject will be, "Using Our Time."

Memorial day will be recognized in a special manner. W. E. Minshall, a veteran of the civil war, will recite the Scripture lesson from memory. He is blind, having lost one eye in the war and the sight of the other eye later. He was captured once, wounded three times, and is one of the few surviving members of the famous Iron Brigade.

Several posts of the Grand Army of the Republic have accepted invitations to be present. The officers of the state G. A. R., recently elected at the state encampment in Decatur, will be special guests of honor. The music, led by O. Gordon Erickson, and the organ recital by Mrs. Catherine Ward-Howard, will be of a patriotic character.

St. James Evangelical Lutheran Church

Archbishop Mundelein will dedicate the new St. Matthias Roman Catholic church, located at North Claremont avenue and Ainslie street, at 10:30 o'clock this morning. A parade of the various parish societies and organizations from the neighboring parishes will meet the archbishop at Montrose and Lincoln avenues.

The new church is an imposing building, 185 feet in length and having a transept of 88 feet, and the main body has a width of 64 feet. The front is flanked on the west by a tower which rises to a height of 165 feet, and on the east there is a baptismal chapel. Niches on both sides of the main nave give room for confessionals and shrines, while the absence of columns gives an unobstructed view to every worshiper in the church. The exterior is constructed of dark red pressed brick with cut stone trimmings and slate roof. The seating capacity of the church is 850.

The Rev. D. M. Thiele is pastor.

On Tuesday Archbishop Mundelein will dedicate the new Blue Island hospital at 10 o'clock. At 4 o'clock he will officiate at confirmation services at Oak Forest.

A union meeting of the ministers' associations will be held in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets, tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, president of Andover Theological seminary, will speak on the subject, "Religious Leadership in America After the War."

The Chicago Association of Baptist Churches will meet next Thursday and Friday in the La Salle Avenue Baptist church, 1219 North La Salle avenue. There will be afternoon and evening sessions only. The opening sermon will be preached at 2 o'clock on Thursday by the Rev. F. E. R. Miller of Elgin. The women's hour will be at 2 o'clock on Friday. A mothers' and daughters' banquet will be held at 6 o'clock in the Grace Methodist Episcopal church, North La Salle and Locust streets. Among the speakers at the various sessions from outside of Chicago will be Mrs. Frank Bell, Dallas, Texas; the Rev. F. W. Paddleford, Boston; Miss Anna Martin, Ningpo, China; the Rev. John Gordon, Philadelphia, and the Rev. Frederick L. Anderson of Boston. Henry R. Clissold of the Morgan Park church is the moderator of the association.

The elevation of the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church to the episcopacy will necessitate the election of a new president of the Dry Chicago federation, which position Bishop Mitchell held. Announcement of plans will be made by the dry federation at a luncheon to be held at Marshall Field's tearoom next Tuesday at 12:30. The dry Chicago federation is now located at 112 North La Salle street.

One of the plans of the Congregationalists which is of interest to several denominations is the establishment of the Chicago Christian institute in Fisk hall, the former home of the Chicago (Congregational) Theological seminary, at 19 North Ashland avenue. The seminary has been removed to the campus of the University of Chicago and will be devoted to the training for the ministry of men who have already received a college education. The institute is to be devoted to the training of young men who have not had the advantages of the college education. Representatives of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, and other denominations met in the conference when the plans were made. The organization is such that it will be possible to accept students from other denominations if it is so desired. One of the most useful tasks to be accomplished is the training in English of theological students who expect to work among foreign populations but who need fluency in English as well as in the language in which they will preach.

For more than a year the nickels for soldiers' Testaments have been coming to the headquarters of the World's Sunday School association, in the Metropolitan Tower, New York. Four hundred and fifty thousand Testaments have been provided for, but more than a million are needed. The largest individual gift has been $300, sent by an unknown friend. Three thousand, five hundred Testaments have been printed and distributed in Europe as the result of the effort of J. P. Hogan of Nova Scotia, who made a house to house canvass over a large part of the province to secure the $175 needed for the purchase.

The federal council of Churches of Christ in America has issued a nation wide appeal to the churches of all denominations to take an offering today for the relief of those who are suffering because of the European war. The appeal states that while America is the richest of the nations and has made instead of lost money by the war, it has given less for relief than nations which are carrying the additional burdens of the war. The statement reads:

The Belgian minister of finance stated recently that the United States has given $7,000,000 directly to Belgium. In other words, only 7 cents per capita; while New Zealand, bearing its own war burdens, has given $1.25 per capita to Belgian relief. England, staggering under the war load, has received and cared for thousands of Belgian refugees and given millions of pounds beside. It was thought that the United States, the only great nation untouched by the war, might furnish the food supplies for Belgium, but the commission was obliged to ask food from the whole world to save Belgium from starvation. It must be remembered also that the gifts to Belgium from our country include the large contributions from our philanthropic foundations, so that the total of popular contributions is smaller than it appears.

It is hoped that a great popular contribution in which millions will share will now be taken by the churches.

The Hyde Park Disciples' church devoted last week to a social service program. Lectures and addresses were given and the church was filled with exhibits of the uplift work carried on in Chicago, by many charities. A unique feature was that in every exhibit some member of the Hyde Park church is employed by the organization whose activities were described. Dr. E. S. Ames, the pastor, lectured one evening on "Mysticism and Social Service," and a home talent play, "Lynngaard & Co." was presented two evenings.

The Disciples, churches in Cook county, numbering twenty-four, will hold their quarterly assembly at the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets, today at 3 o'clock. The speakers will be Mrs. Wallace Payne, superintendent of young people's work of the Christian woman's board of missions, Indianapolis; the Rev. Austin Hunter, pastor of Jackson Boulevard Christian church, and the Rev. C. C. Morrison, editor of the Christian Century. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Christian Missionary society, of which the Rev. W. G. Winn is secretary.

A conference of interchurch organizations is to be held at Atlantic City June 2-5. The societies interested are the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian associations, the International Sunday School association, the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and all similar associations which work among the churches of different denominations. The meeting will be under the direction of the commission on federated movements which was appointed by representatives of the interested organizations last April. There will be a committee on suggestions which will review all plans in which there is overlapping of work among the organizations and also those fields of possible endeavor where there seems to be neglect. It will also consider plans for united campaigns. Fred B. Smith is chairman, the Rev. Roy B. Guild is executive secretary, and James A. Whitmore is field secretary.

The St. James Evangelical Lutheran church, Garfield avenue and Fremont street, of which the Rev. Karl Schmidt is pastor, will lay the corner stone for its new building this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The building will cost $65,000 exclusive of the ground. The Rev. F. Pfotenhauer, president of the Missouri synod, to which the church belongs, will speak in German and the Rev. G. Schuessler, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, will speak in English.

The St. James congregation was organized about 1857. Its founder was the Rev. H. Wunder, D. D., who before his death was for sixty years pastor of the St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, which was the mother of about fifty Lutheran congregations of Chicago. The St. James congregation was the sixth of the synod organized in Chicago.

The corner stone of the old church was laid in 1870. The present pastor has been in charge for the last nineteen years. The Rev. W. Barthing, deceased, served the church for twenty-eight years. He was pastor at the time of the Chicago fire, when the church was used as a shelter and a place for supplying food and clothing to those in need.

In the forty-six years there have been 17,875 baptized, 3,900 couples married, 5,000 confirmed, and 6,842 buried. It is expected that many former parishioners will attend the corner stone ceremonies.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Grayson-Gordon Gotham Wedding Piques Capital.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—What should have been the most interesting event of the week to social Washington, the marriage of Dr. Grayson and Miss Gertrude Gordon, was inconsiderately staged in New York, and Washington, which had been watching the courtship with sympathetic eyes for more than two years, was not even generously invited.

It didn't seem quite fair that a man and a girl who had been so prominent and popular in Washington and so thoroughly identified with Washington society as the president's favorite aid and physician and the girl whom Mrs. Wilson had described as "the ward of her affections," though there was neither blood tie nor legal bond between them, should choose to be married in the metropolis, where both were comparatively unknown.

Until positive announcement of the date was made about ten days before the event many were cherishing visions of a White House wedding, for there have been White House weddings with far less legitimate excuse, and it was rumored that the president and the first lady were urging it.

Washington Girls Disappointed.

As it was, few outside of the presidential party, the President and Mrs. Wilson, the Secretary of War and Mrs. McAdoo, Miss Bones, and the Tumulkys went up. These left Washington on an 8 o'clock train Wednesday morning, being joined in New York by Miss Margaret Wilson, who was there for the biennial meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and, after attending the ceremony at 4 o'clock, returned to Washington the same evening.

There are at least a score of disappointed girls in Washington who might have been of the wedding party, and as many not so keenly disappointed men who feel that they may have escaped the necessity of getting into dress uniform to stand by a brother officer. "What a way to get married!" mourned one of the girls. "No cars, no clothes, no attendants, no 'doings' of any sort, and practically no one there to see that you really were getting married."

Of course the "no clothes" was just a way of putting it. For Dr. Grayson's bride was lovely and as "bridey" as possible in white satin and point lace, when the Rev. William Cox of Philadelphia performed the ceremony. And nobody doubts that she has an entirely adequate trousseau, on which Washington will have plenty of opportunity to pass judgment when they return from their wedding trip. But in a general way the wedding was modeled after that other wedding last December—which also might have been a White House wedding—with which last Wednesday's principals were so intimately connected. There were as few guests as possible—only about 100—and no attendants, not even a best man.

Running True to Form.

Ever since the announcement of the engagement there has been considerable amused and entirely good-natured comment that Dr. Grayson in winning a "million heiress," was running true to form as a White House aid. And when one begins to ask "Where are the aids of yester year?" it is astonishing how many of them have done just that thing, or after all perhaps it isn't astonishing. And, on the whole, the girls were in luck—they might have done worse—much worse!

The earliest of the aids of whom the writer has any knowledge is Col. Charles L. McCawley, now retired, and living in Washington. Col. McCawley was an aid when aids were fewer, and had to work harder for the glory of being attached to the person of the president.

He had money and he married it, too, in the person of Mrs. John Davis, originally Miss Sarah Freelinhuysen, widow of Judge Davis.

Then there was Col. Charles Bromwell, whose recent suicide while on duty in Hawaii was a sensation to the service and a sorrow to all who knew him. He was for a while Roosevelt's chief aid, and his wife, as the daughter of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, was not exactly penniless. She was well known and liked here, having spent much of her girlhood in Washington during the Cleveland regime when her uncle, Adlai Stevenson, was vice-president.

Mrs. Wilson gave at the Dolly Madison breakfast late last week another manifestation of her simplicity and lack of ostentation in dress. She wore the same costume of gray taffeta and misty gray tulle with a transparent brimmed picture hat, with soft gray plumes, which she had worn some ten days before at the first of her garden parties. Of course, she knew perfectly well that practically every woman at the breakfast had been at her garden party and had studied that gown. But it was perfectly suitable and entirely becoming, and she is too eminently sensible to be ashamed of "repeating," as she really abundantly proved during the winter.

A brilliant fete of three days' equestrian and social events is planned for the seventh annual horse show of the South Shore Country club, to be held on the club grounds June 22, 23, and 24. For the first time the new arena at the water's edge and to the north of the clubhouse will be used, with its double tier of boxes facing the lake. A horse show pageant, to be given outdoors on Friday evening, June 23, will show eight different periods of equestrian cavalcades, beginning with the customs and dress of Napoleonic days, and through the southern period, when the land owners rode with Negro outriders, until the present time. The final event of the show will be the horse show ball, given Saturday evening, with the members of the committee in full riding regalia. On the committee are John R. Thompson, William Daniel, William E. Dee, George F. Getz, Samual Insull, Benjamin Marshall, Harry C. Moir, Edward Morris Jr., William C. Seipp Jr., and Guy C. Woodin.

Flower day for the Frances Willard hospital has been set for June 9. The proceeds this year will go toward the fund for the children's ward. Chaperoning the flower girls will be Mrs. Mathew Hodges, Mrs. Isadore Plotke, Mrs. W. A. Davis, Mrs. G. A. Bangs, Mrs. O. J. Rabe, Mrs. Mary Hight, Mrs. Richard Connell, Mrs. Edward Phelps, Mrs. George Hipple, Mrs. Robert Reimert, Mrs. M. Prangley, Mrs. J. F. Presnell, Mrs. Paul Mueller, and Mrs. Charles Helmicke. Two hundred girls will sell the flowers and wear costumes the same colors as the blossoms they offer for sale.

A counter social attraction to the convention ball at the Harold McCormick residence is to be given by the Congressional union at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ickes in Hubbard Woods.

Miss Grace Hickox will present the Studio Players tomorrow evening at the Little theater.

There is to be another golf luncheon at Onwentsia on Wednesday next, taking the place of the Tuesday event, as Tuesday is Memorial day.

PERSONALS.

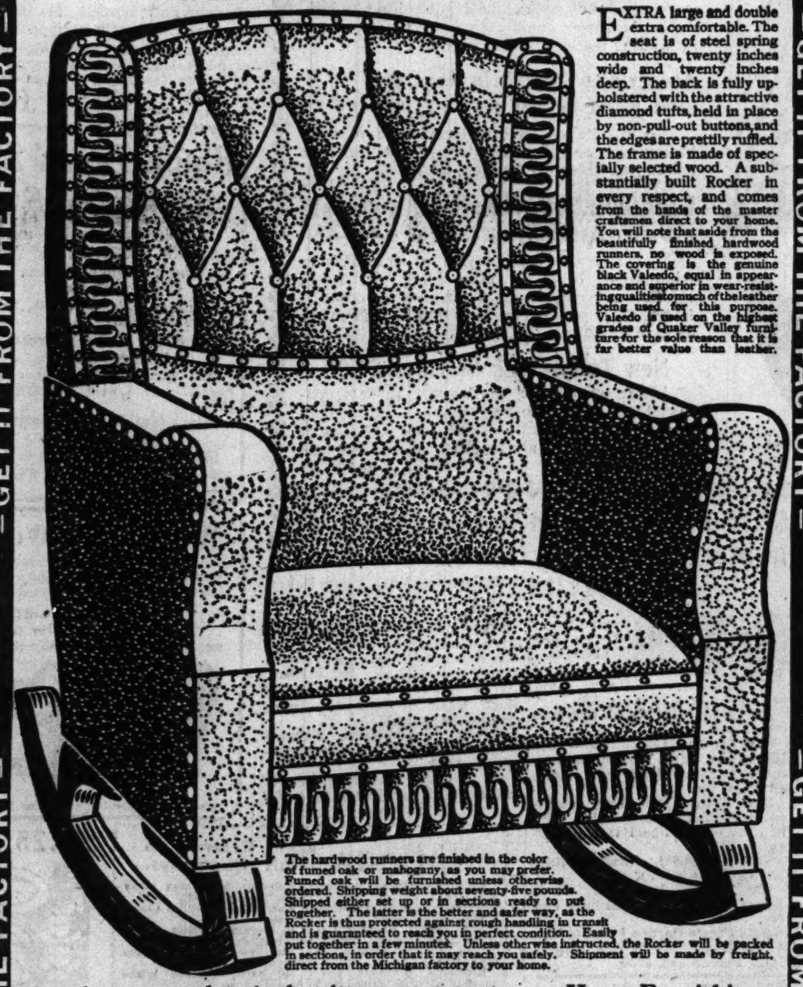
Mr. and Mrs. Max Annenberg of 4741 Malden avenue will be home today from 2 to 5:30 p. m. in honor of the confirmation of their daughter, Mindelle.

Mr. and Mrs. Percival B. Palmer and their daughter, Mrs. F. H. Warren, are leaving on Saturday for their summer residence at Phillips Beach, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Drake are planning to open up Aloha lodge at Lake Geneva on Memorial day. Tuesday will also find a great many Wheatonites in their summer homes, the Will H. Lyfords, Jarvis Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Nelson among the number.

ONE DOLLAR IN THIRTY DAYS

—GET IT FROM THE FACTORY—



EXTRA large and double extra comfortable. The seat is of steel spring construction, twenty inches wide and twenty inches deep. The back is fully upholstered with the attractive diamond tufts, held in place by non-pull-out buttons, and the edges are prettily ruffled. The frame is made of specially selected wood. A substantially built Rocker in every respect, and comes from the hands of the master craftsmen direct to your home. You will note that aside from the beautifully finished hardwood runners, no wood is exposed. The covering is the genuine black Valeedo, equal in appearance and superior in wear-resisting qualities to much of the leather being used for this purpose. Valeedo is used on the highest grades of Quaker Valley furniture for the sole reason that it is far better value than leather.

The hardwood runners are finished in the color of fumed oak or mahogany, as you may prefer. Fumed oak will be furnished unless otherwise ordered. Shipping weight about seventy-five pounds. Shipped either set up or in sections ready to put together. The latter is the better and safer way, as the Rocker is thus protected against rough handling in transit and is guaranteed to reach you in perfect condition. Easily put together in a few minutes. Unless otherwise instructed, the Rocker will be packed in sections, in order that it may reach you safely. Shipment will be made by freight, direct from the Michigan factory to your home.

Another example of what it means to get your Home Furnishings direct from the factory. We want you to see this magnificent Turkish Rocker; we want you to enjoy its restful comfort before paying us a cent; we want you to compare it with Rockers, either in leather or imitation, that retail in the stores for $12 to $20. Then, if you are not thoroughly convinced that you have saved one-fourth to one-third by getting the Rocker direct from the factory, you may return it at our expense any time within thirty days from the day it left the factory. If, on the other hand, you are satisfied you have secured the greatest bargain in high-grade upholstered furniture you ever saw or heard of, send us a dollar a month till the special get-acquainted price of $7.65 is paid. Not a penny down till you have had this incomparable factory leader in your home long enough to try it out to your satisfaction.

In all large cities, and in most of the smaller ones, we have special delivery service, so that our customers there have no bother in looking after shipments. As soon as the goods arrive they are delivered at once to your home, and you pay only the freight and delivery charges to the driver. Not a cent of the price is payable till thirty days after shipment, and then it is remitted at the rate of only a dollar a month.

This is a factory leader: we frankly confess it; and we are offering it for the purpose of getting acquainted with you. The offer is open to every reliable housekeeper or her husband in the United States who has not accepted one of our other get-acquainted offers. After we have shipped you this bargain, we expect to retain you as a permanent Quaker Valley customer; but we could not hope to do this if we were not in a position to save you big money on all your purchases of Home Furnishings. From nine great factories we ship direct to the home on the strongest guarantee ever written,—namely, a trial of thirty days before you pay us a cent.

So now, sign the coupon and rush it to the mail-box.

Classic Evanston Will Hear "The Damnation of Faust."

By Eric De Lamarter

SAY the writings: ". . . a most ardent temperament; a gorgeous imagination, incessantly active . . . an abnormally subtle and acute sense of hearing; the keenest intellect of a dissecting, analyzing turn; the most violent will, manifesting itself in a spirit of enterprise and daring equaled only by its tenacity of purpose and indefatigable presence."

Who is it? Can it be he of "the big stick" and of San Juan hill? In a way, yes; it certainly is his prototype among musicians of the Victorian period's early days. It's fitting, too, that in these riotous times he should be chosen to inaugurate Evanston's festival tomorrow night, notwithstanding certain of the horrific traits mentioned in further consideraton of Hector Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust."

Think of this in sanctified Evanston! —"Bloodthirsty, delirious passion such as is here depicted may have been excited by gladiator and wild beast shows in Roman arenas; but its rites . . . are assuredly more honored in the breach than the observance." Think of it, ponderingly! "Bloodthirsty, delirious passion" in Evanston! Dean Peter C. Luthin, his huge chorus, Soloists Amato, Burton Thatcher, Morgan Kingston, Mabel Sharp Herdien, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra put in the same class with shaggy, squat browed gladiators and Numidian lions! And the story of "The Damnation of Faust," too! Parlous days, my merries! parlous days!

Berlioz has become the cyclopean spook of the art. He was the wizard of the orchestra, say the wiseacres—like Paganini, his fiddle, or Liszt, his keyboard. He is one of those things latter day audiences take for granted, and hate to hear in his concert manifestations. All agree that through him came the modern orchestra technique, in its Gargantuan proportions. Religiously, Mr. Frederick A. Stock presents one or two of his overtures, or one of his "symphonies," during a season; with one accord his audiences kowtow to his greatness and wish that he weren't so colossal.

Not all, however. Paris hears its half-dozen or so performances of "The Damnation of Faust" every season; our audiences receive their periodic revivals with much zest, and feel repaid in the "Will o' the Wisp" dainty and the "Dance of the Sylphs" for long vistas of grandeur. There is something epic in the scheme of this work, as there is in the "Requiem," which disarms the pert criticism and the innocuous platitude.

Lean of inspiration Berlioz surely was, but his three-fold capability for stirring up trouble benefited musical art in a way no lesser nature could have ministered unto it. Without him the modern orchestra would have been developed much more slowly. Without him the frigidly conventional art of France of that day might have cast its blight further into the future.

Consider the conditions of the times for a moment. Turbulence in the commonwealth; conceit and impotence in high places; the ghastly smugness of things social which made possible the "Victorian era" in England. At the head of the Conservatoire, when Berlioz entered, was Cherubini, whom he hated. Halevy, skilled at opera comique, was a power. During his life Mendelssohn was the high godlet and the fetich of all aspiration. The Liszt vogue, as yet, was the idolatry of a personality, not appreciation of a great scholarship and a great virtuosity, as it is today. And, like a shadow cast by the moon—a romantic, illusion mongering, charmingly inconsequential moon—strode beside this dreamer of "a gorgeous imagination," beside "this most violent will," the placid figure of the popular idol, that "sentimental" hidden behind a hedge of whiskers, Gounod. If that one fact were not enough to explain why Berlioz generally was in a rage of "temperament," why he wrote pages of "bloodthirsty, delirious passion," the other two elements of his cosmos would suffice.

The more prominent of these two contributory elements was the fact that Berlioz, out of necessity (he married an actress and his family cut him off because he refused to become a leech, and he was not of the petted "official" crowd), was a music critic. All music critics are mad, anyway, and Berlioz was a better critic than many because he was madder than most of them—or reverse the postulate and the conclusion, if you will; it works both ways. Of course, we smile at many of his most heated contentions nowadays; we smile, too, when thinking of Strauss' "Salome" and "Elektra," over Dannreuther's comparison of the "devils' chorus" in "The Damnation of Faust" with gladiator and wild beast shows.

The third element was the uncanny insight into the orchestra's possibilities which marked Berlioz apart from his contemporaries. For years his treatise on instrumentation has stood as the high authority on the craft; with its supplement from the pen of Charles Marie Widor it still is so regarded. This gift of sensing big values was not confined to the orchestra alone, however, for it found expression in the grandiose concepts of the "Requiem" and "The Damnation of Faust."

Interesting chap he was, Berlioz—a sort of musical Roosevelt, stamping about the Athens of nineteenth century music. Anyway, his "Damnation of Faust" inaugurates the Evanston festival tomorrow night. Tuesday follows an "Artists' night," in the queer circus parlance of the bulletin, which ought to include the "Count 'em—six ramping mastodons—count 'em!" legend to complete the spell. Involved will be Helen Stanley, soprano; Mischa Elmon, violinist; Arne Oldberg, composer-conductor; Frederick A. Stock, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra. A movement from Mr. Oldberg's C minor symphony, one of the arias given Donna Elvira in Mozart's "Don Giovanni," Mendelssohn's violin concerto, the Dohnanyi orchestral suite, Weber's "Jubilee" overture, and Saint-Saëns' Introduction and Rondo for violin are listed.

Thursday evening Wolf-Ferrari's "The New Life," with Alice Nielsen, soprano, and Clarence Whitehill, baritone, soloists; a children's choir, and the festival chorus will be concerned.

Saturday afternoon, as usual, will be given over to the children, with a new cantata by Cyril Graham, "The Piper of Hamelin," as the program's feature. Miscellaneous songs by the juvenile choir and solos by Edith Mason, soprano, and Reed Miller, tenor, also are included.

Saturday evening comes the beloved "operatic night." Anna Case, soprano; Emilio de Gogorza, baritone, and Clare Hansel, contralto, will be the soloists. The program will include two works of special interest in Moussorgsky's "Joshua" and Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's cantata, "The Sea Faries," for women's voices.

News of the Plays and Players.

Winston Churchill's "Conniston" has been made into a play and John W. Cope has been engaged for the part of Jethro Bass. Mr. Cope, who has been Mrs. Fiske's chief assistant in "Erstwhile Susan," has withdrawn from that play.

Fraser Coulter is now the Wealth of "Experience," vice Charles A. Stevenson, who played it in the long Chicago run.

Frederick Herendeen, a Chicago illustrist known to the public for "The Slepers," was last week stricken with appendicitis on the eve of making his stage debut in New York as a member of the company of Roshanara, a dancer who has been seen in a Palace bill. He had written for her a new "act" called "The Bells of Destiny."

Miss Edna Aug, Miss Marion Abbott, Miss Lottie Alter, and Mrs. Stuart Robson are well known actresses who will be in the cast of a play in which all the characters are Negroes. Lawrence Eyre is the author.

"Playing the Game" is the title of a play about newspapers by Miss Sada Cowen.

The Corey, Williams and Riter company have accepted Frank Ferguson's farce, "For One Day Only," and will produce it soon.

The Early Plays, given under the auspices of the English department of the University of Chicago, will be repeated in Mandel hall Wednesday evening. They are: "The Sponsus." "The Second Shepherd's Play." "Nice Wanton," and "The Wooing of Nan." Tickets may be obtained from R. M. Lovett at the university.

Chin Chin's career at the Illinois will terminate with the performance of June 10.

"That the marriage engagement of Margery Maude and Paul Gordon has come to an end does not create great surprise," says the London Stage. "Paul Gordon is, of course, merely a stage name. The gentleman is named Achelis. His family, though agreeable and well educated, are of German blood and have German prejudices, so much so that since the war began some members of the family tried to get to Germany to join the army. Mr. Paul Gordon himself has openly declared that his hopes are that the war will end with Germany victorious."

A drama by Louis K. Anspacher called "That Day" and dealing with New York life at the present time, is to be produced by A. H. Woods.

The program publishers are so accustomed to the line "Time, the Present; Place, New York," that they used it last week in the Garrick's playbill to describe the period and locale of "The Liars."

Leon Errol and William Schrode staged the Columbia's new summer show, "The World of Frolics," which utilizes the scenery and costumes of the Ziegfeld Follies of 1916.

Miss Mollie Pearson, late the leading woman of "Hobson's Choice," has sailed for Honolulu to join her husband, who is an actor there.

The estate of the late Stephen Phillips, poet and dramatist, amounted to £5.

The president has faith in the Ziegfeld Follies as an instrument of patriotic education and has sent the producers this letter:

"My Dear Mr. Ziegfeld:

"Dudley Malone has sent me your letter to him in which you express the wish to devote the finale of the new 'Follies' to the preparedness idea. I am greatly gratified that you should have this wish and purpose, and I will take great pleasure in talking the matter over with Malone so that I may render any assistance that is possible.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

Which is not so bad for a "blue-nosed Scotch Presbyterian."

A Remedy for an Alleged Evil; Several Stars and a Mere Actress.

By Percy Hammond.

MISS GEORGE'S gracious note to THE TRIBUNE'S dramatic critic, telling why she interprets Major Barbara as she does, suggests that such kindly explanation might profitably become a practice of the players. While the actors whose work has been suspected by the critics do not, as a rule, suffer in silence; still, their plaints are usually still-born lamentations to friends and associates, reaching not the general ear.

The player's habit of contempt for the reviewers who write is sometimes responsible for this attitude, as in the case of Mr. Gillette. Miss Adams has not read a displeased criticism of her art since her feelings were hurt after her performance of Juliet. The embittered Mr. Lackaye hates the so-called "expert" as he does hell-pains and Englishmen; and when he speaks of them vast additions are made to the glossary of epithet.

But it might be better if these and the many others like them would follow Miss George's urbane example. Differing from the critic's estimate of her playing she did not permit concealment, like a worm i' the bud, to feed on her damask cheek. Without loss of dignity she enlightened him amiably and modestly as to his error and was neither sulky nor inflamed. It may not have convinced him, but the defense of her characterization reached those other critics, (the members of the audience) for whom all players possess an explicable admiration. Mr. Lackaye believes that he has been abused by the writing reviewers. He and his fellows should hear what is said of them by the critics who do not write!

The dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE proposes that hereafter when he records a player's representation as imperfect that that player may have, for a defense of his performance, twice as much space as that occupied by the objection. He realizes the vicissitudes of a first-night inventory—that it is always hurried and often undigested and something like an improvisation. He knows that the actor, having spent weeks of thought on a rôle, is, apparently, more qualified to understand it and its denouement than a flurried penman, dashing for an edition. All he asks is that the player should write in the vein of tolerance observed by the critic. The late Mr. Laurence Irving, protesting his afflictions to the late Mr. Alan Dale, designated that erstwhile feuilletonist as a "blob of scum." I should not care to be called in my own column "a blob of scum."

A NOTE from the editor of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE suggests that today is an auspicious time to compile, after the fashion of the sporting writers, a list of the season's best actors. A stupendous undertaking, this, though I may, says he, limit the catalogue to those artists whose achievements have reached the Union loop or thereabouts. Further, the selections, he thinks, should be based solely on the effect produced by the actor, not on the histrionic phenomena accompanying its production. Which means that I should choose, without trying to explain why, the players who seemed to me to realise their rôles most honestly.

The indolence of spring-time prompts me to evade instructions and to compromise with them by identifying merely one bit of acting which, in my opinion, was the truest of the season now on the wane. In the process of eliminating the eminences it may be said that it was not that of Miss Maude Adams in "The Little Minister." Nor was it the interpretation by the First Actress of "Our Mrs. McChesney." Mr. Sothern's Shakespearean declamation of a modern rôle in "The Two Virtues" was not it, and neither was Miss Grace George's playing in "Major Barbara," or "The New York Idea." So fine an example of comedy as Miss Eva Leonard Boyne's in "A Pair of Silk Stockings" does not win the doubtful prize, and Mr. Heggie in "Androcles and the Lion," and Mr. Andrews and Mr. Kane in "Hobson's Choice," are also reluctantly passed by. Concerning Mr. Thomas A. Wise in "The Song of Songs" and Miss Lola Fisher in "Rio Grande," I am less certain. But they, too, were not so real to me as is Miss Mary Mallon, who plays a little part called Frailty in "Experience."

That I may mitigate the contempt which such an utterance is sure to evoke I hurry to say that I do not pronounce this Miss Mallon a great actress or even a good actress. It is the intention simply to suggest that, given a thing to do, sh does it perfectly. Her assignment is the impersonation of a youthful saleswoman in the flesh-mart, an honest, beaten little sister of the underworld, whose body is cheap, but whose affection is priceless. I know that this rôle basks in the suffused warmth of an emotion enkindled not only by the author of "Experience" but by the action of the human heart which beats now and then to the joys and sorrows of the girl who sins and does not enjoy it.

Miss Mallon's part in Mr. Hobart's evangelistic charlatan is the one real atom in its gilded carcass. She is bad, she is good, she is true, she is brave, and she is real. I am told by my women friends that such a character is easily to be acted by any woman. That may or may not be so. The fact remains that in a season's theatergoing, avid in its longing to be more than conventionally enthusiastic, this obscure lady gave me the impression that she saw her task and that she did it with a vivid and remarkable truthfulness that I have not encountered in the theater this year.

I think that "Experience" is a smug and painted fakir, entrapping those of our fellow reformers who wear celluloids and goloshes and who yearn to see their names in the papers. But I hope that all the harm morally that is done by its performances is overcome by the esthetic influence of this one bit of esthetic veracity. Miss Mallon's impersonation of the gray little siren in "Experience" is faithful acting, and it saves its slinking vehicle from being a nasty and inexcusable menace.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A Lambs' gambol is, on the face of it, a monster all star entertainment given by as many prominent actors as may be crowded on one stage. A sort of annual circus bargain in amusements, at which for twice or thrice the cost of an ordinary ticket one may enjoy the event of one's life and make the hit everlasting with the particular young lady one elects to honor with an invitation to attend.

As a matter of truth, usually concealed, a Lambs' gambol is a variously interesting exhibit of talented young men trying to do something for which they are least fitted, tragedians playing comedy and comedians tragedy, and making a good natured mess of it.

No one cares, particularly, whether a gambol has any artistic merit or not. No one worries a great deal even though it proves to be unusually dull as entertainment. The Lambs are dear boys, they frequently volunteer their services at benefits for others, and if an eager and curious public is willing to pay a premium for the privilege of seeing them wear their frock coats, not to mention their everyday faces, well and good.

But it happens that this year's gambol, which was given last week, got rather on our nerves. It seemed particularly stupid, for some reason, and our abundant sympathy, which is usually with the players, went over on the first ballot to the tired but loyal patrons sitting and yawning and sometimes dozing fitfully in our immediate vicinity.

Why, said we, should this be? Why should the Lambs, offering an annual entertainment on honor, be permitted to retire with the sweet consciousness that though they had given a poor exhibition of themselves and their billboarded art, nobody cared? It was, wasn't it, for charity? To swell the building fund or the furniture fund or the stein fund or something? So what did it matter?

And then it occurred to us that it should, in fact, matter much. Whether the gamboling be done in New York or en tour, there is no good reason why the actors should not be expected to live up to their promise, and as nearly as possible up to their individual reputations.

It is not that a group of players which includes practically every actor of any consequence in America, backed by fifteen or twenty of the most popular and successful authors and composers, cannot give a good entertainment. It is merely that they have grown careless and lackadaisical and willing to accept what their foolish worshipers provide in the way of returns. And if persisted in such an attitude is certain to hurt the Lambs.

There were ideas back of this gambol, but few came to the front. There was a Shakespearean minstrel first part, for instance, during which the company, representing characters from the plays, assembled in the Arden wood to sing and chatter and crack the snappy jest. The spirit of Shakespeare, being Clarence Harvey dressed and powdered all in white, encounters the masque in the park and looks on awhile. Sometimes he is stirred to speech, as when he says, following a particularly dull attempt at witticism: "That must be Bacon's; it's not mine."

The announcement that John Drew, after carefully considering the matter, has determined to withdraw from the company organized to carry on the work of the late Charles Frohman and place his affairs in the hands of John D. Williams, comes not as a surprise. He is merely the first of the Frohman stars to make the break. Others, unless Rumor is terribly out of form this year, will follow.

Billie Burke, of course, has already done so, but she was of the new rather than the old guard and she retired for two reasons—first, because she wanted to go in for pictures, and the reorganized Frohman company, headed by Alf Hayman and including Augustus Thomas, did not want her to; second, because as Mrs. Florence Ziegfeld she has a manager in her own family circle who, as a money and reputation maker, stands more or less alone. Why should Billie go elsewhere to be managed?

Maude Adams, who is still a Frohman star, will remain where she is for a time at least. When Charles Frohman went down with the Lusitania there was an unpaid balance between him as a producer and Miss Adams as a star of several hundred thousand dollars, the money having been made by Miss Adams and used by Mr. Frohman, with her permission, of course, in other ventures. It is understood that when these notes were presented to the executors of the estate it was agreed that Miss Adams should continue playing under the Frohman banner and do her own collecting. That is to say, she should take all in place of a part of the profits from he. tours until she was reimbursed. When his debt has been canceled there are those who say Miss Adams, too, will become a Williams star. William Gillette is probably through playing and Ethel Barrymore is more than likely to become an actress-manager on her own account.

BURNS MANTLE.

Playbills of the Week

Princess—"Nothing but the Truth," farce by Frederick Isham and Mark Swan, from the former's like named story. Grant Mitchell, Ned Sparks, Miss Louise Dresser, and Rapley Holmes are of the cast. First time Friday evening.

Grand Opera House—"23 Washington Square," bright farce, with Miss May Irwin. Third week.

Palace Music Hall—"A World of Pleasure," big and populous show from the New York Winter garden, with Clifton Crawford, Miss Margaret Edwards, Conroy and Lemaire, and Miss Venita Fitzhugh. Third week.

Illinois—"Chin-Chin." Eighteenth week and final fortnight.

Olympic—"So Long, Letty!" Sixteenth week.

Garrick—"Omar, the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post. This is a play by Richard Walton Tully, who wrote "The Rose of the Rancho" and "A Bird of Paradise." Mr. Post, who has been acting the part since January of 1914, is seen as the poet of theh "Rubaiyat." First time this evening.

Cort—"A Pair of Queens." Fifth week.

Powers'—"Mavourneen," with Miss Peggy O'Neil. Second week.

Chicago—"Experience." Return engagement starts this evening.

Majestic—Miss Dorothy Jardon, a sine eyed songstress out of the musical plays, will headline here for the week starting tomorrow. Others will be Al Lydell, who scored a comic success in "Jane O'Day from Broadway," in a "turn" with Bobbie Higgins; William Gaston "and company" in "A Regular Business Man," and Miss Lillian Fitzgerald and Henry Marshall.

McVicker's—Continuous variety, with Miss Grace Hazard as the best known performer.

Great Northern—Continuous variety, including Toots Paka and her Hawaiian choir.

George M. Cohan

Miss Kathleen Clifford in "A Pair of Queens" COURT

Miss Estelle Wentworth

Miss Wentworth, a member of the Metropolitan company, will sing this season in the opera at Ravinia.

The Friars, who will frolic at the Auditorium next Sunday afternoon and evening, will be met on their arrival by a committee of the Strollers' club consisting of George Beitzhoover, chairman, Harry J. Ridings, Edward Rowland Sr., Harry Davidson, James S. Hutton, and Marcus Heiman. They will arrive at the Park row station at 10 a. m. and will march to the Illinois Athletic club. The frolic will be in charge of Mr. Cohan, whose picture above is from Harrison Fisher's portrait.

Columbia—"A World of Frolics," a revue devised for a Chicago run by Dave Marion, a Columbia favorite, who will be one of the comedians. This is the entertainment for which the Josef Urban settings and the costumes of "The Follies of 1915" were obtained. First time this afternoon.

The Adam Schaaf Grand Piano

The Most Perfect — The Most Beautiful in Tone

This new Adam Schaaf Grand Piano is the latest achievement of The Adam Schaaf organization. It is the smallest grand piano in the world—suitable for small apartments. It represents in tone, in action, in durability and architecture, the best knowledge of the present day.

To those who recognize the superiority of Grand construction to that of the Upright—who prefer the Grand musically and architecturally, and who have been deterred hitherto by the cost of a satisfactory Grand—this wonderful, new pianoforte is strongly recommended.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

OTELLE HARROLD, the tener prominent among Oscar Hammerstein's epic if cataclysmic ventures, and known favorably to our audiences, has been added to the Russian Park forces for the summer's lyric drama. His engagement for the lyric tener roles is important. The complete roster of singers is as follows: Miss Garrison, Berisa, and Wentworth, and Mme. Scott, Kingston, Harrold, Picco, Addiss, d'Angelo, and Dua. The conductors include Richard Hageman of the Metropolitan opera, Ernst Knoch of European reputation, and Alessandro Scuri of the Metropolitan. William Schuster will act as stage manager.

Central Music hall will be given over to what the bulletin calls the "third annual all colored composers' concert" this afternoon. It ought to be a prismatic function. At least one of the participants has a wide reputation—R. Nathaniel Dett, head of the musical department of Hampton institute. He will be assisted by Leslie Smith, reader, and W. Henry Hickney, tenor. Three songs on the program, by the way, are settings of poems by Dunbar, compositions by Nora Lena Jones.

Three Best Sellers in Music.

The three best sellers in Columbia records last week were:

"Wake Up, America!" and "Good-by, Good Luck, God Bless You."

"Casey at Home" and "Marriage Difficulties."

"Come Back to Erin, Mona Darling," and "Sweet Cider Time When You Were Mine."

The Pathé records that had the best sale were:

"There's a Little Lane Without a Turning on the Way to Home, Sweet Home," and "Sweet Cider Time When You Were Mine."

"Some Little Bug Is Going to Find You" and "Luana Lou."

"Home, Sweet Home, the World Over, Part I." and "Home, Sweet Home, the World Over, Part II."

The following were the best selling Victor records:

"Otilia March" and "Guatemala-Panama March."

"Cohen at the Telephone" and "Goldstein Goes in the Railroad Business."

"Alice, Where Art Thou?" and "Come Back to Erin."

The best selling sheet music numbers were:

"The Ragtime Pipe of Pan."

"Underneath the Stars."

"So Long, Letty."

The following were the best sellers in player piano records for last week:

"Waialae."

"Babes in the Wood."

"Ragtime Pipes of Pan."

EVANSTON

Miss Mary Garden's engagement with Campanini for Chicago is for eight performances only. It is still probable that she will make an arrangement to tour next season with the Boston-Pavlowa company, the manager whereof, Max Rabinoff, seems to be making no effort publicity to deny the report that Pavlowa will be a member of the extravaganza company which the Messrs. Ziegfeld and Dillingham are to install in the Century theater, New York.

Private advices indicate that Charles Martin Loeffler will be represented on the Symphony orchestra programs of next season by a symphony to which he is adding the finishing touches.

Another popular orchestral concert by the Edison Symphony orchestra at the Edison building is announced for Thursday evening of this week.

Edward Collins, the Chicago pianist, has written a festival composition for children's chorus and orchestra to be sung at Lane Technical High school next Sunday afternoon.

Suggestion is made that the Cubs might have arranged to play three innings or so as a curtain raiser for the "Siegfried" performance at the Cub ball park on the evening of June 15.

SETS NEW STANDARD.

THOSE of you—an your name is legion—who went to see the first installment of the Billie Burke serial, "Gloria's Romance," witnessed crowded houses, lobbies that overflowed far into the streets. Says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "This screen novel by Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes sets an absolutely new standard in literary merit for motion picture stars, for it is not a blood and thunder, slap dash, knock down, drag out play, but a logically developed plot revealing the romance of a young society woman."

Some bad bogy men tried to hold up Mr. Page Peters, Morosco's "star heavy man," the other night. Mr. Peters, you see, was returning with a party from a dance and it was a dark night and the road was dark and the bogy man thought chances were good, therefore, doing the perfectly beautiful piece of dirty work, but ah-h, little did they know just how heavy was this heavy man. He fell on all three of them, scared them to death and sped gayly away, shooting madly back at them with his automatic.

Friends and admirers of Bessie Barriscale will grieve with her over the death of her father. This is the second bereavement that has come to Miss Barriscale within a year, for it was last May that her mother passed away.

Mrs. Laura Cornelisson Cogswell, president and founder of the Children's International Motion Picture league, who was compelled to relinquish on account of illness her work with the organization, is back again and has great plans to forward her movement for better pictures for children.

Henry Otto, long connected with Universal pictures both as actor and director, has gone to Metro. He will direct Harold Lockwood and May Allison.

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"A Child of the Paris Streets"—Fine Arts-Triangle production with Mae Marsh and Robert Harron. Well acted.

"Armandale"—Three reel Gaumont drama starring Ida Shepard and Alexander Gaden.

"Into the Primitive"—Five act Red Seal drama featuring Kathlyn Williams and Eugenie Besserer. Cave-maniac story.

"Notorious Gallagher"—Five act Metro drama featuring Marguerite Snow and William Nigh. Advertised as "astonishingly novel." Let us hope.

"Other People's Money"—Thanhouser production starring Gladys Hulette. If you want to see a girl out with a band of el-I-ever criminals, buy a ticket to this show.

"Police"—Essanay comedy, featuring Charles Chaplin. Says the press agent: "It is a riot of mirth." Page Mr. Chaplin, he will probably sue 'em.

"Saints and Sinners"—Famous Players picturization of the drama by Henry Arthur Jones. Peggy Hyland is starred.

"The Girl With the Green Eyes"—Five act Gold Rooster-Pathé production featuring Katherine Kaelred and Julian L'Estrange.

"The Hare and the Tortoise"—Solig drama with Fritzi Brunette and Harry Mestayer playing the leads. The plodder wins out, of course—otherwise why give this picture such a name?

"The Madcap"—Red Feather picturization of the novel by George Gibbs. Flora Parker De Haven, who is the cute little wife of little Carter De Haven, plays the lead. In this connection "cute" does not mean bow legged. Neither of the De Haven's is.

"The Man from Manhattan"—Mutual production with William Stowell and Rhea Mitchell featured. A newspaper drama.

"The Primal Instinct"—Three part Vitagraph drama, featuring Leah Baird, assisted by an all star cast.

"The Schemers"—Three reel Essanay comedy-drama, presenting Elizabeth Burbridge and John Junior. Rather a pleasing picture.

"The Suspect"—Five reel Vitagraph drama in which Anita Stewart, assisted by S. Rankin Drew, is featured in what is claimed to be "a role different from anything in which she has yet appeared."

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "Alien Souls," Lasky drama. Sessue Hayakawa and Tsuri Aoki play the leads. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "The Feud Girl," Famous Players production, with Hazel Dawn in the lead.

Colonial—"Police," Essanay comedy, featuring Charles Chaplin. "His Brother's Wife," World Film drama. Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell are featured.

Fine Arts—"God's Country and the Woman," eight reel Vitagraph feature starring Nell Shipman and George Holt.

La Salle—"The Little Girl Next Door," Essanay drama.

Strand—"The Sorrows of Love," Kay-Bee Triangle. Bessie Barriscale is featured.

Studebaker—Fourth installment of "Gloria's Romance," George Kleine serial, starring Billie Burke and Henry Kolker. "The Eye of God," featuring Lois Weber.

Ziegfeld—"The Ordeal of Elizabeth," Vitagraph production. Lillian Walker and Evart Overton play the leads.

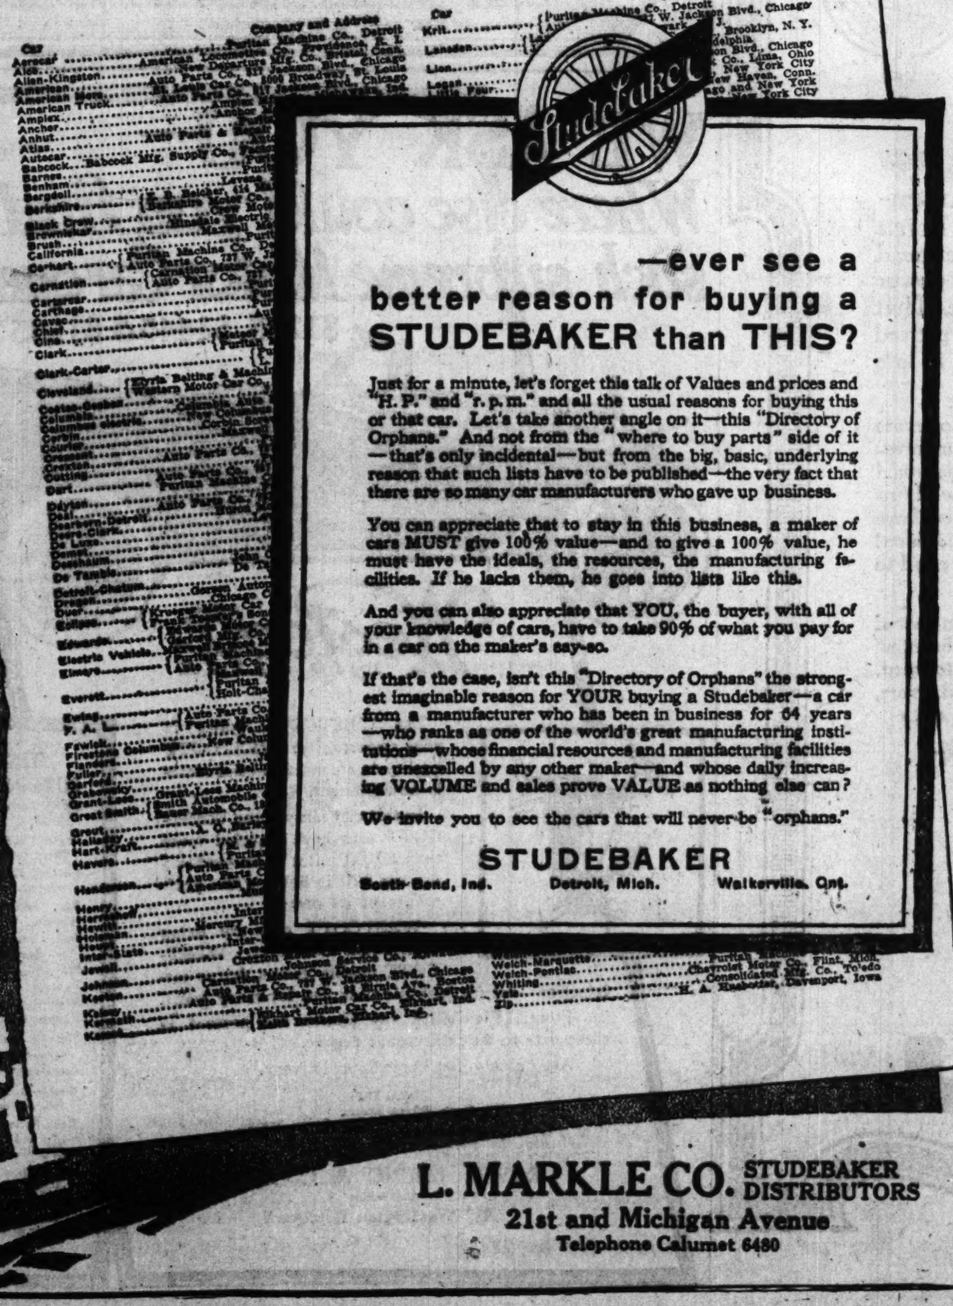
Where to Obtain Parts for Orphan Cars

An Up-to-date List for Ready Reference



Studebaker

—ever see a better reason for buying a STUDEBAKER than THIS?

Just for a minute, let's forget this talk of Values and prices and "H. P." and "r. p. m." and all the usual reasons for buying this or that car. Let's take another angle on it—this "Directory of Orphans." And not from the "where to buy parts" side of it—that's only incidental—but from the big, basic, underlying reason that such lists have to be published—the very fact that there are so many car manufacturers who gave up business.

You can appreciate that to stay in this business, a maker of cars MUST give 100% value—and to give a 100% value, he must have the ideals, the resources, the manufacturing facilities. If he lacks them, he goes into lists like this.

And you can also appreciate that YOU, the buyer, with all of your knowledge of cars, have to take 90% of what you pay for in a car on the maker's say-so.

If that's the case, isn't this "Directory of Orphans" the strongest imaginable reason for YOUR buying a Studebaker—a car from a manufacturer who has been in business for 54 years—who ranks as one of the world's great manufacturing institutions—whose financial resources and manufacturing facilities are unexcelled by any other maker—and whose daily increasing VOLUME and sales prove VALUE as nothing else can?

We invite you to see the cars that will never be "orphans."

"THE LITTLE GIRL NEXT DOOR"

WHITE SLAVERY AND VICE EXPOSED

What They Say About Us:

When the question of good that "The Little Girl Next Door" is doing came up before the city council committee many prominent citizens declared it a wonderful lesson.

The Rev. M. P. Boynton issued the first certificate of good character for the photoplay, and the majority of the other speakers followed his lead.

"There can be no just criticism of the film," he said. "I believe in turning the light on immoral conditions, and for that reason I believe the picture is doing good."

After listening to the evidence the committee voted 6 to 7 in favor of "The Little Girl Next Door."

ART By Louise James Bartelt

"He Who Is Without Sin," By Benjamin West.

THE Chicago Society of the Friends of American Art is just closing its fifth year of activity. For five years now this association has worked energetically and competently to present to the Art institute representative examples of American painting. It was formed in 1910 with the avowed intention of obtaining a fund sufficient to form a permanent collection of American art in the Art institute.

Today there are over half a hundred paintings and pieces of sculpture in the institute, placed there through the efforts of the society whose members do not quite number 200. And these last twelve months have resulted in some remarkably excellent work.

There is John Singer Sargent's portrait of Mrs. Charles Gifford, one of the finest examples of his work. Sargent's name stands among the masters of portraiture and his peculiar genius in catching the elusive spirit of a face and imprisoning it on canvas has seldom been more vividly brought out than in this particular instance.

The painting by Benjamin West, which is reproduced above, is of especial interest, over and above its real merits as an historical painting, because of the fact that its creator was one of America's first great painters.

Born in the quaint town of Springfield, Pa., in 1738, in its earliest days, he obtained his first color lessons from the half wild Cherokee Indians when he was still but a little boy. He was a precocious youngster, and when still in the teens commenced painting portraits in Philadelphia. Later on he drifted to New York, but New York was not then, as now, the mecca of all creators, and he went from there to Italy. He was not quite 30 when he settled in London and gave himself up to the profession of painting.

It was by his religious and historical paintings that he was appointed court historical painter in 1772. He succeeded Sir Joshua Reynolds in 1792 as president of the Royal academy, and held that office until his death, twenty-eight years later.

He is widely represented both in England and this country, having pictures in the National gallery, London; the Walker gallery, Liverpool; the museum of Glasgow, Scotland; the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts; Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

The color scheme in "He That Is Without Sin" is impressive. All of the figures, with the exception of Magdalene, are in the somberer hues. The main light on the picture seems to come from behind the woman, lighting up the yellow of her dress and bringing out the gold in her hair. The drapery in the garments of the figures is effectively soft and clinging, while the figures themselves convey action as well as feeling.

Among the other paintings which have been presented by this society to the institute within the last twelve months are "Holiday," by Potthast; "Sunlight," by Richard E. Miller; "Elvira," by Katherine Dudley, a Chicago woman; "Kentucky Mountains," by James F. Hopkins, and "Autumn," by Wilson Irvine.

The Friends of American Art is certainly to be congratulated on its selection of American paintings during this last year as well as in years past. Considering the fact, too, that each subscriber only signs a pledge of $1,000, to be given in installments of $200 each year, it has made consistently wise use of its money.

There are to be no new exhibits at the Art institute this week. The display of American water colors and miniatures continues until June 11. So also do William Ritschel's marines and mountains. Those skeptics who are inclined to doubt that cities have souls should not fail to see Ritschel's "Brooklyn." I have seen human faces with far less pulsing life and feeling evident than is contained in his city by the bridge.

Exhibitions at the galleries this week:

Roullliers'—Original etchings by American etchers.

Moullon & Ricketts—Paintings by Edgar Payne.

O'Brien's—Paintings by George Inness.

STORY OF A YOUNG ARTIST.

"HEARTS AND FACES" [John Lane], by John Murray Gibbon, is a first novel, which champions the cause of the artists' model, as well as one which tells the history of an interesting young artist. The author has every right to use such material, despite the fact that he is not professionally an artist but an official of the Canadian Pacific railway, for he studied in the ateliers of Paris and London before he emigrated to the new land. He was born in Ceylon in 1870, the second son of Sir William Gibbon of Bournemouth. He was educated at school and college in Aberdeen, Scotland, and spent his vacations at Göttingen and other universities in Germany. He went up to Oxford with a scholarship and won his degree cum laude. He had intended to compete for the Indian civil service, but after his graduation a place was offered him on Black and White. He succeeded Eden Phillpotts there. In order to qualify himself better for his place he studied drawing in the evenings, and was elected to the Langham, an association exclusively of artists. Eventually he became editor of the magazine, but he was forced to retire on account of illness. It was then that he studied art seriously abroad and in London. He is an officer in the Circumnavigators' club of New York, which is composed of men who have literally traveled around the world. He lives now in the quaint French-Canadian village of St. Anne de Beaupré, Quebec.

John Murray Gibbon

Cameron Mackenzie says he wrote "Mr. and Mrs. Pierce" [Dodd-Mead] to fill what, as an editor, he felt was a want. He was, lest you have forgotten, for three years after the retirement of S. S. McClure editor of McClure's magazine. That want was a story not dealing with the rich or the poor, with New Englanders or southerners, with crooks, financiers, or fashionable folk, but with the average, well-to-do, substantial people who form the great body of the reading public. Since the first of January of last year Mr. Mackenzie has been doing no editing at all, just writing his way along. He is remotely related to Compton Mackenzie. I add that bit of information because I have been asked so often if they are brothers.

William Roscoe Thayer's "Life and Letters of John Hay" [Houghton Mifflin] will soon be available in Braille type for the blind. An unbound set of the two volumes has recently been given to the National Library for the Blind in Washington. This set will be divided into sections and sent out to many blind workers, who will transcribe it into Braille. There will be ten volumes when the book is entirely transcribed.

Clarence Budington Kelland, author of "The Hidden Spring" (Harpers), says that the best compliment his story telling powers ever received "came from Bill Smith, ex-lumberjack, sawmill man, and all around timber expert. He's 70 odd now. Bill said to me, 'I read that story of yours in my wife's magazine. 'Twasn't any story at all. I could a written it. There ain't scarce a thing in it I ain't seen or done myself.'"

Paul Hyacinthe Loyson, son of Père Hyacinthe, the fiery patriot and fierce antagonist of Romain Rolland, is serving his country as a specially skilled interpreter. He is an editor and a poet, as well as a dramatist. His "The Apostle" [Doubleday-Page] is the latest addition to the Drama league series of plays. It is translated by Barrett H. Clark and contains an introduction by Prof. George Pierce Baker of Harvard.

I quote in toto an announcement which came the other day: "D. Appleton & Co. announce the publication of 'Exporting to Latin America,' by Ernst B. Filsinger. The book is the most exhaustive treatment of Latin-American trade and of the means of obtaining it that has ever been published. Among other features, it contains a complete analysis of the commercial conditions in the southern republics, an outline of territories for traveling representatives and local agents, routes for salesmen and their expenses. Every phase of the trade problem has been considered, including the mail order opportunities, character of advertising needed, governmental aid available, etc. The author is a prominent manufacturer of St. Louis, president of the Filsinger-Boettle Shoe company, and consul of Costa Rica and Ecuador. As the commissioner general of the Latin-American Foreign Trade association he traveled widely in the Latin-American countries. A unique feature of the book is an appendix containing much information regarding the people of Latin America, the different climates, the goods most in demand, etc." The Encyclopedia Britannica has a rival!

"Won't you please tell me something about Frank Spearman?" writes a reader. Surely, the Tabloid is always willing to give information when it has any to give. Mr. Spearman was born in New York and brought up in Wisconsin. He went to Lawrence university at Appleton, Wis., but his health failed and he had to quit college, which meant that he would have to give up his most cherished hope of becoming a physician. So he came to Chicago and became a wholesale grocer. What the process of mind was that turned him to trade I do not know. In 1884 he married the daughter of a pioneer capitalist and merchant, and two years later went into the banking business in western Nebraska. All this time, however, he had been spending his leisure hours writing, and it wasn't long before he gave up every other sort of work and devoted himself exclusively to it. He now lives in Los Angeles, and his latest novel is "Nan of Music Mountain" (Scribners).

Walter Hale, author of "By Motor to the Firing Line" (Century), was the first American illustrator to go through the battle front of the western area in northern France. He spent most of his time in the war region with Arnold Bennett and Owen Johnson. He made his interior sketches of Reims cathedral while the building was actually under fire. It is especially with Reims, Soissons, and Arras during and after the bombardment that his drawings deal. He and his two companions are still the only civilians who have had access to the exposed trenches snaptured from the Germans on the Notre Dame de Lorette hillside.

Eleanor H. Porter, author of the "Glad" books of Pollyanna's career, and whose latest is "Just David" (Houghton-Mifflin), makes a confession about her little girlhood. When she was little she used to celebrate each occasion of moment among her friends with a poem. The poems were appreciated, she says, but evidently not regarded as significant, for her obvious talent at that time was for music. She made music her profession for many years, and it wasn't until after she was married that she made any attempt to write for publication.

"Practical Stage Directing for Amateurs" (Dutton), by Emerson Taylor, is a manual which the ever increasing number of amateur performers will find most helpful.

LYON & HEALY
Standardize PACKARD MOTOR TRUCKS

F. T. Randall, traffic manager for Lyon & Healy, says:

"We have been buying motor trucks of various kinds since 1905, but have replaced all of them except two with Packards.

"Our first Packard was purchased in 1909, and is still working as well as ever. Not one of our six Packards has ever been towed in. They have given us wonderful service."

The first cost of a motor truck never indicates the cost of hauling a ton of merchandise. Machinery at bargain prices is never a good investment.

There is no surer way of losing your money than in the purchase of assembled motor trucks.

Lyon & Healy's first Packard is seven years old. Mr. Randall will tell more fully, if you will ask him, just how well it has served.

The Dorris
Built up to a standard—not down to a price

During eleven years there has been little change in the fundamental constructional features of the Dorris such, for example, as the valve-in-head motor, platform spring suspension, unit power plant, dry plate multiple disc clutch, etc. That they are mechanically correct has been proved not only by time but by their adoption in late years by other cars

Thus, for eleven years, we have been enabled to devote our energies to making such refinements and improvements in the application of these fundamentals as would give maximum efficiency and durability The advantage that these years of experiment for betterment have given us is apparent when one realizes that to adopt our original principles other manufacturers have had to revolutionize their construction

So—throughout—the Dorris is a car of evolution instead of one of revolutionary changes—proving again the axiom that evolution corrects errors and results in betterment, whereas revolution, while perhaps correcting old errors, presents new opportunities for new mistakes

The Tribune's Weekly Almanack

MAY

Laputan Days

IN the discreet and circumspect conditions of northern temperate climate perfumed languor is a sensuous appeal infrequently permitted. Work is the solvent of our lives. Man does not live to live, but lives to labor, and circumstances favor his solvent, giving him something to work against—frigidity, the east wind, snow, heat, cold rains, tempests.

Comfort is of his own creation; luxury of his own finding. His moments of ease are as he makes them. His hours of contentment are as he conceives them. If a life have a deep perspective and a real sense of values, happiness is found in the hut; otherwise, with a shallow perspective and a surface sense of values, it must be hero happiness on the heights which are and must be heights upon quicksand. Time levels them. The places where there were raised bucklers and bare swords in hero happiness and the places where there were flowers and vines in hut happiness come always to the same level. There are no eternal hills.

But into a life of living to work there comes even in our otherwise uncompromising climate one evanescent period of blossoms and perfume when the night air, laden with languors, reaches open casements and invites the soul to be and not to strive. Thorn and orchard charge the south wind which carries the pungency of the lilac. Lilies of the valley scent the air. Wood thrush and catbird with song see the sun behind the hills of the west. The whippoorwill cries to the twilight and the dark. The luna moth, with beautiful and ineffectual wings, beats in the luminous void, and Venus blazes like a nearby moon in the west.

The time is intoxicant, and man for a brief period can live without accomplishment.

"My name is George Washington Cohan, remember the cherry tree."

"Where did you work last?"

"In one of the stores of the International Cigar Store."

"Why aren't you working now?"

"I got fired for telling the truth."

"How's that?"

"A man came in and said, 'Give me a good cigar,' and I said to him 'I can't do it. We don't carry any good cigars.'"

"Well, doesn't that discourage you?"

"No, I expect to be president of the United States some day."

"Now, seriously, you don't expect that?"

"Why not? They're mighty careless who they pick for president these days."

"Well, I like your honesty. I'll pay you $10,000 a year just to stay in my house and tell the truth."

"I'd like to take it, but I'm afraid I'd have to give it up. You couldn't stand the truth."

"You better take it."

"All right. Ten thousand a year—that's $30.50 a day, $2.50 an hour, 4 cents a minute. Gosh, I've made 8 cents just talking about it!" (Butler enters.)

"Your bawth is ready, sir."

"Your bawth. Don't you know—where you wash?"

"O, you mean the sink."

"I thought you said this man who was in love with my wife was a broker?"

"He is. I don't know anybody broker than he is."

Which Corset Did Dr. Gray Mean?
Third Floor—Center
in his article in the Daily News of Wednesday, May 17th, when he wrote about the symptoms that so many women wrongfully call "nervousness"? He said in part: "Your general description sounds strangely like the general conditions resulting from ptosis, that is, muscular relaxation. Enteroptosis, or visceroptosis, is the general term. This will be divided into gastroptosis, and so forth, according as the stomach or other organ or organs are involved. What you probably need more than anything else is to be overhauled by a physical engineer and your machine trued up and adjusted."

Our expert corsetieres are "physical engineers," and in most cases "true up and adjust your machine" by fitting you correctly with a Nemo "Self-Help" Wonderlift Corset—it is the one corset that LIFTS and SUPPORTS the abdomen and the important vital organs.
It brings RELIEF from aches and pains, and greater COMFORT than any other corset. PREVENTS and helps to CURE the ills peculiar to women. REDUCES the SIZE and lessens the WEIGHT of the body and still it CREATES and maintains an up-to-date, FASHIONABLE FIGURE. We ask you to let us fit you, whether you wish to purchase just now or not, so that you can see for yourself the difference. Ask your physician also to see the "Nemo Wonderlift" corset, if he has not already done so. For the fitting service no extra charge is made here, at $5

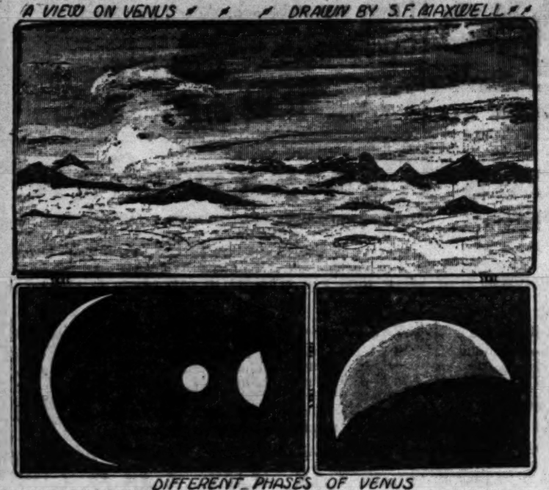
A VIEW ON VENUS — DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL



DIFFERENT PHASES OF VENUS

VENUS.

VENUS in its course about the sun has been eastward bound. It will continue easterly until June 12. Then it will begin its retrograde movement, and during the month it will become invisible.

In consequence of this eastward movement the planet is now blazing in the western heavens in the early evening as a beautiful and fascinating spectacle. Persons to whom the stars and planets are as unidentified as the weeds in a field have been looking at this moonlike blaze of glory and wondering what super star had appeared. It is merely the most luminous of the sun's family speeding in its course around the sun and showing itself to particular advantage to the earth.

Venus and Mercury are interior planets. That is, they run their course inside the orbit of the earth. The revolution the earth makes about the sun is outside the paths which Venus and Mercury travel. Mercury, being nearest to the sun. Venus is far enough away to show to best advantage her luminous phases. Proximity to the sun and proximity to the earth are such that the best display of the sun's light upon the surface of the planet can be obtained.

Venus is far enough from the sun to be visible three hours after sunset, and also sufficiently distant to be out of the atmospheric vapors of the horizon. Venus never is more than half way between the horizon and the zenith and never can be mistaken for any other planet or for any star.

When a planet is going from east to west it is passing from the evening to the morning sky, just as Venus is doing now. When an interior planet goes from east to west, from the evening to the morning sky, it passes between us and the sun.

When a planet is in direct line with the earth and the sun it is in conjunction. When it is on the other side of the sun it is in superior conjunction. When it is on our side of the sun it is in inferior conjunction.

When it is between the earth and the sun we cannot see it. When it is on the other side of the sun its full face is exposed to the sun's rays and it blazes in the sky. About six weeks after Venus has passed the point in line with the earth opposite the sun she begins to show in the evening sky. At she comes eastward she shows later in the evening and brighter to the vision, more wonderfully each night.

She appears higher in the sky and night after night grows more luminous and larger until in about six months after she has rounded the sun she can defy even the moon to eclipse her beauty.

Venus now is nearing the point in this eastward travel when her course will take her back toward the west and she will become invisible until she has reached that point in her orbit which will reveal her as the morning star as wonderful before the break of day as she is now in the early dark.

By watching this fascinating spectacle of Venus one can see with imaginative plainness the sweep of a planet through space around the sun.

Venus will not again be in the evening sky until the fall of 1917 and the succeeding winter.

"What is your name?"

"Tony Cirofici Gonazeles Parique Pasquale Boots."

"Too long. I call you Tony Boots. Now answer these questions: What did your father do?"

"He was a shoemaker."

"After he was married to your mother you had all the shoes you wanted."

"No, only boots."

"When you left the old country, how did you come—first or second class?"

"I came sewerage."

"How many years have you?"

"Two."

"No, I didn't mean cars to hear with—how old are you?"

"O, 50."

"How tall are you?"

"Half past five."

"You mean 5 feet 6 inches."

"Yes, yes; that's it."

"Very well, Toney Boots, I get you fine job."

"Do you know Mr. Hook?"

"Hook and I are old associates."

"Do you know anything about music?"

"You can't fool me on music; I know every bar from the Battery to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street."

"Say, Jim, what was the Delaware river a hundred years ago?"

"Go 'long, you fool; it was a river, of course."

"No, it wasn't; it was a bottle of ink."

"How do you make that out?"

"Because it was no good till there was a Penn in it."

DIAGONAL layers of cords placed loosely side by side, without cross-weave—each cord, each layer imbedded in springy, live rubber.

Extreme flexibility, resilience and responsiveness in the tire; great oversize, with increased volume and cushion of air.

Such is the Goodyear Cord—the tire of utmost comfort, and of utmost protection from stone-bruise and blow-out.

Judged by increasing sales, these advantages are worth more to Goodyear Cord users than the price-difference which they pay for the tires.

Goodyear No-Hook Cord Tires are fortified against:—

Rim-cutting—By our No-Rim-Cut feature.

Blow-outs—By our On-air Cure.

Loose Treads—By our Rubber Rivets.

Puncture and Skidding—By our Double-Thick All-Weather and Ribbed Treads.

Insecurity—By our Multiple Braided Piano Wire Base.

WHERE SHALL WE DRIVE TODAY?

LAKE GENEVA AND RETURN.
(Data Furnished by the Automobile Blue Book Touring Bureau.)

WITH a holiday on Tuesday, many persons will be able to get away from work tomorrow and be able to make a three day trip starting today. No section within reach of Chicagoans offers greater possibilities for short tours than northern Illinois and southeastern Wisconsin, with its many lakes and numerous resorts.

The trip outlined below is, with one short exception, all gravel or macadam in fair to good shape. The exception is a short stretch of dirt between McHenry and Half Day. This, however, is in fair shape except in wet weather, when it is sure to be slippery and rutted up. In the last week we have not had much rain and roads are becoming quite settled, and it will take a heavy rainfall to put the roads in bad shape.

Although, of course, we have not the type of roads that are best fitted for motor travel, and gravel and poor macadam will show the effects of heavy travel quickly, it is hoped with the improvements now under way the conditions in this section will be materially improved in the next year.

Those who have time should make the circuit trip of the lake, and if staying at Lake Geneva or any one of the numerous hotels around the lake, abundant opportunity is afforded of making short trips to Delavan and Elkhorn.

On the return trip, it is suggested to follow the well-known route through Genoa, Richmond, and McHenry. There are others, but this as a whole offers, particularly to those who have not made this trip often, the most attractive features. Leaving Lake Geneva you go out the same way as entering, following along lake shore drive for a short distance, then turning up the hill. In the middle of hill, instead of turning right, keep ahead to end of street, where jog right and left, going straight out on McHenry road. This is direct into Genoa Junction, where turn to the left is made around hotel, going under railroad to end of road, then right, follow direct road here straight through Richmond, direct to western edge of McHenry, where at large church turn left straight through McHenry, crossing bridge over Fox river.

Go straight through Volo to fork on eastern edge of town, left handroad is direct to Gray's Lake and Waukegan, and in wet weather this can be used to advantage, but if weather is dry, take the right fork, following main travel through Ivanhoe, past Diamond lake on south side, into Half Day.

Here those who may desire can go into the city in Milwaukee avenue, but parts of this are liable to be closed now, and it is advisable to go east from Half Day to Highway, then into Highland Park. Follow the Green Bay road, which goes south from the fire station in Highland Park, direct into Glencoe, through Hubbard Woods and Winnetka, to Kenilworth, where it is best to leave Kenilworth on the south side of town, going out Chestnut street to Sheridan road, which is followed the rest of the way into the city.

The Twelve Overshadows All Other Automobile Achievements

ITS popularity was not instantaneous. The public mind had been confused by conflicting multi-cylinder claims. But the atmosphere is now clarified. Little by little, however, it began to dawn on car owners that the Twelve was not a change brought about for sales impetus, but was the ultimate and basically correct answer to all multi-cylinder problems.

By leaps and bounds the good news spread across the country until today the demand is universal because the Twelve is the best thing on wheels.

National HIGHWAY 12

National Twelves are in daily service in every state in the Union.

Of all the better grade cars (over $1700) sold this year, more than 70% are of the multiple cylinder (V motor) type. National designed and builds its own Twelve-cylinder motors. Soon, motor or parts makers will be turning out twelve-cylinder engines by the tens of thousands, engines patterned after the Twelve pioneers.

Eventually, you won't think of anything but the Twelve—but why wait? Why not have the most up-to-date and most efficient car today? Don't put it off until the market is flooded with imitators of all kinds.

Get acquainted with the National Twelve today. You're cheating yourself every day you put it off. You simply can't beat it, and it is America's best looking car.

Values-Service

That Count Big With Every Experienced Truck User

MANY years of the hardest kind of service—in every line of transportation—have shown the stuff Velie Trucks are made of—the enormous service they are capable of. And back of all this is the Velie prestige which experienced owners know. Half a century of manufacturing experience and the untarnished reputation of one of the most substantial organizations in America. This spells Responsibility, Satisfaction, Economy, and accounts for the good name of the Velie everywhere. It explains why a great factory has to be devoted entirely to the production of Velie Trucks.

Questions and Answers as to Routes and Motoring Problems.

By High Speed

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

I would like to have you inform me through your column as to the best route between Chicago and Washington for a trip to be made the latter part of June. Kindly state distances between principal cities. A. H. PORT, Chicago.

There are several routes, but we would recommend the one through South Chicago, Hammond, Valparaiso, La Porte, South Bend, 101 miles; Plymouth, Warsaw, Columbia City, Fort Wayne, 169.1 miles; Lima, 65.4 miles; Galion, Mansfield, Canton, 159.3 miles; Cadiz, Wheeling, 92.3 miles; Washington [Pa.], Uniontown, 68 miles; Cumberland, 82.6 miles; Hagerstown, 65 miles; Frederick, Washington [D. C.], 77.6 miles. If you prefer to do so you might go from Canton through Louisville and Alliance to Pittsburgh, 102.4 miles; Bedford, 96.9 miles; Gettysburg, 80.1 miles; Frederick, Washington, 83.5 miles.

Will you kindly publish as soon as possible the best route from Chicago to Fargo, N. D., together with intermediate mileages? D. B. MURRAY, Chicago.

Go through Oak Park, Maywood, Elgin, Algonquin, Crystal Lake, Walworth, Janesville, Edgerton, Stoughton, Madison, 152 miles; Pleasant Branch, Prairie du Sac, Baraboo, Reedsburg, Elroy, Portland, La Crosse, 145.6 miles; La Crescent, Winona, Eyota, Rochester, St. Paul, Minneapolis, 162.1 miles; Robbinsdale, Anoka, St. Cloud, Sauk Center, Alexandria, 141.2 miles; Garfield, Fergus Falls, Moorehead, Fargo, 123.4 miles. This route follows the National Parks Transcontinental highway.

Will you kindly print in your Sunday automobile section the most advisable route from Freeport, Ill., to Winona, Minn., together with the distance? Also state whether you consider it best to go up through Wisconsin, by way of Madison, or by way of Dubuque and northeastern Iowa. What is your opinion as to the comparative merits of the two routes? Which would be the better for a trip to be made about July 1?

S. M. VANCE, Freeport, Ill.

I would recommend the route via Madison, which is on the National Parks Transcontinental highway and which passes through Winona. The Iowa roads are good, but as most of them are dirt they might prove troublesome in wet weather. If the weather remains good, all roads should be in a satisfactory condition by July 1. From Freeport go through Monroe and Evansville to Madison, 73.6 miles. Here you will pick up the Transcontinental highway, passing through Pleasant Branch, Prairie Du Sac, Baraboo, Reedsburg, Elroy, Portland, La Crosse, 145.6 miles; La Crescent and Witoka to Winona, 34.1 miles.

Kindly publish the best automobile route from Chicago to Bloomington, Ill., and also advise me where I can procure the best road guide. E. A. ANDERSON, Chicago.

There are two good routes, one by way of Joliet and the other by way of Ottawa. The latter has the advantage by reason of the fact that it takes one over the Starved Rock trail, with points of scenic and historic interest. Leave Chicago over Jackson and Washington boulevards. At Washington boulevard and Marengo avenue follow poles marked with white and yellow bands and the words "Ottawa-Starved Rock trail." This takes you through Naperville, Aurora, Bristol, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, Wedron, Sulphur Lick Springs, and Ottawa, 89.7 miles. From Ottawa go through Streator, Gridley, Towanda, and Normal to Bloomington, 66.6 miles. A slightly shorter way to go would be through Lockport Joliet, Minooka, Morris, Dwight, Pontiac, Lexington, and Normal, to Bloomington, 149.5 miles.

Will you please furnish me with the best route to take in going from Peoria, Ill., to Cambria, Wis.? What is the distance? J. F. SLOCUM, Peoria, Ill.

Go through Princeton to Dixon, 101.8 miles; then through Rockford, 42.4 miles; Beloit, Janesville, Madison, 79.7 miles; Portage, 35.7 miles, to Cambria, 19.7 miles.

What route would you recommend for a motor car trip from Chicago to Dubuque, Ia.? J. E. DIETZ, Chicago.

Go through Elmhurst, Lombard, North Glen Ellyn, Geneva, De Kalb, Rochelle, Dixon, Clinton, Maquoketa, Fulton, and La Motte to Dubuque, 218.2 miles. A shorter route, but not as good, goes through Rockford and Freeport.

Will you kindly publish the best automobile route from Keokuk, Ia., to Niles, Mich.? I do not want to go through Chicago. G. E. F., Keokuk, Ia.

Go to Fort Madison, 23.4 miles, and then through La Harpe, Bushnell, Farmington, and Peoria, 101.8 miles; Bloomington, 44.1 miles; La Fayette, 118.1 miles; Delphi and Logansport, 46.4 miles; South Bend and Niles, 66 miles.

In going by automobile from Chicago to Pittsburgh, would you advise going to Cleveland first, by way of South Bend, Bryan, Fremont, etc., or to Indianapolis and from there east? J. N. ALKINS, Chicago.

There are three routes, all of which are good. The shortest is by way of South Bend, 101 miles; Toledo, 165.6 miles; Cleveland, 120 miles; Ravenna, Pittsburgh, 146.4 miles, or a total distance of 533 miles. Another is by way of South Bend, 101 miles; Goshen, Ligonier, Fort Wayne, 82 miles; Lima, 65.4 miles; Galion, Canton, 159.3 miles; Steubenville, 60.8 miles; Pittsburgh, 101.8 miles; a total distance of 570.3 miles. The third goes by way of Indianapolis, 204.5 miles; Dayton, 106.8 miles; Columbus, 67.8 miles; Wheeling, 135.3 miles, to Pittsburgh, 60 miles, a total distance of 574.4 miles. Take your choice.

I have been reading your page with a great deal of interest, especially the tours which you have outlined. Will you please outline the best automobile route for June from Chicago to Canton, O., and from Canton to Binghamton, N. Y.? Would it be better to take the route you recently outlined from Chicago to Albany, detouring from Cleveland to Canton, or to go to Buffalo and from there over the trunk line state road that runs to New York?

H. C. DENNY, Racine, Wis.

I would advise you to take the Cleveland route, going to Canton through Akron, a distance of 56.9 miles. From there I would go to Pittsburgh, although it would be a few miles out of your way. The distance from Canton to Pittsburgh is 102.4 miles and the roads will be found good. From there go through Warren to Jamestown, 167.8 miles; Salamanaca, Olean, Hornell, 120.4 miles; Elmira, 61.8 miles. Buffalo is seventy-four miles north of Buffalo is seventy-four miles north of Jamestown. Unless you have some reason for going to Buffalo, would it not be rather far off your route?

Please publish in your column the best and shortest route from Toledo, O., to Worcester, Mass., together with the distances between the principal places.

M. J. HENDERSON, Toledo, O.

The best route is by way of Cleveland, 120.1 miles; Erie, 102 miles; Buffalo, 89.2 miles; Syracuse, 154.3 miles; Utica, 49.7 miles; Albany, 94.6 miles; Pittsfield, 36.7 miles; Springfield, 56 miles; Worcester, 51.1 miles.

Will you please publish the best route for a bicycle trip from Peoria, Ill., to Danville, Ill.? I. S., Peoria, Ill.

The first section of the route would be over good graded dirt road through East Peoria, Groveland, Allentown, and Mackinaw to Bloomington, 44.1 miles. From Bloomington go through Downs, Le Roy, Farmer City, and Mahomet to Champaign, 51.3 miles, over natural dirt roads. From Champaign go through Urbana, Monier, and Catlin to Danville, 39.4 miles. This part of the route is over fine gravel roads, with the exception of one or two short stretches just before reaching Danville, a dry weather your trip should prove an easy or pleasant one, but do not attempt it after a heavy rain, as the mud would be sure to cause you trouble.

Will you please furnish me with the best route for a bicycle trip from Chicago to Madison, Wis.? AL. LORS, Chicago.

Go through Oak Park, Maywood, Algonquin, Crystal Lake, Ridgefield, Woodstock, Harvard, Walworth, Fairfield, Emerald Grove, Janesville, Edgerton, Stoughton, and Madison to Madison, 152 miles. I would not advise you to make this trip for a week or so as recent rains have put the roads in bad condition.

Read What Chicago Ford Owners Say:

After 2 Months' Use Says "Absolutely Satisfactory"
The Sandbo will not give you the trouble of electric or air starters. I have used both of them. Its price is so small that no one can afford to take the danger of a broken arm. Another advantage, you do not let your car idle while you are talking to someone and burn up gas at 23 cents a gallon, when you can shut off from the seat and start it from the seat.
MRS. KITTY O'CONNOR, Saleslady.

Equal to Electric Starter
Am well satisfied with the Sandbo. Would not do without it. It is as good as an electric starter.

Makes Starting Easy in All Weather
Can recommend it as doing all you claim and more. I would not be without one and it makes starting easy in all kinds of weather.

Nine Months' Use Makes Skeptic Enthusiastic
When you put the Sandbo on my new Ford, I was a little doubtful of results. After driving for 9 months with it on, would not part with it for any price if I could not get another. My ten-year-old boy can start it first shot.
L. J. WALLER.

Always in Working Order
I have seen the air Starters and electric Starters which give out in a very short time and you have to go back to the crank. This Starter is always in working order and I would not be without it for ten times its value.

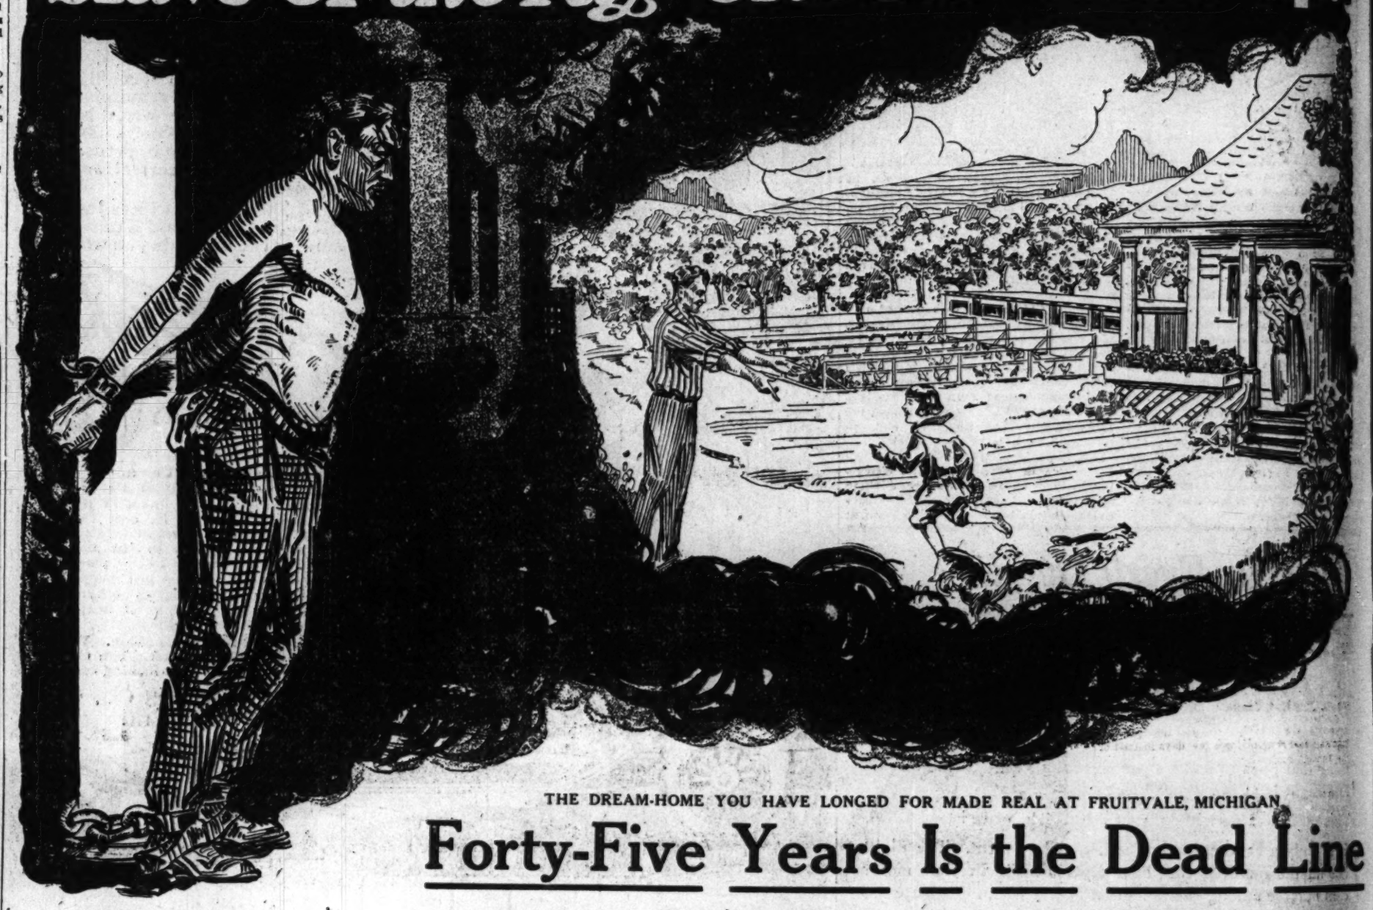
Slave of the Pay Check-Wake Up!



THE DREAM-HOME YOU HAVE LONGED FOR MADE REAL AT FRUITVALE, MICHIGAN

Forty-Five Years Is the Dead Line

Chained to your job you will never be free. We will show you the way to win freedom, a comfortable home, with an income for life, at Fruitvale.

A Message to You Have you thought about the FUTURE? What are you going to do when the pay check fails you? How are you going to live? How are you going to pay the landlord, the butcher, the grocer, the doctor, and all the others whose hands clutch at your few dollars? How are you going to care for your dear ones?

These are important things that you should think seriously about. The deadline for most men is 45. After that, unless you have a business of your own or a dependable income, you will probably become a charge on your own children, relatives, friends, or the public purse. A terrible thought, but it is TRUE.

Let us tell you how hundreds of men and women are solving the problem of the FUTURE at FRUITVALE, Mich., on our Garden Tracts. Fruitvale is in the heart of the Michigan fruit belt. Fruit, vegetables and chickens thrive there and, properly worked under the direction of our experts, pay big returns while you are living as God planned men and women should live, close to nature—not in dirty, ill-smelling cities.

We Safeguard You Against Failure at Fruitvale

WHY? Because the Fruitvale Company has done everything that human skill, ingenuity, science and enterprise can do to safeguard against possible failure. Everything raised at Fruitvale is SOLD BEFORE YOU RAISE IT. The Fruitvale Company will take your produce as fast as you raise it and pay SPOT CASH FOR IT ON DELIVERY.

We have done ALL THE EXPERIMENTING. We can plant your tract with the right kind of trees, grown in our nurseries, to insure you the biggest returns. We can stock your tract with the breed of chickens that bring the TOP PRICES in the Chicago market—the kind that lay most eggs and give bigger and better meat value. If you desire it, you can have your tract cleared, fenced, developed, planted, your home and outhouses built for you so that you can step from your job right on to a property ready to pay an income.

Fruitvale is ideal as a home, for its climate, for its soil conditions. It is only a night's ride from Chicago and Milwaukee by boat, the cheapest and best transportation. What you raise and pick today is on Chicago tables tomorrow. Concerns like L. G. Kunze, Hotel Sherman, the Mid-Day Club, the Morrison Hotel, etc., as well as many private families, pay TOP PRICES for everything we raise at Fruitvale.

Study These Photographs of Fruitvale Tracts

We Have Invested Thousands of Dollars to Insure Your Success at Fruitvale

We have spent thousands of dollars to develop this wonderful property and to guarantee against failure. Our chicken hatchery alone cost $30,000. Fruitvale to-day offers a better and greater opportunity than Florida or California for people who want small, beautiful homes amid gardens, trees and flowers, with an income-producing business. The climate at Fruitvale is more desirable because more varied. And California or Florida are DAYS from the market—we are only a few hours. What is raised in California or Florida is half wasted and the freight charges eat up what the commission men allow you. At Fruitvale we eliminate the commission men. We sell direct to the best hotels, fancy grocers, restaurants, cafes and private homes. We can't raise enough stuff to satisfy our many customers. And for everything we get TOP PRICES.

Don't take our word for it. MAKE US PROVE IT TO YOU. Come and see our moving pictures of Fruitvale—the crops we raise, the chickens we breed, the people who will be your neighbors. We offer you the maximum of safety and the minimum of risk. Ten acres at Fruitvale, properly worked, will not only support a family in splendid style—better than most people live in Chicago—but they will also pay a good, assured income. And you will like Fruitvale. The country is beautiful—a pretty, rolling land, with clear lakes and streams, lovely woods and myriads of flowers everywhere. Send TO-DAY for our illustrated booklet and full particulars. You can buy a Fruitvale Garden Tract for what you spend foolishly every day. Just a little each month. You'll be delighted to have lifted this weight of uncertainty and doubt from your mind. You will sleep better and enjoy life better when the specter of want is not beside you every day. Make yourself and your family happy, free from worry. DO IT TO-DAY. MAIL THE COUPON NOW!

Conducted by J. C. Burton

How are the roads?

INTEREST in road conditions centers this week in the highways that lead to Indianapolis, where the sixth annual international sweepstakes will be run on Tuesday.

According to the reports of the Blue Book scouts, the Terre Haute-Indianapolis route, via Brazil, Reelsville, Plainfield, and Bridgeport, is fairly good, with a rough stretch between Terre Haute and Brazil. There is a bridge out at Plainfield and also between Stilesville and Bellerville, but detours are short and over fair roads. The bridges will be rebuilt soon.

Chicago motorists going to Indianapolis via South Bend can take advantage of a new detour on this route. At the Bootjack keep ahead to four corners, where turn left, taking first right on Hudson Lake road. Go down grade under the railroad to Hudson lake, cross the first trolley, and immediately turn right. Do not pass hotel. Follow along trolley about half a mile to first right hand road, where turn right, recrossing trolley and railroad, going up slight grade, go about half a mile, meeting regular route again at cemetery, where turn left straight into New Carlisle. Keep ahead through New Carlisle, coming to new concrete, going nearly four miles beyond to where road is blocked, here turn right, go straight south about 2.6 miles to four corners with small saloon on southeast corner, here turn left on what is known as Division Street road, going straight into South Bend, 9.4 miles to Main street, where a turn to the left is made to courthouse.

Route conditions in other sections are as follows:

ILLINOIS.

Chicago-Milwaukee—On the shore, the bridges are out at Fort Sheridan and Highland Park.

Springfield-Hannibal, Mo.—This route, via Jacksonville and Valley City, is in fair condition, but the Illinois river cannot be crossed at present. It is better to go via Litchfield and Edwardsville and via Marblehead and Shepherd to Quincy and Hannibal, although the latter route is rough from Camp Point to Quincy.

Quincy-Keokuk—This route, via Urna, is fair, although rough in some places.

Effingham—Reports indicate that the Egyptian trail and Old National to Terre Haute, St. Louis, and Mattoon have been dragged and are in good condition.

IOWA.

Iowa City—Recent rains have made all roads slippery in this vicinity, but as soon as they dry, the Red Ball, the River-to-River, the C. K. & G. and Red Cross routes will be in fine shape. At present there are no detours.

Des Moines—Roads in this section are in only fair condition, due to unsettled weather. Dry weather will help materially.

Ottumwa-Chillicothe—The route via Centerville, Princeton, and Trenton is the best between these points.

Omaha-Des Moines—The White Pole and River-to-River roads are generally good, although some stretches are in need of dragging.

Omaha-St. Joseph—The route via Glenwood and Tarkio is good to Shenandoah and fair to good from there to St. Joseph.

NEBRASKA.

Omaha-Lincoln—The route via Ashland is muddy from recent rains but is drying rapidly.

Omaha-Grand Island—Owing to recent rains motorists are advised to use the military highway to Fremont for a few days instead of the Lincoln highway.

OHIO.

Dayton-Indianapolis—This route, via Richmond, is closed between Eaton and Richmond for repairs.

Toledo-Cleveland—This main artery, via Fremont, Norwalk, Oberlin, and Elyria is open and in excellent shape; in fact, the best it has been for years to Belleview. From Belleview to Monroeville the old macadam is being resurfaced and it is advisable to keep straight ahead in Main street in Belleview, follow good macadam, avoiding all left hand forks, going about 6½ to 7 miles to four corners with school and church on right hand corner—small village to North Monroeville, here turn right around school, going straight into Monroeville, picking up regular route in Monroeville.

Between Wakeman and Tipton a short stretch is closed for repairs, so that it is advisable to keep straight ahead at mileage 73.5, going about 2½ miles to second four corners, where turn left about a mile to concrete and then right on regular route again.

Regular route from Oberlin to Elyria is closed part way, so that it is advisable to go north in Main street a little over three miles to four corners with brick school on northeast corner, here turn right for about a mile and one-half of dirt, here pick up macadam again, follow direct road into Elyria, where regular route is picked up and followed all the way into Cleveland.

Main road from Norwalk to Sandusky is closed.

Chillicothe—All routes in good condition with no important detours at present.

WISCONSIN.

Lake Geneva—All roads within a radius of twenty-five miles are reported in good condition.

Fond du Lac-Milwaukee—The route via Theresa is being worked over between Fond du Lac and Byron, a distance of about eight miles.

Fond du Lac-Milwaukee—On this route, via West Bend and Cedarburg, there is a motorcycle speed trap south of Thiensville. On the same route, between Fond du Lac and Campbellsport and between Thiensville and Cedarburg, the road is being put in first class shape.

Oshkosh-Green Bay—On the route via Kaukauna and Appleton considerable concrete is to be laid between Oshkosh and Neenah during the summer.

Fond du Lac-Lake Geneva—On the route via Oconomowoc and Elkhorn there is road construction work under way in the town of Ashippum.

Harvard, Ill.-Waupum—This route, via Delavan, Fort Atkinson, and Watertown, is under construction from Juneau to Oak Grove.

Fond du Lac-Green Lake—On this route construction work is being done between Ripon and Green Lake that will be completed about June 15.

Fond du Lac-Oshkosh—The Inland route, via Van Dyne, is being oiled.

NO. 7—TOM ALLEY, OGREN.

SHOULD Tom Alley win the 300 mile race at Indianapolis on Tuesday, the automobile racing fans of Chicago will regard his victory as a native son triumph and boast accordingly, and not without some justification.

Chicago's claim to Tom Alley as her own is based on the following facts:

Although he is a Hoosier, being born in Indianapolis, Alley now makes Chicago his home. Ralph De Palma four years ago rescued him from the obscurity of Jack Banta's Locomobile agency in Michigan avenue and gave him his first opportunity to court fame as a mechanician on the Mercedes with which the Italian took the Elgin National trophy, the Elgin free for all, and the Vanderbilt cup, in 1912. As an additional tie to Chicago, Alley is campaigning the Ogren, which was designed and built in this city.

So if Tom Alley isn't a Chicagoan, then George Cohan, who hailed originally from Providence, isn't a New Yorker.

At Indianapolis on Tuesday Alley starts his third year as a race driver, although he has been identified with gasoline scented competition since 1912. His first season he pumped oil on the Mercedes for Ralph de Palma and sustained serious injuries when the Italian's car turned over on the last lap of the grand prize. The following year, when De Palma was made captain of the Mercer team, he took Alley with him, but Tom did not ride as mechanician, making himself useful as a garage mechanic and pit attendant.

Alley became identified with the Duesenberg team in 1914 and drove his first race at Sioux City on July 4 when he led the field for the first 120 miles, but was forced to surrender his car to Ralph Mulford after being badly burned in taking on gasoline. He was an also ran in the Elgin trophy and C. A. A. cup events at the Watch City, and failed to finish inside the money in the Corona grand prize.

The season of 1914 was not without a victory for Alley, however, as he won the 100 mile dirt track race at Minneapolis from a talented field and established a new American record for the distance of 1:31:30.

At the opening of last season Alley was a member of the Duesenberg team. He finished third in the San Diego road race, but was eliminated in the Vanderbilt cup and grand prize classics. With the Duesenberg in the early speedway campaign he took eighth money at Indianapolis, ninth money at Chicago, and third money at Sioux City, and after failing to annex a piece of the purse at Omaha switched his allegiance to the Ogren.

His first two races with the Ogren paid no dividends, as he was outside the money in the Des Moines speedway event and the C. A. C. cup contest at Elgin, but he closed the season by taking fourth place in the 500 mile inaugural at the Twin Cities and duplicating that achievement in the battle for the Vincent Astor cup at Sheepshead bay.

Alley's prize winnings last season totaled about $14,000 and he ranks seventh among the affluent ten whose earnings on the speedways amounted to $10,000 or more for the year.

Following the fashionable trend, the new Locomobiles now on exhibition at the local branch are lower in height and appear longer. This desirable lowness, which gives the car a stylish look and its users a convenient step height, has been brought about by new springing. The new Locomobile has the most convenient step and body height of any big car using equally large tires. In order to carry this impression of length and style all through the car many of the body units have been modified. By lowering the cowl a straight bonnet line has been produced which harmonizes with the long, straight lines of running board and body.

An eight cylinder King now holds what is said to be the most grueling high gear test to which a motor car has ever been subjected by negotiating almost impassable highways from Los Angeles to San Francisco and return, using a stock car with a stock gear ratio. Leaving Los Angeles with A. G. Woodill at the wheel and F. C. Jordan Jr. of the Automobile Club of Southern California as official observer, this car started northward over the coast road, negotiating detours, muddy roads in the Gaviotta pass and Ceusta grades, and plowed its way into San Francisco with the shifting lever removed and the high gear sealed. Then, to show that the same car could be driven back to Los Angeles on the high gear, Woodill and Jordan returned to southern California over the inland route.

Exhaust Echoes by J. C. Burton

"Care with V type motors now have a big lead in this year's race for sales," said George M. Dickson, managing director of the factory building National twelve cylinder cars. "Of all the large and better grade cars sold this year more than 70 per cent are of the multiple cylinder type. Although this statement is conclusive, it does not detract from the successful operation and sales of the smaller and lower priced cars. It does mean, however, that among the larger and better grade cars the V type of motor now dominates."

Artemas Ward Jr., president of the King Motor Car company, Detroit, has been selected as a member of the national committee of the American Defense society. He has accepted the portfolio. The society has for its purpose to aid in an aggressive propaganda in various states for creating yearly instruction for defensive purposes only. The organization is absolutely unbiased politically. The advisory board consists of Charles J. Bonaparte, Truman H. Newberry, Henry B. Joy, Theodore Roosevelt, Perry Belmont, and David Jayne Hill.

3—The 219,000-Mile Car
4—The 26 Extra Features

It would be a vast mistake to decide on a fine car before knowing this Mid-Year Mitchell.

Other cars in this class have their friends, of course. Each has certain claims. But the New Mitchell typifies a big thing in car building. It is, we believe, the biggest thing to consider. That is, engineering and factory efficiency as applied by John W. Bate.

And we can prove to you—at this showroom—that many noted engineers consider that Mitchell is the car that must dominate.

The Mid-Year Mitchell—the 17th model built by John W. Bate—will appeal to the man who believes in efficiency. It is the finest example of scientific car building to be found among high grade cars.

See the New Ideas

We have an exceptional model to tempt you here just now. It embodies 73 new conceptions. It has 26 extra features, unique to the Mitchell—each something you will want.

It combines in one car all the best ideas brought out in 257 New York Show models. And the touring car design is the one that was voted the handsomest of the year.

We have all of these interesting things to attract you. No other one car has more than a few of them. But you will learn here facts of far greater importance.

What Cars Must Be

This concern is 82 years old. It is 13 years old as a motor car builder. It is too old and too wise to aim at transient success.

We have built slowly but soundly. Years ago we brought John W. Bate, the efficiency engineer, to this factory. And we gave him free rein. Under his direction we have invested $5,000,000 in the model automobile plant.

He has reduced factory costs about half in six years. In the Mitchell of today he gives 20 per cent better value than the nearest rival car, we believe. This is shown in the car, in its price, in our extras.

700 Improvements

In the car itself Mr. Bate and his experts have devised over 700 improvements. He has almost rid it of castings, heavy and brittle. There are 440 parts in the Mitchell which are drop forged or steel stamped.

Part by part he has made the Mitchell as fine as it can be, as stanch, as light, as enduring.

We know of one Mitchell car—a Bate design—which has run 218,734 miles. We know of six Mitchell cars which have averaged 164,372 miles each—over 30 years of ordinary service. The records of Motordom show no comparable service.

We say that cars of the future—cars that live—must follow these lines of efficiency.

Bring the Ladies

The beauty of this car will amaze them. They'll delight in the novel conveniences. By a ride they will get a new idea of comfort, due to Bate cantilever springs.

Men or women, laymen or experts, will find in this Mitchell some scores of appeals which other cars don't offer. For your own sake come and see them.

Stewart Vacuum System

More Miles Per Gallon

Put a Stewart Vacuum System on your car and it will give you power and mileage from that 10% to 20% of your gas you are now wasting.

The old pressure system requires tiresome hand pumping every time you start your car; constant inspection of pump, pipe lines, air gauge, and tank in futile attempts to keep air leaks out.

Even more serious now-a-days with gas prices soaring up is its forced pressure of gas through the carburetor causing a wastage of from 10% to 20%.

The gravity system is archaic. Every time that your carburetor is higher than your gas tank your engine goes dead.

With a Stewart Vacuum System on your car you are always sure of an even, positive flow of gasoline to your carburetor under all conditions.

Over 60% of all automobile manufacturers use the Stewart Vacuum System.

If you are going to drive your present car this season bring it up to date by installing a Stewart Vacuum System.

It can be put on any car now in use. Price only $10 complete.

In buying a new car get the convenience, pleasure, safety and low upkeep cost obtainable only in cars equipped with Stewart Products. Insist on a Stewart Speedometer, Stewart Tire Pump, Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Vacuum System. They will cost you nothing extra.

Exhaust Echoes

Conquering two of the most famous mountain peaks in the country, the Chalmers six-30 has added fresh laurels to its mountain climbing reputation by ascending Ensign peak in Utah and Mount Diablo near Oakland, Cal. Fred Junk a driver for C. A. Quigley, Chalmers distributer in Salt Lake City, piloted the car on its journey. Starting at 5 a. m., the car reached the summit at 10:10, after a battle with steep grades that has probably never been equaled in a test of this kind.

South America is to be an immense trade field not only for the automobile world but for other lines, according to reports which have been received by Thomas J. Hay, Hupmobile distributer, 2519 Michigan avenue. Furthermore, the South American people are keen for motor events and are willing to spend any amount of money to be given clean sport in that direction. "I get this news from our representative, Mr. Steenstrup, who has been in Chile, Peru, Argentine, Brasil, and the West Indies in the interest of the Hupmobile company," said Mr. Hay. "He found all classes of people demanding American made automobiles, with hundreds already in use."

The first motor demonstration field ever offered by any exposition was opened at the Panama-California International exposition at San Diego May 20. From the opening day until the close of the exposition, Dec. 31, special automobile events will be held on the exposition grounds, participated in by all Americans represented. At the present time forty-five cars have been granted space on the exposition field.

Addressing 600 members of the Chalmers Men's club, Hugh Chalmers offered to pay full salaries of the first fifty employés of the company to enroll for the summer training camps held under the auspices of the United States government at Plattsburg and Fort Benjamin Harrivon. "Eventually I would like to have every man on our pay roll undergo this course of military training," said Mr. Chalmers in announcing his offer. "Until we can place a plan in effect, however, whereby our factory routine will not be disorganized, we will have to limit the number of those attending this year's camps."

A device to increase gasoline mileage, the Delta auxiliary carburetor, is the result of the inventor's curiosity regarding the improved action of the motor of his old one cylinder car at night and in rainy weather. He first experimented with a rubber tube running from the radiator overflow pipe to the hot air pipe in front of the carburetor. This produced good results, but frequently water entered the carburetor and caused trouble. He next perfected a device to reject the water and adopted a compression connection for the overflow pipe and a steel hose with asbestos packing, which was not affected by heat or oil, to carry the vapor to the carburetor. Developing this device, he finally perfected it, working on the theory that the moisture that does not mix with gasoline forms a film between the atoms of fuel and prevents condensation and loss of power.

"Automobile manufacturers as a rule have been slow to realize that the women of a family buy the car in an ever increasing number of cases," says W. E. Stalnaker, vice president and director of sales of the Pathfinder company. "I attribute the remarkable increase in the sales of the Pathfinder models of each year to the fact that we recognize this idea of the woman buyer."

The Goodyear tire saver kit, a newcomer in the accessories field, has been so enthusiastically received, since its announcement several weeks ago, that Goodyear's accessory department is already taxed beyond its capacity to supply the demand for it. Tire putty for tread cuts, self-cure patches for patching inner tubes without the use of cement, friction repair tape to combat faulty insulation of wires, French talc to prevent friction between casing and tube, blowout patches, both inner and outer, and an Invincible tire pressure gauge to insure proper inflation of tires, are all found in the new Goodyear kit. They come in three sizes—for 3 and 3½ inch, 4 and 4½ inch, and 5 and 5½ inch tires.

H. S. French of Muskegon, Mich., has just reached his home after a trip from Miami, Fla. Mr. French and his family made the long journey in a leisurely fashion in a Dodge Bros. motor car. The important part of the story is the clever way in which Mr. French used his car as a home for the tourists and not only enjoyed the open but did away with the expense of stopping at hotels. Before starting on the trip a cooking outfit and table utensils of aluminium were purchased and a suitcase arranged for carrying this equipment in the easiest manner. The back of the front seat of the car was hinged and a large canvas cover for the car was purchased. During the trip the party cooked most of its meals in the open and practically every night was spent in the car. By letting down the hinged back of the front seat a comfortable bed was secured and the canvas cover, which reached the ground all around the car, protected the party from the elements.

The latest Maxwell feat is the climbing of Mount Chamarel on Mauritius island in the Indian ocean. Three Maxwell cars made the difficult trip. The road zigzags in a series of sharp curves at angles of about 38 degrees, and the car must get up speed after slowing down to a foot pace to make the curves, which have to be taken with great care.

President C. W. Nash of the General Motors company has announced the appointment of E. T. Strong as general sales manager of the Buick Motor company, as successor to R. H. Collins, who resigned recently. Mr. Strong goes to his new position from the management of the Chicago branch of the Buick Motor company.

The Lozier Motor company of Detroit has opened a branch office at 1462 Michigan avenue, where a complete stock of parts for all models will be kept in order to extend service to the Lozier owners of the middle territory.

The World's Unbeatable Wonder Truck for Speed, Economy and "Get There"

A Smith Form-a-Truck costs you only $350 and a new or old Ford. When you put it in operation you have the wonderfully low fuel cost of the Ford and the enviable Ford standard for reliability and endurance under the hardest work. 15 to 20 miles per gallon is the average fuel consumption.

Tires average from 6,000 to 8,000 miles a set. The front tires are pneumatic—regular Ford equipment. They carry less weight even when the Smith Form-a-Truck is loaded to full capacity than they do under ordinary use on a Ford touring car.

90 per cent of the load is carried on the solid rear tires.

And a Ford chassis with a Smith Form-a-Truck lasts even longer than it does in touring car service, because it actually does less work.

You can buy a Smith Form-a-Truck for less than one-half what you pay for any other fully guaranteed one-ton truck.

You can buy two Smith Form-a-Trucks for a little over one-third the Only Thirteen Hoosier Race Veterans Will Drive in Memorial Day Classic.

BARRING eliminations and eleventh hour withdrawals, thirty drivers will face Starter George Dickson at the Indianapolis speedway on Tuesday afternoon when the sixth annual international sweepstakes will be run in the hippodrome of the Hoosiers and spectacle and speed will hold the center of the stage.

In this race, the oldest American speedway classic, there will be only thirteen drivers who have competed on the Hoosier bricks before and not one of the victors in previous contests will be there to defend his laurels. It is a field in which neophytes, as far as Indianapolis is concerned, are in the majority; a race in which the winning driver will be one that never has been hailed in triumph by Memorial day crowds before.

Two of the five victors of other days are on the other side of the Atlantic. Jules Goux, who captured the 1914 race, is a minion of Mars, serving with the aeroplane corps of the French army. René Thomas, who took first honors the next year, is rendering first aid to disabled military automobiles. Although not eligible for war duty, he is patriotic enough to serve his country in an humble capacity and operates a repair shop in the suburbs of Paris.

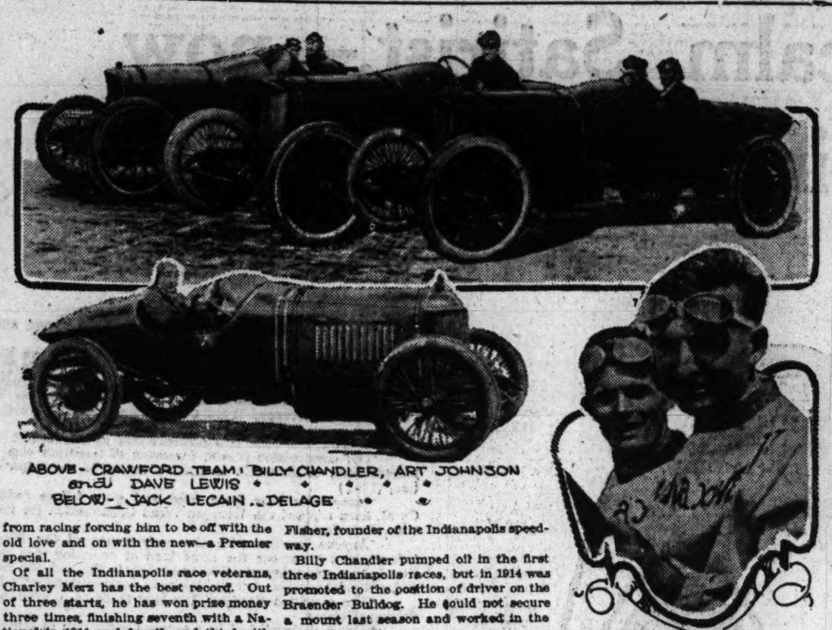
The other three Indianapolis race victors are residents of peace blessed America and probably will be the guests of the promoters on Tuesday. Ray Harroun retired from the game as soon as his Marmon received the checkered flag in the 500 contest. Joe Dawson, who piloted the blue National to the front in 1912, was seriously injured in the Hoosier classic of two years ago and has been declared by surgeons too weak to stand the torturous test. Ralph le Palma, who finished first last season, will be a spectator because the post entry of his Mercedes was refused.

The following drivers, who will meet in Tuesday's pursuit of fame and fortune, have participated in one or more previous Indianapolis races:

Ralph Mulford, Gil Anderson, Charley Merz, Eddie Rickenbacher, Johnny Aitken, Eddie O'Donnell, Dario Resta, Joseph Christiaens, Louis Chevrolet, Arthur Chevrolet, Barney Oldfield, Billy Chandler, and Tom Alley.

Of the thirteen veterans, Mulford and Anderson hold the fidelity honors for the Hoosier classic, neither having missed an Indianapolis race since the international sweepstakes was inaugurated in 1911. Mulford has finished inside the money three times and has been at the wheel of four makes of cars—Lozier, Knox, Mercedes, and Duesenberg—and this year has switched his allegiance to a fifth, the Peugeot.

Anderson, who finished eleventh in 1911 and third last season, has been far more constant, being as true to the Stutz as Cæsar's wife was to Cæsar. He, too, has suffered a change in affections this year, the withdrawal of the Stutz company from racing forcing him to be off with the old love and on with the new—a Premier special.



ABOVE - CRAWFORD TEAM: BILLY CHANDLER, ART JOHNSON and DAVE LEWIS
BELOW - JACK LECAIN AND DELAGE

PETE HENDERSON, MAXWELL

Of all the Indianapolis race veterans, Charley Merz has the best record. Out of three starts, he has won prize money three times, finishing seventh with a National in 1911 and fourth and third with a Stutz in 1912 and 1913, respectively. On past performances and his better showing each time out, he should rule favorite for Tuesday's battle of cylinders.

Rickenbacher has been at Indianapolis for the five previous races, but in 1911 and 1913 he was a relief driver and not a prominent member of the cast. Johnny Aitken has a record somewhat similar. He was a member of the National team in 1911, a pit manager the following three years, and a relief driver last season.

Eddie O'Donnell was a mechanician in 1913 and 1914 and drove his first Indianapolis race last season when he finished fifth with a Duesenberg. The 1916 event also was Resta's debut in the Hoosier classic, while Christiaens, another foreign star, has participated in only one of the five international sweepstakes, taking sixth money with the Excelsior in 1914.

Although one of the greybeards of the game, Louis Chevrolet did not drive at Indianapolis until last year, when his Cornelian was eliminated early in the contest. His brother, Arthur, can boast of starting in the inaugural event, being a member of the Buick team in 1911.

Barney Oldfield's first Indianapolis race was in 1914, when his Stutz, which took fifth money, was the first American car to finish. Previous to that year Barney was barred from driving on the Hoosier course as a result of a feud between Bill Pickens, his former manager, and Carl Fisher, founder of the Indianapolis speedway.

Billy Chandler pumped oil in the first three Indianapolis races, but in 1914 was promoted to the position of driver on the Braender Bulldog. He could not secure a mount last season and worked in the Duesenberg pit.

Being a member of the younger generation of speed stars, Tom Alley did not drive at Indianapolis until last year, when he sprang a surprise by bringing the Duesenberg across the wire in eighth place.

The drivers whose nerve and skill will be put to the acid test in an Indianapolis race for the first time Tuesday are Grover Chevrolet, Frontenac; Delno, Richard; Pete Henderson, Maxwell; Wilbur d'Alene, Duesenberg; Tommy Milton, Duesenberg; Du Chesneau, Du Chesneau Special; Tom Rooney, Premier; Harry Stillman, Premier; Devigne, Delage; Jack Lecain, Delage; Grover Bergdoll, Erwin; Eugene Stecher, Erwin; Dave Lewis, Crawford; Art Johnson, Crawford; and Aldo Franchi, Peusun.

With the exception of Pete Henderson, who formerly rode as mechanician with Eddie O'Donnell, and Tom Rooney, who until last fall pumped oil for Gil Anderson's Stutz, these youngsters are unknowns to the Indianapolis crowd. Bergdoll has had some experience in the east, while the names of Wilbur d'Alene and Dave Lewis are familiar to racing fans on the Pacific coast.

In the five years that the international sweepstakes has been run, eighty-five different drivers have been contenders in the annual Memorial day classic. Of this four score and five, eleven have crossed the great divide, and when Tuesday's contenders line up for their photographs they will bare their heads in memory of the following foemen that have gone:

David Bruce-Brown, third in 1911; Spencer Wishart, fourth in 1911 and second in 1913; Harry Endicott, who was a competitor in 1911 and 1913; Bob Burman, who started in all five races and took sixth place last year; Louis Strang, who was at the wheel of a Case in the inaugural contest; Harry Grant, a contender in all but the 1912 classic and seventh money winner in 1914; Billy Carlson, who was ninth in 1914 and 1915; Paul Zuccarelli, who brought a Peugeot from France for the 1913 event; Georges Boillot, twice winner of the French grand prix, who drove at Indianapolis in 1914; Harry Knight, and Joe Cooper.

In addition to Zuccarelli and Boillot there are ten foreign stars that have competed in the past that will not be on the starting line on Tuesday: Jules Goux, Albert Guyot, Theodore Pillette, Vincenzo Trucco, Rene Thomas, Arthur Duray, Ernest Friedrichs, Jean Chassagne, Noel Van Raalte, and Jean Porporato.

The other drivers, whom Indianapolis crowds have cheered in the past, but who are numbered among the missing this year are Turner, Belcher, Cobe, Hughie Hughes, Lee Frayer, Bigelow, Hall, Billy Knipper, Beardsley, Eddie Hearne, Frank Fox, Delaney, Jack Tower, Marquette, Bill Endicott, Arthur Jones, Herb Lytle, Joe Jargersberger, Louis Disbrow, Caleb Bragg, Ellis, Teddy Tetzlaff, Art Greiner, Len Zengle, Johnny Jenkins, Joe Horan, Bert Dingley, Joe Matteson, Billy Liesow, Ormsby, Willie Haupt, George Clark, Bob Evans, Louis Nikrent, Don Herz, Keene, Earl Cooper, Art Klein, George Mason, Gilhooley, Phil Brock, Tom Orr, Babcock, John De Palma, Mais, George Hill, and Cox.

New and Different—
The Four Passenger Roadster

Here is the newest and most beautiful of all this season's automobile bodies.

It is one in which we have realized a popular ideal.

It is the coming type for those who do not require a large touring car.

The Abbott-Detroit four-passenger roadster is different. Although it gets away from the conventional in line, there's not a suggestion of freakishness.

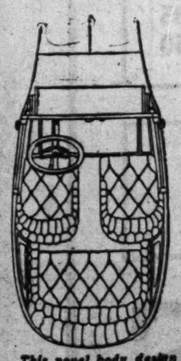
All four passengers face forward. The deep seats, the position ahead of the rear axle, the ample leg room and the luxuriously thick upholstery give the highest degree of riding comfort on any journey—long or short.

The seating arrangement is cozy, chummy and convenient.

The four passenger roadster is mounted on the strong, sturdy Abbott-Detroit Six chassis. It is a car which possesses tremendous power moment—one that gives you an advanced performance you never thought possible in a Six.

Examine this new Abbott-Detroit. Sit in the rear compartment. Its roominess and riding comfort will delight you.

We will demonstrate at any time.



This novel body design seats four passengers in perfect ease and comfort for a long journey or short.

REO

"The Gold Standard of Automobile Values"

An Equipage of Surpassing Beauty and of the Highest Utility and Efficiency

IN THIS REO SIX you will find that rare combination of those qualities you most desire in your automobile.

WE REO FOLK ARE PROUD of the results we have achieved in this latest Reo model. We are proud that so many other designers have very evidently taken this body design as their model for next season.

AND WE ARE DELIGHTED at the way in which owners speak of it to their friends—evidence that its mechanical excellence is fully equal to the promise made by its outward appearance.

FOR THAT ISN'T THE RULE you know—alas, too few new models live up to their appearance.

THIS CAR IS REO BUILT "from radiator cap to tail light," as we say in the trade vernacular—Reo quality of materials and workmanship throughout.

SO, MECHANICALLY IT IS of that degree of excellence for which the product of the Reo factories—"the Model Automobile Plants"—are famous.

THE REO FOLK ARE MANUFACTURERS—not assemblers. They do not buy units, such as motor, axles, transmission, steering gear, clutch, etc., and "glue them together" and call the result a Reo!

WE COULD NOT GUARANTEE and stand back of Reo cars as we do if every part were not only made in the Reo factories, but made from metals that were also especially made from Reo formulae.

A KNOWN QUANTITY is the only thing any maker or distributor can truly and conscientiously guarantee. Such is this Reo Six.

THE TREMENDOUS DEMAND this season—almost hopelessly in excess of the possible output—is the result of last season's performance.

NOT WHAT WE SAY, but what thousands of enthusiastic owners tell their friends about their Reo Sixes, creates a demand greater than we can supply.

FOR THIS SIX IS NEW ONLY in body design and in refinement of details. It is not new in the sense that there is in it any radical, any novel, any sensational—any untried or unproven—feature. The Reo reputation was not gained in that way.

REO PRESTIGE—REO POPULARITY—Reo demand, is the result of long years of working from and to a definite and a well known ideal. Reo cars are standardized to a higher degree, and have been for a longer time than any other, save one.

THINK BACK and you will endorse that statement though on the impulse you are disposed to question its accuracy.

"IT'S THE HANDSOMEST THING on wheels!" exclaimed one enthusiast.

BUT IT ISN'T BEAUTY ALONE—though such is the grace and elegance of this car it is considered among motorists a distinction to be seen in a Reo Six;

NOR PERFORMANCE ALONE—though that too is such it compliments the mechanical discrimination of the man who selects a Reo for his car;

IT'S THE COMBINATION—so long and ardently sought, so seldom achieved—of beauty of line and of finish, coupled with a degree of engineering excellence that approximates perfection; luxurious riding qualities coupled with economy of upkeep—these are the qualities that are distinctly Reo.

DO YOU WONDER, when you study this car from the standpoint of the artist and of the engineer, and then consider the price—do you wonder that motorists say "Reo is the 'Gold Standard' of Automobile Values"?

AND IS IT SURPRISING that the demand for this Reo Six is such that only those who place their orders well in advance can hope to obtain Reo Sixes for Spring delivery?

REO MOTOR CAR COMPANY Lansing, Mich.

TIME,—the gray, calm, Satirist,—now vindicates the "Single-Cure" Tire!

TIME,—the Anodyne! Time,—the Leveller!

Time,—the Inexorable,—whose sad smile mocks the Rainbow-Chaser,—taunts the Pretender,—and dissolves the magic of all Spell-binders who promise what cannot be performed.

Time,—whose Verdicts are final, as his progress is inevitable!

Time,—the Vindicator of sound Principles, Policies and Processes!

Time,—has now passed upon the relative merits of Tire-making Processes, and vindicated the "Single-Cure" which has, from the first, held the unswerving faith of the B. F. Goodrich Co.

Tire-making Theories, Systems and Processes come and go, but the "Single-Cure" Process lives on through Time's Ordeal stronger than ever, with the confirmation even of its one-time Enemies.

"To err is human" but to admit error is hard indeed.

Brass-bands may announce the inception of new Theories, but for their abandonment Brass-bands are deemed unnecessary,—in fact a wilful waste of Music.

Hence the Public must not expect any crashing announcement that Manufacturers of "Wrapped-Tread" "Double-Cure" "Re-inforced Tread," etc. Tires, are, one by one, going back to First Principles.

—That they are silently adopting the "Single-Cure" process, of which the B. F. Goodrich Co. was, at one time, almost the only Exponent,—almost the only Tire Manufacturing Concern which backed its faith in the sound principle of "Single-Cure" Tire Construction, by continuing it, and perfecting it, when practically all others had deserted it.

MAY we then be here permitted a, not uncharitable, Smile (with "Father Time") when we find leading Exponents of the "Double-Cure," "Wrapped-Tread" et al. theory, have returned to the fold,—have partially-returned,—or are looking for an excuse to wholly return to the original and only sound way of making Tires,—to wit:—by the Goodrich "Single-Cure" process?

May we point out that the Surgeon of widest Experience, and greatest Skill, is he who operates boldly, surely and safely by the most direct method,—at a single stroke when possible,—while the Amateur must mince, and temporize, and experiment, because he has not the Sure Knowledge,—and the Confidence born of that Sure Knowledge through wide experience?

May we mildly suggest that the "Know-how,"—the Confidence, and Directness-of-Action, which has so much to do with the Success of the Able Surgeon, in Critical Cases, has quite as much to do with the production of Maximum Mileage in Tires, at Minimum cost, through wasteless (because direct and expert) methods?

NOW,—since the Simplicity, Directness and Accuracy of "Single-Cure" Process has so much to do with lowering the Cost of Producing maximum Mileage in Tires, we infer that the Public (and Tire Dealers generally) will be interested in an understanding of what "Single-Cure" means.

And, since the "Single-Cure" Process of Tire-Making (to which Tire Mfrs. are now returning) was an Old Story with us even in 1905 we reproduce here a description of it published at that time in a booklet called "Auto Tire Construction."

Here follows the (1905) extract:

"AMONG the many difficulties which confronted the first Builders of Motor Tires, one of the most serious was the item of 'defects.'

"These 'defects' consisted principally in blisters (between Fabric Layers and Tread) or imperfections on the surface.

"The trouble proved very difficult to overcome, and in the meantime, a large quantity of unsalable Tires was accumulated by Mfrs.

"In using such expensive materials as Rubber, and Long Fibred Cotton fabrics, one defective Tire consumed the profit on many good ones.

"Many defective Tires were perfectly good (from the Fabric out), except for appearance, and it occurred to the Manufacturers that by cementing 'an Extra Tread' on such Tires he could cover up the 'defects' and make the Tires salable.

"It was necessary to assign a Reason for such construction, and it was therefore said that the strip was put on to 'facilitate repairs.'

"The cheapest way to make Tread strips of this sort is to wrap them in cloth, and cure in an open heat, (which accounts for the cloth impression they bear) or equivalent Double-Cure methods.

"After using this method to repair defective Tires, the next step was to make them all in this way in order to have a uniform product.

"In doing this, enough Rubber was left off the Carcass to offset the Rubber in the Tread strip afterward cemented on."

"THERE are, we believe, many objections, and no advantages, in this construction.

"It was brought about by the necessities of the first Builders, and has been copied by others.

"It required double Vulcanization of the Rubber,—i. e. the Carcass and the Tread strip, each separately semi-vulcanized, (and then vulcanized together), to complete the cure.

"All authorities on the subject agree that a Double Cure is injurious (to the life of Rubber) and bad practice.

"The Goodrich 'Integral Construction' requires but a 'Single-Cure,' which insures uniform results.

"The Goodrich 'Integral Construction' can be retreaded as cheaply, and satisfactorily as any Cemented-on Tread-Construction.

"We are prepared to do this work in all of our Branches (1905).

"When we entered the field, we adopted the correct and logical method (viz:—the Single-Cure Process.)

"We encountered many difficulties, all of which we have overcome, and have now (1905) demonstrated our ability to build Tires upon these correct principles (of 'Single-Cure' or 'Integral Construction').

"We wish to impress upon the mind of every Motor Tire-User (1905) that the 'Wrapped-Tread' Construction (or its equivalents) is not new.

"It is old, and came into existance only as a Makeshift.

"Our construction is new, inasmuch as Goodrich was the first Manufacturer of the world to make a success of the proper construction, (1905.)

"Many other Mfrs. have tried, and after failure (with Single-Cure), have adopted the Wrapped-Tread Construction (or its Double-Cure Equivalent.)

"Anyone familiar with the early stages of the Bicycle Tire Industry will remember the same kind of evolution that the Motor Tire is now going through, (1905) and that, in the end, the simple, correct, methods prevailed, and the Makeshift constructions were forgotten.

"The Goodrich 'Integral' Tire is so made as to give the highest driving efficiency.

"This is accomplished by a proper distribution of strain,—which is not possible with the other constructions.

"The result is greater Mileage, and greater Speed, with less Wear and Tear on the Tire.

"With such results, why should WE change our construction to another process which we know to be inferior? (1905.)"

GOODRICH Fabric Tires of today are made by the same "Single-Cure" Process as were the Goodrich Tires of 1900.

But, such Process demands Skill,—Expert Workmanship, and the Accuracy of treatment which proceeds chiefly from a long, and conscientious, Experience with it.

The expert Moulder of Aluminum knows (by a perception of color so delicate as to be almost an Instinct) WHEN to pour the molten metal, at the precise temperature for maximum toughness.

In just such manner does the long-experienced, and expert, Goodrich Operator know the precise condition, temperature, and temperamental peculiarities of Fabric and Rubber,—which admit of Vulcanizing them together ONCE, without the internal "Blisters" and other hidden "defects," that alone justify the double-cost, and double-risk, of "Double-Cure" or Vulcanization on Vulcanization.

It is, of course, natural that the oldest, as well as the largest, Rubber Factory in the world should have (out of its 47 year Experience in Rubber-Working) developed the ablest Operatives as well as the most efficient and economical Processes.

It is equally natural that this Experience and Efficiency, coupled with a 50% greater Pleasure Car and Truck Tire Output (latest fiscal year) than any other Rubber, or Tire, Concern in America, should produce such Volume of Tires at a lower cost, per Tire, than smaller and less-experienced Concerns, no matter how conscientious they be.

IT is, further, in line with Goodrich Ideals, Principles and long-proven Business Policies, to give the benefit of that lower cost, in manufacturing Tires, TO CONSUMERS, rather than to take the larger profits, PER TIRE, which such Manufacturing advantages would make feasible.

Because,—47 years' experience in Mfg. and Selling, Rubber Goods has proven to the B. F. Goodrich Co. that "Time,—the gray, calm, Satirist," levels up all excess Profits, by a reduction of that VOLUME which translates into larger dividends.

—The Maximum Value, to Consumers, with a fair profit to both Dealer and Manufacturer!

That Goodrich Policy has been Father to the REPEAT-ORDERS which have made, (and for 47 years maintained) the B. F. Goodrich Co. Factory, at Akron, O., the largest in the World, and the most conservatively-successful.

From foregoing facts proceed the relatively Low Prices quoted below, on the highest-grade Fabric Tires that Money and Skill can build.

Let no one "CONVERSE" you out of the advantage these Goodrich Fair-list Prices mean to YOU.

Better Typewriting in Thirty Days.

AN HOUR A DAY DOUBLES YOUR PAY.
Whether you want to learn typewriting, or whether you are already a stenographer, this is the secret of raising your pay.
Every employer is looking for increased efficiency; by Arnsan Training operators are made more efficient than the usual commercial stenographers.
Our "Error-Proof Memory Charts" fix the typewriting keyboard in your mind in a pleasant and fascinating manner and far more accurately than you ever learned the alphabet. This, together with our finger training exercises, will give you a speed of 75 to 100 words a minute.
We guarantee to make you a touch typist in thirty days, or refund your money. Write for "A. R. E." booklet, "Better Typewriting." WRITER FURNISHED FREE FOR HOME PRACTICE.
WE WILL RAISE YOUR PAY OR REFUND TUITION.
Come in and see what our students say.
Learn now and be ready to take a good job at $15 to $20 this fall. Don't waste your summer.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Illinois.

FOR SALE—ILLINOIS
BLACK SOIL.
Am subdividing my large farm as follows:
ALFALFA, CORN
WHEAT, STOCK, AND GRAIN
FARMS.
10 alfalfa and corn farms, 40 acres each.
4 improved farms, 100 acres each.
4 unimproved farms, 100 acres each.
4 improved farms, 80 acres each.
4 unimproved farms, 80 acres each.
2 highly improved, 120 acres each.
2 highly improved, 160 acres each.
1 improved alfalfa, corn, wheat, 207 acres.
1 imp. alf., corn, stock, 930 acres.
1 unimproved blue grass, 723 acres.
The above farms are within 48 miles of Chi-cago, 90 minutes' ride—two R. R.'s—and town site on land; well drained and tiled; our oats made 60 bushels per acre; corn sold for 67 cents; cut three crops alfalfa, 5½ tons; best blue grass pasture in state; running water land all level, with no stones or stumps; no waste land; much of this land is native sod virgin soil broken up in last two years; formerly was large stock ranch.
I own this land and will make very attractive price and terms to responsible people; can sell you 33 1-3 per cent cheaper than you can buy elsewhere.
Immediate possession given if desired or if you do not want possession until later you get ¼ crop. I will buy your ¼ crop at $10 per acre if you want to sell it. Great advantage to the stock farmers, account of increase in Chicago stockyards, insures getting top price for live stock sold and able to buy feeders at low prices. Write, wire, or phone me.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Illinois.

FOR SALE—ILLINOIS
BLACK SOIL.
Am subdividing my large farm as follows:
ALFALFA, CORN
WHEAT, STOCK, AND GRAIN
FARMS.
10 alfalfa and corn farms, 40 acres each.
4 improved farms, 100 acres each.
4 unimproved farms, 100 acres each.
4 improved farms, 80 acres each.
4 unimproved farms, 80 acres each.
2 highly improved, 120 acres each.
2 highly improved, 160 acres each.
1 improved alfalfa, corn, wheat, 207 acres.
1 imp. alf., corn, stock, 930 acres.
1 unimproved blue grass, 723 acres.
The above farms are within 48 miles of Chi-cago, 90 minutes' ride—two R. R.'s—and town site on land; well drained and tiled; our oats made 60 bushels per acre; corn sold for 67 cents; cut three crops alfalfa, 5½ tons; best blue grass pasture in state; running water land all level, with no stones or stumps; no waste land; much of this land is native sod virgin soil broken up in last two years; formerly was large stock ranch.
I own this land and will make very attractive price and terms to responsible people; can sell you 33 1-3 per cent cheaper than you can buy elsewhere.
Immediate possession given if desired or if you do not want possession until later you get ¼ crop. I will buy your ¼ crop at $10 per acre if you want to sell it. Great advantage to the stock farmers, account of increase in Chicago stockyards, insures getting top price for live stock sold and able to buy feeders at low prices. Write, wire, or phone me.

REMARKABLE HIGH GRADE AUTOMOBILE BARGAINS

Locomobile Exchange Sixes

A high priced car at a medium price. A fact that many of Chicago's shrewdest business men take advantage of—purchasing an Exchange LOCOMOBILE with its $3,000 quality, prestige, and service in preference to a new car for the same money.

GUARANTEED LOCOMOBILES.

$1,450 to $2,900.

These splendid cars have been thoroughly overhauled and go out under guarantee:

LOCOMOBILE, 1913, Type R, seven passenger touring car, six cylinder, 38 horsepower, electric lights and starter, good equipment. Has just been repainted.

LOCOMOBILE, 1913, Type R, seven passenger Limousine, six cylinder, 38 horsepower; very completely equipped and in the best of condition.

LOCOMOBILE, 1913, Type R, five passenger touring car, six cylinder, 38 horsepower; has been entirely repainted and top re-covered; a good buy for the man who wants to start touring without delay.

LOCOMOBILE, 1914, Type R, four passenger touring car; completely equipped and newly painted; in best mechanical condition.

LOCOMOBILE, 1915, Type M, six passenger touring car, six cylinder, 48 horsepower; full catalog equipment; Westinghouse lighting system and two extra rims.

LOCOMOBILE, 1915, Type R, five passenger touring car, six cylinder, 38 horsepower, 132 in. wheel base; full catalog equipment, including electric lighting and starting set.

LOCOMOBILE, 1915, Type R, seven passenger Berline Limousine, six cylinder and 38 horsepower; equipment includes Westinghouse lighting system, two extra tires on rims and full catalog equipment.

The following cars are not guaranteed but are in good condition:

LOCOMOBILE, 1912, Type M, seven passenger Limousine, six cylinder, 48 horsepower and 135 inch wheel base. Well equipped.

LOCOMOBILE, 1912, Type L, five passenger touring car, four cylinder and 30 horsepower. Well equipped.

LOCOMOBILE, 1911, Type M, seven passenger, 48 horsepower, top, glass front, Klaxon horn and two extra tires on rims. In good condition.

LOCOMOBILE, 1911, Type L, five passenger Limousine, 30 horsepower and completely equipped with Kimball body, making this car particularly desirable at the price.

LOCOMOBILE, 1910, Type L, five passenger Limousine and 30 horsepower. Also newly painted.

LOCOMOBILE, 1911, two passenger speedster, 30 horsepower, electric lights, speedometer, Prest-o-lite tank, two extra rims and catalog equipment.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

U. S. PROTEST MAIN FACTOR.

New York, May 27.—The emphatic language employed by the state department in its protest over mail seizures to Great Britain and France afforded an excuse, if not an actual reason, for the heaviness of the week end session on the exchange. Important rails broke 1 to 2½ points, war issues and affiliated shares, including motors and metals, were lower by 2 to almost 5 points, with substantial recessions in Mexicans, Mercantile Marine, United Fruit, and miscellaneous descriptions.

Reading not only effaced all its 10 point advance of the early week, but at the minimum of 100¾ showed a net loss for that period of almost 3 points. Of all the old time favorites and speculative leaders, United States Steel was the only issue to maintain some semblance of steadiness, yielding only a fraction.

General News Is Conservative.

General news advices were of a more conservative tenor, including the reports of the mercantile agencies, which indicated a reaction from the recent high pressure in many lines of industry. Cables from neutral sources, reiterating rumors of early peace, and the detailed April trade report of imports and exports, constituted the other market factors.

The bond market was irregular on nominal dealings. The general trend of government issues during the week was lower, declines on call extending from one-quarter to one-half of 1 per cent, but with little actual trading.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, May 27.—There was a renewal of liquidation in the market for coffee futures this morning which was probably provoked by the sharp break reported in milreis prices at Rio. The selling was not as active as it was earlier in the week, however, while it also seemed to be coming from other sources, and after opening at a decline of 8 to 9 points, with September selling at 8.55c and December at 8.70c, prices rallied slightly on covering and in a revival of peace rumors. September sold at 8.87c and December at 8.71c in the later trading, with the market closing 3 to 5 points net lower. Sales, 22,250 bags. May, 8.34c; June, 8.39c; July, 8.44c; August, 8.52c; September, 8.61c; October, 8.64c; November, 8.70c; December, 8.72c; January, 8.77c; February, 8.82c; March, 8.88c; April, 8.93c. Spot coffee quiet. Rio 7s, 9¼c; Santos 4s, 10¾c. No spot cost and freight offers were reported. The official cable reported a decline of 375 reis at Rio and o. o.-3201 in the rate of R'o exchange on London. Santos was unchanged. Brazilian port receipts, 11,000 bags; Jundiahy, 7,000 bags.

SUGAR—Raw, unchanged at 5¾c for Cuban spot and freight; equal to 6.39c for centrifugal and 5.62c for molasses. Refined steady at 7.65c to 7.75c for fine granulated. Fair to fine, 7.47c to 5.45c, closing 5.45c; September, 5.56c to 5.40c, closing 5.48c; December, 5.10c to 5.06c, closing 5.07c.

CHICAGO, May 27.—SUGAR.—Following prices were quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $9.18; powdered, unchanged, $8.28; standard cane granulated, $8.08; beet granulated, $7.88; extra C, $7.78; soft, $7.58.

Investors and National Defense.

Of all people, investors ought to see most clearly and feel most keenly the need of national defense. The safety of their investments depends on the ability of the nation to defend itself from aggression. Two years ago Belgium was the richest country of its size in the world. Now it is the poorest. The northeastern district of France is in exactly the same situation. Invading armies took possession of railways, factories, mines, and all other means of production, while individual soldiers looted private houses.

If the property of the corporations ever is restored to them it will be in a sadly run down condition, while the wealth that the mines and factories have been producing during the period of hostile occupations has been taken for the uses of the conqueror and never will be regained. Well to do Belgians and French people have been impoverished, while those formerly poor are now paupers.

Exactly the same thing might happen to any nation unable or unprepared to defend itself, and at the present time this country is particularly exposed because of the vast amount of gold and other portable wealth that has been poured into it in the last two years. Bank vaults overflowing with precious metal are a tempting prize to any army that feels strong enough to take them.

The only sure way for this nation and its investors to keep their property safe is to be ready to defend it. In the present state of unpreparedness any first class power might pick a quarrel and attack us, confident of getting vast wealth if nothing more. But with this country well equipped for hostilities no nation would lightly risk war.

Sinclair Oil and Refining.

J. G. B.—The Sinclair Oil and Refining corporation is a new combination of producing, refining and pipe line companies in Kansas and Oklahoma. It has outstanding 520,000 shares of no par value, and $16,000,000 of bonds which are convertible into stock at the rate of $55 in bonds for one share till May 1, 1917, and at the rate of $57.50 in bonds thereafter. There is a minimum sinking fund of $800,000 a year. The company's refineries and pipe lines alone are said to have earned over $2,000,000 in 1915. The new corporation has reputable backing, but, of course, the bonds are somewhat speculative. The stock is quoted at about 48.

Brief Answers.

C.O., Colorado Springs, Colo.—The Minneapolis and St. Louis readjustment was postponed till June 19 in order to give the objecting minority an opportunity to frame and offer a plan. There are a total of 189,000 shares deposited in favor of the majority plan, and 165,000 are sufficient to put it in effect. The postponement was granted to avoid any appearance of "steam roller" tactics.

W. V. S., Lafayette, Ind.—The main argument in favor of issuing capital stock without par value is that the inexperienced investor will understand that a share represents merely a certain small interest in a business, and that it does not necessarily represent $100 or any other stated sum. An incidental result is that such stock is not subject to the "war" tax, that tax being levied on par value.

E. L. G., Mankato, Minn.—Failure to pay income tax by June 30 brings the penalty of a 5 per cent increase in the amount of the tax plus 1 per cent a month for the time from June 30 till it is paid. This penalty does not apply to the estates of insane, deceased, or insolvent persons.

MONEY IS FIRM; N. Y. BANKS CUT EXCESS RESERVE

Week's Losses Bring Surplus Holdings to New Low Figure, $64,975,350.

The excess reserve of the New York banks had another considerable drop yesterday, $11,980,960, bringing the item down to $64,975,350. This is the surplus on an 18 per cent cash reserve basis and under the old 25 per cent reserve would be considered rather modest. The feature of the figures was that the decrease was occasioned by loss in cash rather than a gain in reserve requirements. The increase in deposits was $10,830,000. A few more statements like that of yesterday and a change in interest rates would appear certain. The figures:

Federal Sign System.

The annual report of the Federal Sign System, one of the Insull concerns, for the fiscal year ended march 31, 1916, showed earnings equal to 4.01 per cent on the $2,000,800 preferred stock.

The gross income for the year was $1,913,907, and expenses, including depreciation, $1,831,213, leaving net income of $82,694.

In his statement to the shareholders Samuel Insull, chairman of the board, said that while net earnings for the current year had not reached the volume of 1915, the business for the latter portion of the 1916 fiscal year was much better than the preceding year.

The company acquired a controlling interest in the Henkel & Best company. It is further set forth:

"The volume of business for the last year has been well sustained, although, as explained in the last report, it is of a character which does not yield as much profit as the class enjoyed by the company in periods when money is plentiful and business normal. It will be the policy of the directors to use the surplus earnings to strengthen the financial condition of the company by reducing as soon as possible its liabilities and adding to its working capital."

Curb Active and Higher.

The local unlisted securities market continues active, with a further appreciation in the more popular issues.

Sales were made in American Chicle common at 43. American Fork and Hoe common continues firm at 101 bid, offered at 104. There is some inquiry for the preferred at 114, with light offerings at 117. Avery common continues steady at 81 bid, offered at 83, while the preferred was wanted at 100. Butler Bros. continues in very good demand, with sales around 263. Consumers preferred changed hands at 81 to 82.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx common advanced about 2 points to sales at 80, and closed in demand at that price. Moline Plow preferred was somewhat easier, being offered at 95, with buyers at 94. Small lots of Otis Elevator common were offered at 62. Packard Motor Car common advanced to sales at 255 and closed in demand at 260, with light offerings at 280. Reo Motor Car was slightly easier, declining from 45 to 42½, while Reo Motor Truck remains firm at 36 bid, offered at 38½. Peerless Motor common advanced to sales at 26½. Sulsberger & Sons preferred changed hands at 96 to 96½.

Sugar Stocks Improve.

The sugar stocks were fairly active, Holland-St. Louis advancing to sales at 11, Michigan Sugar 12½, and German-American to sales at 22½. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company advanced about 15 points to sales as high as 255, closing at 250 to 265. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock advanced from 100 to 105 bid, with light offerings at 107. Inland Steel sold at 355.

Chic Cities Gas continues its upward movement from 250 to sales as high as 270, closing with a slight reaction at 260 bid, offered at 263. Cities Service common had a very spectacular rise from 220 to sales as high as 290, but reacted at the close to 274 bid, offered at 278. The preferred improved from 84 to 85½.

Northern States Power also showed an advance from 69 to sales at 74½, closing in good demand at that price. Standard Gas and Electric preferred changed hands at 37. United Light preferred was traded in at 76¾, and the common around 52. Middle West Utilities common sold at 52½ and the preferred at 79½. Columbia Gas and Electric was traded in around 16. Republic Railway and Light common sold at 30¼ and American Public Utilities common at 45½.

THE week's real estate market was of a generally satisfactory character, business being along rather broad lines, with a particularly good showing in outside business property. The movement of flat property was limited, particularly as regards transactions of any magnitude, $73,000 being the top figure in the way of consideration.

There was considerable doing in cheap to medium priced properties, while acres also figured in the week's business to a greater extent than for several weeks. The market for this class of property, as well as subdivision stuff, was much helped by the improved weather conditions, operators generally reporting a pronounced improvement over the last few weeks.

Building on Large Scale.

Building continues on a surprisingly large scale, in view of the rapidly growing belief among builders, as well as general real estate men, that it has been carried to an extent far in excess of the requirements of the city for a considerable time to come. Thus the building for the current month, according to the report of the city building department, shows a total of over $12,000,000 in the cost of the permits issued, as against a little over $7,000,000 for May a year ago. This is rather below the gain shown in previous months of the year as compared with the corresponding period of 1915. Considering that the total amount of building for 1915 held second place in the history of the city, a better idea is had of the enormous extent of operations for the present year.

Thompson Buys Loop Leasehold.

The only transaction in the downtown district was the purchase by the John R. Thompson company from Walter H. McDonald of the leasehold interest and building at 69-71 West Monroe street. The lot is 22 2-3 feet front, with a depth of 190 feet, between Dearborn and Clark streets, and is improved with a five story building.

The consideration is not disclosed, but the statement is made that the property has been offered at $80,000. The land belongs to William I. Goodman and was under a lease to Thomas McGinnis for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1905, at an annual rent of $6,500.

Mr. McDonald acquired the interest of Mr. McGinnis last year. The transfer was contested in the courts.

Site Valued at $241,585.

In this connection it is interesting to note that a corresponding parcel, adjoining on the east, is under lease for ninety-nine years from April 1, 1911, to Wert, Tryens & Mathes, druggists, at an annual net rent of $10,000.

The property at 69-71 was valued by the board of review at $241,585, of which $226,585 is in the land.

It is announced the Thompson company will improve the premises with a high grade building adapted to restaurant purposes. John B. Ackerman and E. Orris Hart & Co. were the brokers in the transaction, while Elmer Schlesinger represented the Thompson company in a legal way.

A transaction in west side business property involving both a sale and lease is of special interest for the reason it involves the construction of a building at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Lake streets for the occupancy of the W. D. Allen Manufacturing company, which has been located at 133-35 West Lake street since 1887. The building will cost $130,000 and will be erected by Jacob Birk.

Mr. Birk has just purchased the 31x140 feet at the corner from R. D. Hill for an expressed consideration of $40,000, subject to $20,000, and on this and the adjoining thirty feet, owned by him, he will erect the proposed building.

Occupies Under Ten Year Lease.

The Allen company is to occupy the building under a ten year lease and is to pay a flat rent of $13,600 a year. This is based on 5 per cent on a ground value of $1,250 a front foot and 8 per cent on the cost of the building. The Allen company is to pay taxes and insurance and make all repairs at its expense. Plans for the building have been prepared by Architect S. N. Crowen.

The Allen company will use the new building for its offices and warerooms only, while its manufacturing departments will remain at 2318-20 South Western avenue. J. J. Harrington represented Mr. Birk in the purchase of the land and both parties in connection with the lease.

SELLS LEASEHOLD INTEREST

E. F. Norcott & Co. have sold for Mrs. Mary W. Kotzenberg the leasehold interest in the property at 4187-89 South Halsted street to Nathan Davis, president of the Stock Yards Hardware and Paint company. The land, which is leased for ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $850, is improved with a four story brick building. The lease has about seventy-three years to run.

NEW HOTEL OVERLOOKING LINCOLN PARK

Ten Story Structure to Be Erected on Site of Old McNally Homestead at Garfield Avenue.

The old homestead of Andrew McNally, founder of Rand, McNally & Co., at the northwest corner of Lincoln Park West and Garfield avenue, is being wrecked by the Lott Hotel company preliminary to the erection of a ten story high grade fireproof family hotel, to cost $550,000. The general contract has been awarded to G. H. Gottschalk & Co. The proposed building will have a frontage of 112 feet on Lincoln Park West and 110 feet on Garfield avenue, and will contain 225 guest rooms, each with a private bath. There also will be a large ballroom and banquet room. Walter W. Ahlschlager is the architect, while S. W. Straus & Co. underwrote a bond issue loan of $360,000 in connection with the construction of the hotel.

CHICAGO REALTY BOARD TO HOLD OUTING AT GARY.

The Chicago real estate board has arranged for an outing at Gary, Ind., Friday, June 2. By special invitation the members will inspect the plant of the United States Steel company. They will go on a special train. After inspection of the plant lunch will be had at Gary, and the Chicago board will then be guests of the Gary real estate board on an automobile trip around the city. They will then be taken by special train to Millers, Ind., where the sand dunes will be viewed and a fish dinner served on the beach, returning by special train about 7 p. m. On the committee in charge are Newton B. Lauren, chairman; Walter Mills, Hyde W. Perce, Sam Hodge, and Harry Goldstine.

At a special meeting last Wednesday the Chicago real estate board adopted a resolution to participate in the preparedness parade, instructing President Steinbrecher to appoint a special committee to make arrangements to this end. The board also adopted a resolution presented by a committee, of which B. A. Fessenden is chairman, urging military training for the youth of the country and urging attendance at the military training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis. The board also went on record as approving the $5,100,000 bond issue for bridges to be voted on at the coming judicial election.

President Steinbrecher made a particularly strong plea for the pending tax amendment at the annual convention of the Illinois Daily Newspaper association last week. On June 6 he will address the Duluth real estate exchange.

Harry Goldstine, chairman of the valuation committee of the board, will address the Fort Wayne exchange on "Expert Valuation" the first week in June.

EVANSTON HOTEL IS SOLD.

The property at the northeast corner of Davis street and Chicago avenue, Evanston, with a frontage of 170 feet on Davis street and 264 feet on Chicago avenue, improved with a hotel building, has been purchased by B. Edward Powers from William D. Murdock of Murdock, James & Co., for a reported consideration of $125,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000. The building, which contains about 100 rooms, is known as the Avenue house. A large dwelling is also on the lot. It is stated the purchaser plans extensive improvements in the hotel. W. W. Wilson of Murdock, James & Co. was the broker.

Chicagoan Goes to Prison.

Kansas City, Mo., May 27.—George Jensen, son of a Chicago minister, pleaded guilty in the Criminal court here today to a charge of forging a check for $25. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY DEALS TOP THE MARKET

South Side Banker's Purchase of Windsor Park Corner Week's Leader.

There was much doing in outside business property during the week. In fact, the operations in this field represented the principal market activities of the week, as the showing in other classes of property was hardly up to the average which has prevailed for several weeks past.

An important transaction in the outlying south part of the city was the purchase by John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park State bank and head of John A. Carroll & Bro., real estate, from Harlan W. Cooley of the building and the leasehold interest in the 150x100 feet of ground on which it stands at the northeast corner of East Seventy-fifth street and South Shore avenue, Windsor Park.

The building is a two story structure covering the lot, and contains, in addition to a 600 seat theater, ten stores on the ground floor and 8 offices above, and is said to have a gross annual rent of about $11,000. The building was erected about three years ago. One of its tenants is the Windsor Park bank. A nominal consideration is given.

John A. Carroll & Bro. have opened a branch office in the building and will specialize in South Shore and Windsor Park property.

$73,000 Deal on South Side.

A notable deal in Sixty-third street business property made a matter of record early in the week is the sale by J. L. Strauss to Clara J. Alt of the property at the southeast corner of Sixty-third street and Harvard avenue for an indicated consideration of $73,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. The lot is irregular in shape, with a frontage of about 134 feet on Sixty-third street and a depth of about 150 feet, more or less. A one story building covers the greater part of the lot and altogether there are thirteen stores and two suites of offices.

A good sized transaction in west side business property was the sale by H. S. Caplan to Harry Bloom of the property at the northeast corner of West Twenty-sixth street and Millard avenue for a reported consideration of $46,300, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

The lot is 73x113 feet and is improved with a two story building containing four stores and six flats and in part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at 7806-08 South Halsted street, lot 49x116 feet, improved with a three story building containing two stores with flats above at a reported consideration of $34,500, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000. Gordon, Lapin & Co. were the brokers, representing both parties.

Halsted Corner Sold.

The property at the northwest corner of Buckingham place and Halsted street, lot 65x125 feet, improved with a building containing fourteen flats and two stores has been sold by Henry Hogans of Oak Park to George P. Engelhardt for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to $20,000.

In exchange the purchaser conveyed 190x200 feet in Sycamore place, between the lake and ravine, Highland Park, valued at $15,000, and the vacant 160x200 feet at Asbury and Wilder streets, Evanston, also valued at $15,000. It is planned to improve the Highland Park vacant with an attractive residence in the colonial style of architecture. George H. Nelson of Williams & Nelson and T. P. Elliott were the brokers in the transaction.

TRANSFER FIGURES SHOW BIG GAIN FOR FOUR MONTHS.

Transfer figures for the first four months of the year given out yesterday show a handsome gain over the corresponding period for 1915, although there was a considerable falling off in the April figures. For the four months there were 17,711 transfers, with a total consideration of $51,487,402, as compared with 16,884 and a total consideration of $36,834,552 for the corresponding period in 1915. For April the figures were 4,756 transfers, with a total consideration of $8,580,976, as compared with 4,787 and a total of $15,021,428 for April a year ago. The first four months showed a gain of 1,227 in the number of transfers and $14,662,850 in the total consideration.

Under the Torrens system there was an increase of $58,713 in consideration and 219 in the number of transfers. There was an increase of 80 in the number of applications for initial registration and $463,790 in the value of the property.

LANDMARK TO BE TORN DOWN

The old Knutson homestead at 714 North Dearborn avenue is to be torn down to make room for a high grade bachelor apartment building to cost $75,000. The property, which has been in the possession of Mrs. Martha Johnson, formerly Mrs. Knutson, since 1850, has been sold by her to Charles E. Williams. The proposed apartment building will be four stories high. Mrs. Johnson took in exchange the residence belonging to Mr. Williams at 824 Sheridan road. I. S. Lurie of H. O. Stone & Co. was the broker.

4 ACRES ACTIVE ON EVERY SIDE

Tracts for Subdivision Figure in Deals All Around the City.

There was considerable activity in acre property during the week, in which both the north, west and south sides were represented, although the deal on the south side is said not to have been closed yet. It is being acquired, however, by one of the largest subdividing concerns in the city, and is said to cover property at Seventy-ninth street and Ashland avenue.

The west side deal was the purchase by Raymond G. Hancock from William F. Higgins of a tract of thirty-six lots in the sixty acre tract at West Twelfth street and Austin avenue. The tract is just south of the new Austin park, formerly Warren Woods, and has already been partly improved by Mr. Higgins.

Consideration Is $25,000.

The property acquired by Mr. Hancock fronts on Austin avenue, Mason and Menard avenues and was acquired by Mr. Hancock for a reported consideration of about $25,000, the lots, each 30x125 feet, selling for from $660 to $700. It is the purpose of Mr. Hancock to begin at once the improvement of the lots with individual two story dwellings and bungalows to cost between $5,000 and $6,000 each.

In part payment Mr. Hancock conveyed the eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Austin avenue and Hilton street on a lot 60x180 feet at a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $32,500. E. W. Newman represented both parties to the transaction.

Record was made of the purchase by Francis S. Baker from the estate of Elizabeth Roberts of a tract of twenty acres at the northwest corner of Montrose and Central avenue, the latter formerly fifty-sixth avenue, for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $26,000, the sale being at the rate of $2,000 an acre.

Deal in Lake Forest.

A Lake Forest transaction was the purchase by Harry A. Hubbard from Sherman T. Cooper of a tract of twenty acres in the southeast end of the town. The actual consideration is not disclosed in the deed, but it is said to have been around $25,000, or at the rate of $1,250 an acre. The transaction has a special interest, by reason of the fact the property is one of the last large acre tracts within the town limits.

The property lies south of the acres recently purchased by Stanley Field and has the same beauty of timber and ravine. It is stated that Mr. Hubbard has no immediate plans looking to the improvement of the property. F. M. Lowe acted as the broker, representing both parties to the transaction.

Another small acre sale was reported in Highland Park. It comprises a tract of 7.41 acres, east front, in Sheridan road, 685 feet south of Roger Williams avenue, which has been purchased by Charles A. Smith from the estate of William Jones, the sale being, it is said, on the basis of a little over $2,500 an acre. The sale was negotiated by Broomell Bros. and Henry K. Coale.

ONLY ONE IMPORTANT DEAL IN RESIDENCES REPORTED.

The market for residence property was rather slow again last week, there being in fact only one transaction of any particular moment. This was the purchase by Otto Schulz, president of the M. Schulz company, manufacturers of pianos and piano players, from H. F. Perkins of the property at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Glenlake avenues for an indicated consideration of $40,000 cash. The lot is 100x150 feet, and is improved with an attractive three story dwelling containing thirteen rooms. O. L. Brackett of Gordon Strong & Co. was the broker.

The property at the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and Thirtieth street, lot 24x170 feet, with residence improvements, has been sold by Dollie E. Pope to Jennie M. Hill for an indicated consideration of $27,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. In return the purchaser conveyed to the grantor the property in Fiftieth place, 365 feet west of Cottage Grove avenue, lot 52x125 feet, south front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $28,000, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000.

Record was made of the conveyance by the estate of Fred A. Busse to Alice E. Dunn of the Busse homestead on Sheridan road, 281 feet south of Ainslie street, for an indicated consideration of $30,200. The property was the subject of judicial sale several weeks ago.

Leases and Loans.

A NUMBER of noteworthy leases and loans were reported or made matters of record during the week. The most important of the leases, reported late in the week, was the announcement that the Windsor-Clifton hotel, at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street, had been leased by the estate of Leon Mandel to the Clifton Hotel company of Chicago, a recently formed corporation, of which John F. Phillips is the head and Henry L. Rottman the manager.

The lease is for a term of ten years, and, while the terms are withheld, it is said the company is to pay an annual rent of $30,000 for the first five years and $35,000 for the last five. Extensive alterations are in progress, including the refurnishing and redecorating of every room, so as to have the hotel in readiness for the Republican national convention.

An interesting lease of office space has been closed in the loop district, in which the trustees of the Marshall Field estate have leased to the Sinclair Oil and Refining company about 10,000 square feet of floor space on the ninth floor of the Conway building, at the southwest corner of Washington and Clark streets, for a term of years at a reported term rent of $176,000.

S. C. Iverson of Hibbard Porter & Bro. has leased for Julia F. Porter and James F. Porter to the Val Blatz Brewing company of Milwaukee the store and basement at the southeast corner of State and Lake streets, 14x62 feet, for a term rent of $20,650.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased for the Washington Shirt company to George V. Weinhofer the store in the Powers building, at 52 East Monroe street, for a term from Aug. 1 at a term rent of $21,300. The store will be used in connection with that at 39 South Wabash avenue.

Two 4½ per cent loans were made by R. D. Hill & Co., both for $70,000, running five years. One was to the estate of Edwin F. Gillette and is secured by the fee under the Hartford building at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Madison streets, 92½x50 feet.

The other is secured by the property at 405-11 South Wabash avenue, lot 57.5x79.7½ feet, improved with a six story and basement office building of fireproof construction. It is secured by a trust deed made by Grace O. and William G. Sage running to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee.

The loan was made for the purpose of taking up an existing incumbrance and also furnishing funds to improve the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street, owned by the same parties, and which they are improving with a three story store and office building to cover the entire lot.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $120,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Michael Giardino, secured by the Lafayette apartments at the northeast corner of Magnolia avenue and Lafayette street.

The same trust company is also trustee in a loan of $85,000, five years, at 6 per cent, to Jennie Kelley on the Magnolia Terrace apartments at 4876-84 Magnolia avenue.

Foreman Bros. Banking company is trustee in a loan of $115,000, five years, at 5 per cent, to Frank Schoeninger, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Clark street and North avenue, 120x151 feet, with improvements.

Subdivision Notes.

William H. Britigan & Co. announce the opening sale today of Auburn Highlands, located south of Seventy-ninth street, between Racine and Ashland avenues. This is the first large tract of property that has been offered in the Seventy-ninth and Ashland district.

Following directly upon the heels of Mr. Britigan's announcement rumors have it that another big real estate operator has purchased the property on the northwest corner of Seventy-ninth street and Ashland avenue and will fully improve the property this summer. These developments would seem to indicate that there will be another movement at Seventy-ninth and Ashland of much the same character as that at Seventy-ninth and Halsted streets.

Murdock, James & Co. have placed on the market a new subdivision, known as Murdock, James & Co.'s Milwaukee avenue subdivision. The property is located on Milwaukee and Elston avenues, just north of Peterson, and extends east to the river.

Murder Stumps Coroner.

A coroner's jury failed to determine the motive for the murder of Antonio Marittello, 815 West Elm street, whose body was found in an alley between Cambridge and Milton avenues after an assassin had used a shotgun and escaped.

TRADING SLOW IN APARTMENTS OF HIGH CLASS

Belief There Is Too Much Building and Lending Affects Market.

As was the case during the previous week, there was not much doing of an important character in apartment house properties. There was a fairly good showing in medium priced properties, but a marked dearth of deals of any particular magnitude. In fact, the movement of improved properties in general is rather slow, and particularly flat properties, thought to be largely due to a growing understanding of the fact there has been much overbuilding and overlending in connection with this class of property.

A noteworthy deal in south side flat property made a matter of record was the sale by Mrs. Marie C. Bloom to Mary Kotzenberg of the property at the southeast corner of Fifty-second street and Ingleside avenue for an indicated consideration of $73,000, subject to an incumbrance of $43,000. The building, an eighteen apartment of five and six rooms, occupies a lot 110x105 feet.

Flat Brings $65,000.

The high grade fifteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Oakdale and Pine Grove avenues with 47x140 feet of ground, south front, has been sold by A. H. Johnson to May H. Winett for an indicated consideration of $65,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

The fifteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Lincoln street and Berteau avenue, lot 59x159 feet, has been sold by J. O. Lundstrom to Charles Minke for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,000.

Charles Salinger et al. have sold to N. C. Sauerbier the flat property in Logan boulevard 423 feet west of Sacramento avenue, lot 50x123 feet, north front, for an indicated consideration of $56,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

Record also was made of the sale by Edwin Carson to Elizabeth Hummell of the apartment house property in Lafayette street 750 feet east of Sheridan road, with 50x110 feet of ground, south front, for an indicated consideration of $33,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

Six Flat Sold for $27,500.

The six apartment building at 1416-18 East Sixty-sixth street, between Dorchester and Dante avenues, on a lot with a frontage of 60 feet, has been sold by Murray Wolbach to Jennie Erickson for a reported consideration of $27,500, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the clear two story stone front store and flat building at 5913 South Halsted street. Forsberg & Seeberg were the brokers.

C. M. Swanson has conveyed to George Volk the apartment house property in East Sixty-eighth street, 236 feet west of Stony Island avenue, lot 60x124 feet, south front, for an indicated consideration of $27,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000.

The high grade six apartment building at 856-57 Ainslie street, with 70x110 feet of ground has been sold by Karl G. Macvitty to W. C. Evanston for a reported consideration of $32,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. Paisley & Walker represented both parties to the transaction.

PAY LESS FOR COAL NOW

Don't wait another day. Month by month the prices advance. Mining conditions, which are universal, make coal prices low now. Save $2 to $4 per ton and get high-grade coal.

Tecumseh Coal is mined from that famous number five vein in Knox County, Indiana. It is guaranteed to produce 13,000 B. T. U.'s to the pound, with only 9% ash and 9% moisture. The quality and weight of Tecumseh we guarantee under bond.

TECUMSEH COAL

$1.60 Per Ton in May

Tecumseh is clean, free-burning and clinkerless. Every bit of it is run over our Giant Marcus Picking Table, which cleans, sorts for size and removes impurities. For steam or domestic use, Tecumseh is the best coal mined in the Middle west.

Tecumseh is sold direct from our big mines located near Vincennes, Indiana. We eliminate all middlemen. You get their profits. Remember—Tecumseh sells during May only at $1.60 per ton in carload lots, F. O. B. Mines.

You don't need to use a whole carload yourself. If a carload is too big, write for the Tecumseh Coal Club Plan. It tells how small users can buy at big users' prices. Write today.

ALASKA DEFENSE VITAL TO U. S. IN CASE OF ATTACK

Vast Fields of Coal, Copper, and Oil at Mercy of Japan; Spy Rumors Afloat.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

CORDOVA.—The preparedness program of the United States should include large appropriations for the defense of Alaska. As a naval base this territory is a key to the northern Pacific. As far as fuel for our battleships is concerned, it is the key to our whole Pacific coast, as well as to Hawaii and the Philippines. Indeed, its coal and oil resources may some day decide whether we are to have victory or defeat in a possible war with Japan.

Practically the only good steaming coal in our Pacific coast territories lies in Alaska. The Asiatic fleet of the future will need in the neighborhood of a half million tons a year, and the coaling stations of the Hawaiian islands and of the Philippines will be supplied from here.

It is of enormous importance that the harbors near which the coal lies be amply protected and defenses should be at once instituted for all the approaches to Resurrection bay, the terminus of Uncle Sam's railroad. That road leads to the Matanuska coal fields and the branch line opening them will be completed this year.

Cordova Is Important Harbor.

An important harbor is that of Cordova. It is within a short distance of the Bering river coal fields, which have great beds of bituminous and anthracite, and also within easy reach of the Katalla oil fields. Cordova is also within 200 miles by an excellent railroad of the best copper mines in the whole world.

Copper is one of the great necessities of modern warfare and any nation that has hold of the Cordova harbor can control all the copper it would need. This port, by the fastest warships of today, is within less than three days of our Puget sound cities. Japan, for instance, has three dreadnaughts of over 27,000 tons each which could make that journey in less than two days.

Japan is ten or twelve days from Seattle. It is much less from Cordova, and the advantage of any of the Asiatic nations having a naval base in Alaska can be easily seen.

Hears Tales of Japanese Spies.

Everywhere I hear stories of how the Japanese are spying Alaska. I am told that the Japanese are now employed in all the fishing stations along the coast. They are to be found at all the salmon canneries and here and there about the mines. They were employed in the Bering river coal fields before the government closed them, and they have worked in all capacities in the mines at Kennicott and about Cordova and in the oil fields.

One of the last Japanese stories I heard relates to a Seattle man who was operating in the Bering coal fields before they were closed by the government. This man had a cook from Japan, whom he called Henry, and who he boasted was the best cook in Alaska. He was always talking of Henry's capabilities.

He said he could not only cook but could make excellent sketches and that he was able to keep a diary and make all sorts of notes. He was so reliable and trustworthy that his employer sent him on all kinds of missions and gave him the care of his papers.

As time passed on the man, seeing the fate of his coal property, left Alaska in disgust and went to Seattle to engage in the wholesale fish business. He had then no further use for Henry, the cook, and he dismissed him with the best of recommendations.

Then the Japanese-Russian war broke out, and the agents of the mikado came to the United States to buy food for the army. One of them came to Seattle to purchase a large consignment of fish. He was referred to the former coal miner. He called, and when he appeared in the office, lo! he was Henry.

Another instance was given me by one of the scientific experts of the United States government who had received an assignment not long ago to go from Juneau to Seward. The cold weather had already set in at the west and the man dreaded the trip. He did not expect to have fellow passengers, but, on going to the steamer, he found that one of the men on board was a Japanese naval attaché who had once been stationed in Washington.

Attache Takes Notes of Trip.

The scientist asked the attaché where he was going and was told that he was making the round trip to Seldovia, the farthest point to which steamers go in the winter.

Before the steamer left Juneau the governor of the territory came down to the wharf and was introduced to the attaché. He asked him where he was going, and upon his replying that he was bound for Seldovia, wanted to know if he had secured a license. The Japanese was dumfounded.

He replied that he did not know a license was required by a foreigner to travel on American vessels going to Alaska, and seemed greatly relieved when the governor explained that he meant a license to hunt for big game, which was the only reason he could possibly think that any one would care to visit Seldovia at that time of the year. The Japanese replied that he was making the trip merely for the sea voyage and for pleasure.

My scientific friend says the attaché had a camera with him and made numerous photographs everywhere. He took snapshots of every bay and channel, and kept a notebook, in which he jotted down voluminous memoranda in Japanese characters. His notebook was evidently precious, for it was fastened to a steel chain, riveted to a leather belt, buckled about his waist.

Oil Fields May Be Vital.

By the recent development in Europe the oil fields of Alaska have become of enormous importance. Gasoline is a necessity for modern warfare. The advantages of supply points of this fuel in the northern Pacific cannot be overestimated, and the oil fields of Alaska may become of great moment in the international complications of the future.

As to the oil along the Pacific coast, the Katalla fields are perhaps the best known. They cover a belt thirty-five miles long and from four to eight miles in width as now defined by the seepages and springs of natural gas. They were beginning to drill there before the government locked up the oil fields, and several claims had already been taken out. These claims the government could not control, and some work is now being done upon them.

In all twenty-six holes have been drilled, and in ten of these more or less oil has been struck. Some of the wells have been producing from ten to twelve barrels per day, but the deepest well has been put down only 1,000 feet, and none has gone deep enough to actually test the field.

Find Seepage of Oil.

A little further south along the coast is another oil region. This is known as the Yakataga field. The field is marked out by the oil seeping out of the ground. The southern edge of it is from a half mile to two miles from the ocean.

This Yakataga oil comes out for the most part in a series of short valleys. Most of the seepages are small, but there is one on Johnston creek that is roughly estimated to discharge a barrel or more of oil a day. No drilling has been done in this field, and the district is almost inaccessible from the ocean, as the landings are exposed to the full sweep of the Pacific.

There is another oil field only a short distance from Seward, on the west shore of Cook inlet called the Iniskin oil field. The oil here is supposed to lie in a stratum of sandstone. It is seeping out of the ground. No drilling has been done there since 1904, and before that the field was only partially tested. One well was sunk to a depth of a thousand feet. It was producing gas and oil when the water rushed in and shut off the oil.

Russians Knew of Oil Fields.

The fourth oil field on the Pacific coast is on the Alaska peninsula. There are a number of oil seepages in that field and two wells were drilled before the conservation scheme stopped further exploitation. The seepages are strong and in one place natural gas flows out of the ground. There is a good harbor at Cold bay, which is open throughout the year.

The fact that petroleum exists in Alaska is not new. The Cold bay field was known to the Russians as far back as 1865, but no attempt was made to investigate it, and thirteen years after we took possession of the territory oil was reported along the Pacific seacoast.

Among the most interesting of oil discoveries in one near the Arctic ocean. It is in the shape of a mound of solidified oil which rises high above the surrounding country. The mound is the residue of a petroleum fountain or spring. It is several hundred yards in diameter and it rises to a height of 150 feet above the level of the tundra. It appears to be composed of petroleum containing an asphaltic base, in which are mixed vegetable matter and silt.

Discoveries Are Far Apart.

The discovery of these oil fields, at such wide distances apart, shows how little we know of Alaska. The oil mound is almost 1,000 miles directly north of the point on the Alaska peninsula where the petroleum is oozing out at Cold bay.

The oil seepages along the Pacific coast extend at wide intervals over a distance, east and west, almost as great as that between New York and Chicago.

Only about one-fifth of Alaska has been carefully investigated by our geologists, and there are probably other deposits of petroleum in the unexplored regions.

Arthur Sears Henning

Down in Washington, every day, things are being done that vitally affect not only the Present but the Future of this great country in which we live.

Things are being done that make this country either a better or poorer place for us to live in—a better or a poorer place in which our children and their children shall grow up and work and build their homes and find their happiness.

Senators and Representatives are there from every state—some working selfishly for themselves, some working nobly for the country's good—some bending all their energies towards getting "pork" to satisfy the petty politicians of their districts, some working solely for the good of all of us.

Ambassadors and other diplomats are there from all the nations of the earth, in touch with everything we do or plan to do.

The President and his Cabinet Officials are working out according to the light they have the destiny of this greatest nation of the earth, the nation in which you and I and all we love must live.

In daily touch with all of these is The Tribune's brilliant, careful, analytical Washington Correspondent, Arthur Sears Henning, and every night he telegraphs The Tribune what has been done throughout the day that is of vital interest to the hundred million men and women and children who make up these United States.

In touch with the makers of our laws, the executives of our national government and the embassies of the greatest foreign powers, he gets the trend of world events that are going to increase or decrease our sum of human happiness and achievement.

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
The Tribune's Washington Correspondent

And he doesn't tell us merely what is done, but gives the underlying motives, the secret, selfish forces there at work to neutralize the efforts of high-minded statesmen.

There is probably no abler analyst of things political and international, no correspondent with a broader grasp of world events, no writer with a keener insight into how we stand at home as well as with the greatest powers of the world, than Arthur Sears Henning.

Every man and woman who loves America, who wants to see this country grow and prosper and be a better place to live in every year, should read Mr. Henning's dispatches every day so as to KNOW WHAT IS GOING ON.

THE FUTURE QUEEN OF ENGLAND?—Rumor has it that Princess Margaret of Denmark has become secretly engaged to the Prince of Wales, official announcement of which event is soon to be made. Princess Margaret, who is 20 years old, has been living in England with her aunt, Queen Alexandra, since the beginning of the war, and, with her cousin, Grand Duchess George of Russia, has been devoting all her time to nursing the wounded in London. The obstacle in the way of the rumored match is that Princess Margaret, unlike most of the members of the reigning family of Denmark, is a Roman Catholic, having been brought up in that faith by her mother, the late Princess Waldemar, who was a daughter of Robert Duc of Chartres. The laws of England prohibit the union of any prince with a Roman Catholic under penalty of forfeiture of the throne. Prince Waldemar is an admiral in the Danish navy. Princess Margaret holds a degree of doctor of philosophy, and is talented in many ways.

Near the top of the picture at the left the bursting of a large shell is shown. The earth is pitted with holes from shell fire, and the trees are denuded and splintered by the constant bombardment.

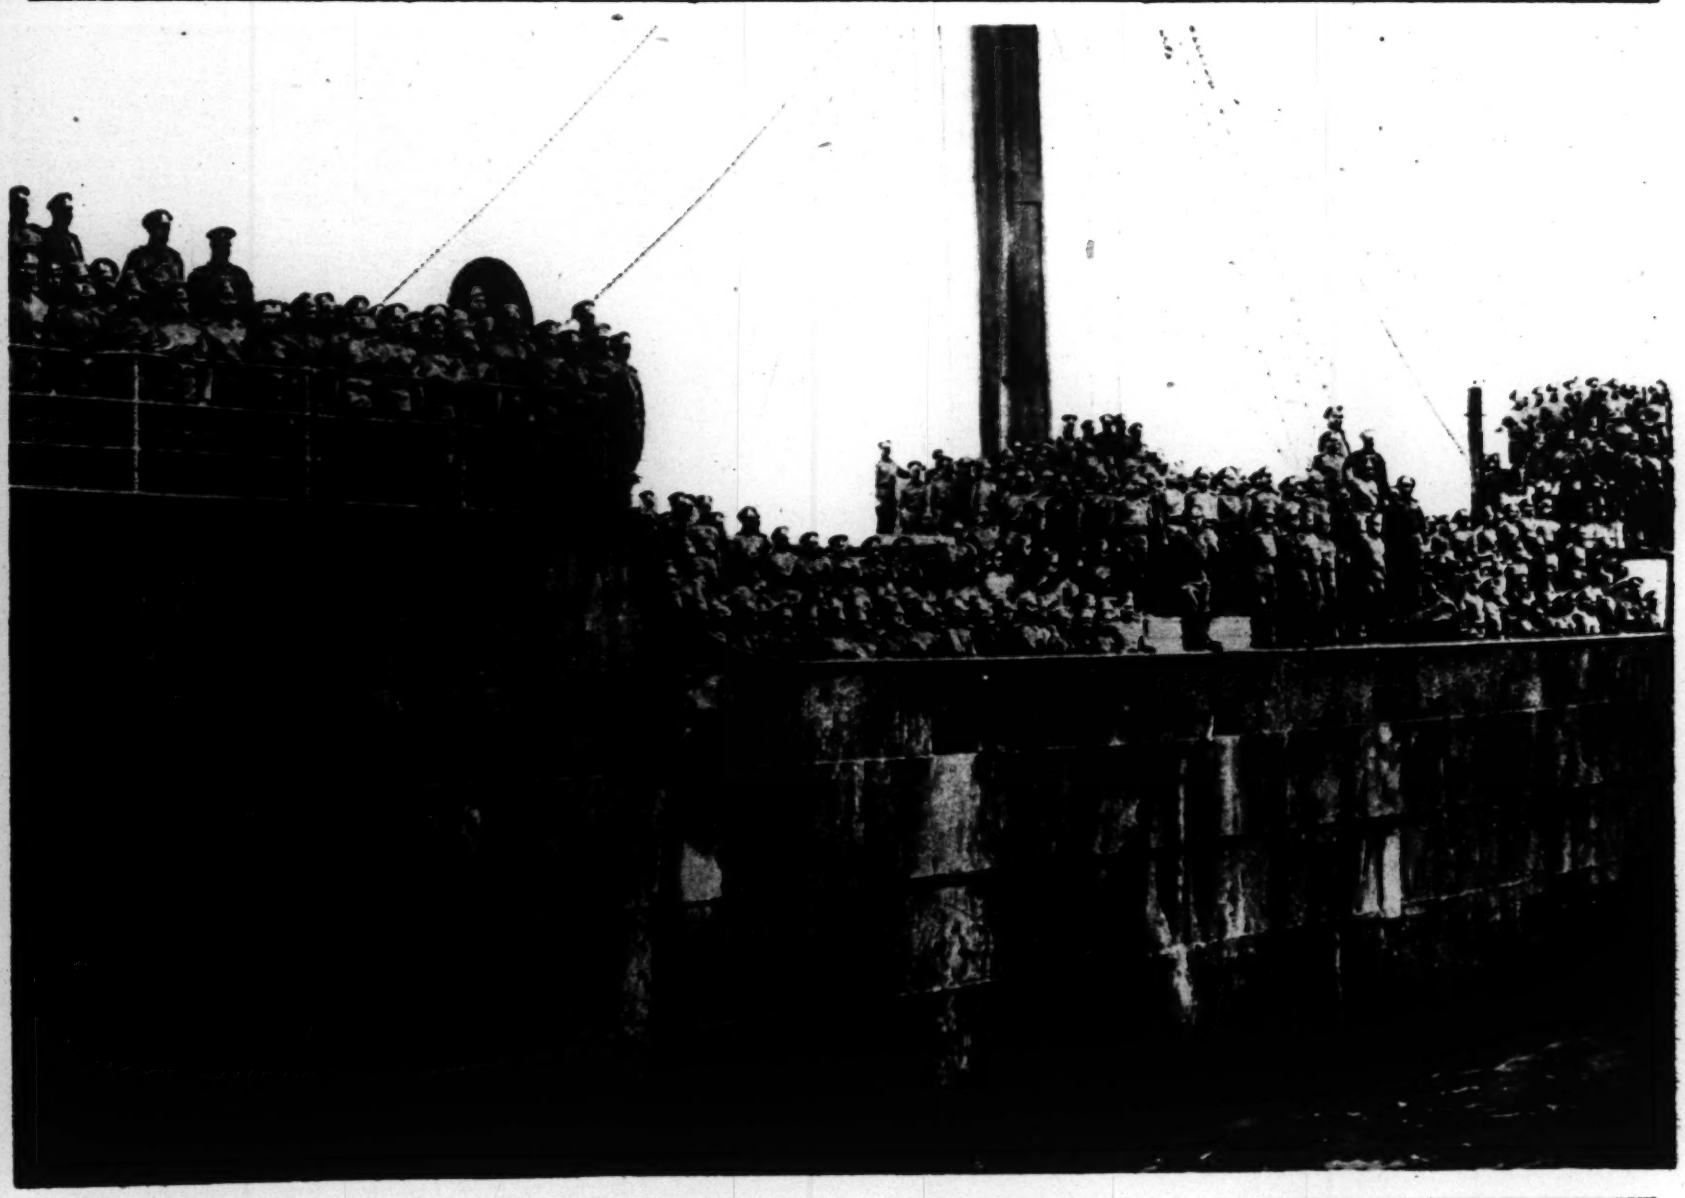
WHAT THE BATTLE OF VERDUN LOOKS LIKE—Not a gigantic pageant staged with a terrible clatter of arms as at Waterloo, Austerlitz, and Gettysburg is the modern battle. It is like the above picture, except when charges for trenches are made. Between the trenches, in which the men are hidden, shells of various caliber burst. In this picture, which shows two steel helmets of French soldiers in the foreground, may be seen the bursting of a high explosive shell about half a mile away. (Photograph from Medem Photo service.)



ARRIVAL OF THE FIRST RUSSIAN CONTINGENT IN FRANCE—Russia has contributed, it is reported, 25,000 troops during the last two months to the allied forces fighting in the western theater of war. The Russian soldiers, who were received everywhere with great enthusiasm by the French population, are shown aboard a transport just before disembarking at Marseilles.

MEN OF

THE FRENCH ANSWER TO THE GERMAN "42"—This gigantic shell, photograph of which was taken in the French war minister's office, is the new French 40 centimeter shell, which is said to equal in destructiveness the famous 42 centimeter "brummer" used by the Germans in demolishing the forts of Liege, Namur, and Maubeuge. The cost of manufacturing each shell of this caliber is over $2,500. (Photograph from Medem Photo service.)

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHY AS A WAR REVENUE PRODUCER—Mr. Bennett, in sending this postcard from Berlin, wrote: "Amateur photography has earned thousands of marks for the various relief and charity funds of the war. Whenever one of the ladies of the imperial family takes a good snapshot of a notable the photograph is made the excuse for a new issue of picture postcards, which are sold for the benefit of the funds. Such cards cost a few pfennigs more than the ordinary picture postcards, and usually sell for 20 pfg. During one of her visits to the headquarters of Field Marshal von Hindenburg in the castle at Posen the German empress snapshotted this picture of the general. Under the picture she wrote: 'For the benefit of the war relief,' and signed her name."

THREE GENERATIONS IN FIELD GRAY—James O'Donnell Bennett, "Tribune" war correspondent, who sent this postcard from Germany, wrote on the back of it: "Here are William Frederick Victor Albert of Hohenzollern (otherwise the German emperor), aged 57; William Frederick Victor August Ernest of Hohenzollern (otherwise the German crown prince), aged 33, and William Frederick Francis Joseph Christian Olaf of Hohenzollern (heir presumptive to the German throne), aged 9, and they are all in field gray. Father and son are with their troops. The grandson is learning his lessons and playing with his three brothers in his father's palace at the foot of Unter den Linden. He is a Fourth of July boy, having been born on Independence day, 1906."

LIEUT. BREITHAUPT was commander of the "L-15," the German Zeppelin which broke up in the Thames river while on a raid over London. He is shown wearing the ribbon of the Order Pour Le Merite, gained for bombarding London from the air on Oct. 13, 1915, and the Iron Cross. Lieut. CAPT. ROBERT MONTEITH, formerly of the British army, now captain of the Irish company of the German army in Zossen, is suspected of having a part in the instigation of the recent riots in Dublin. Capt. Monteith, when the war broke out, brought his wife to the United States from England, and then shipped back to Germany as a stowaway. Miss Carolyn Wilson, "Tribune" war correspondent, says that while she was in Germany Capt. Monteith was in constant communication with Sir Roger Casement, leader of the Irish rebellion. The captain wears the gray-green uniform of the German-Irish regiment, with the harp embroidered on the collar.

"You can make your skin what you would love to have it"

WHATEVER condition is keeping your skin from being attractive, it can be changed. Your skin, like the rest of your body, is changing every day. As the old skin dies, new skin forms in its place.

This is your opportunity. Your complexion depends on how you take care of this new skin. By using the following Woodbury treatment regularly you can keep this new skin so strong and active that it cannot help taking on the greater clearness, freshness, and charm you have longed for.

Use this treatment once a day

Lather your washcloth well with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. Apply it to your face and distribute the lather thoroughly. Now, with the tips of your fingers, work this cleansing, antiseptic lather into your skin, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. Whenever possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice. Always be particular to dry your face well.

Use this treatment persistently and in ten days or two weeks your skin should show a marked improvement—a promise of that lovelier complexion which the daily use of Woodbury's always brings.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. A 25c cake is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this skin treatment. Get a cake today. It is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago; in fact, by dealers everywhere.

As a disinfectant—for kitchen sinks, garbage pail, closet, cellar, waste pipes. In the sickroom and for general cleaning.

For toilet uses—tired, aching feet; perspiration odors; bath and shampoo.

Very economical. Always used in water. Many times stronger than carbolic acid, but safe to use.

These installation stations were established for the benefit and convenience of the great number of our Chicago customers who could not all be accommodated at our home station. They are located on the boulevards at well-known locations within easy driving distance of you—no matter where you live. Stop at any one of them and you can have your car equipped with the Compensating Vapor Plug in a very few minutes.

READ THIS OFFER—THE SQUAREST EVER MADE TO MOTORISTS!

We want you to test the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG in YOUR way. We want you to put one on your own car and prove to your own satisfaction that it gives you 30% more speed, 30% more power, 40% more mileage—or better. We DON'T want you to make your test on the boulevards. We want you to prove the efficiency of our device under the most severe conditions you meet when you drive your car—over steep hills—rugged and undeveloped roads—deep sand—mud and in all sorts of weather conditions. You risk NOTHING when you equip your car with a COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG, because of our great "money-back" offer. Your money is simply on deposit, pending the result of YOUR test.

Now don't say that this service might be good for SOME cars but not for yours, because we guarantee it to prove our claims in actual performance on ANY car if the motor is in good condition. We couldn't afford to make this offer if all the claims we make for the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG were not COLD FACTS.

The COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG is patented and protected and all similar devices are infringements. It is simple in operation; doesn't strangle your motor with piping, and is not the "all-day-sucker" type, which amounts to nothing more than drilling a hole under manifold and leaving it open.

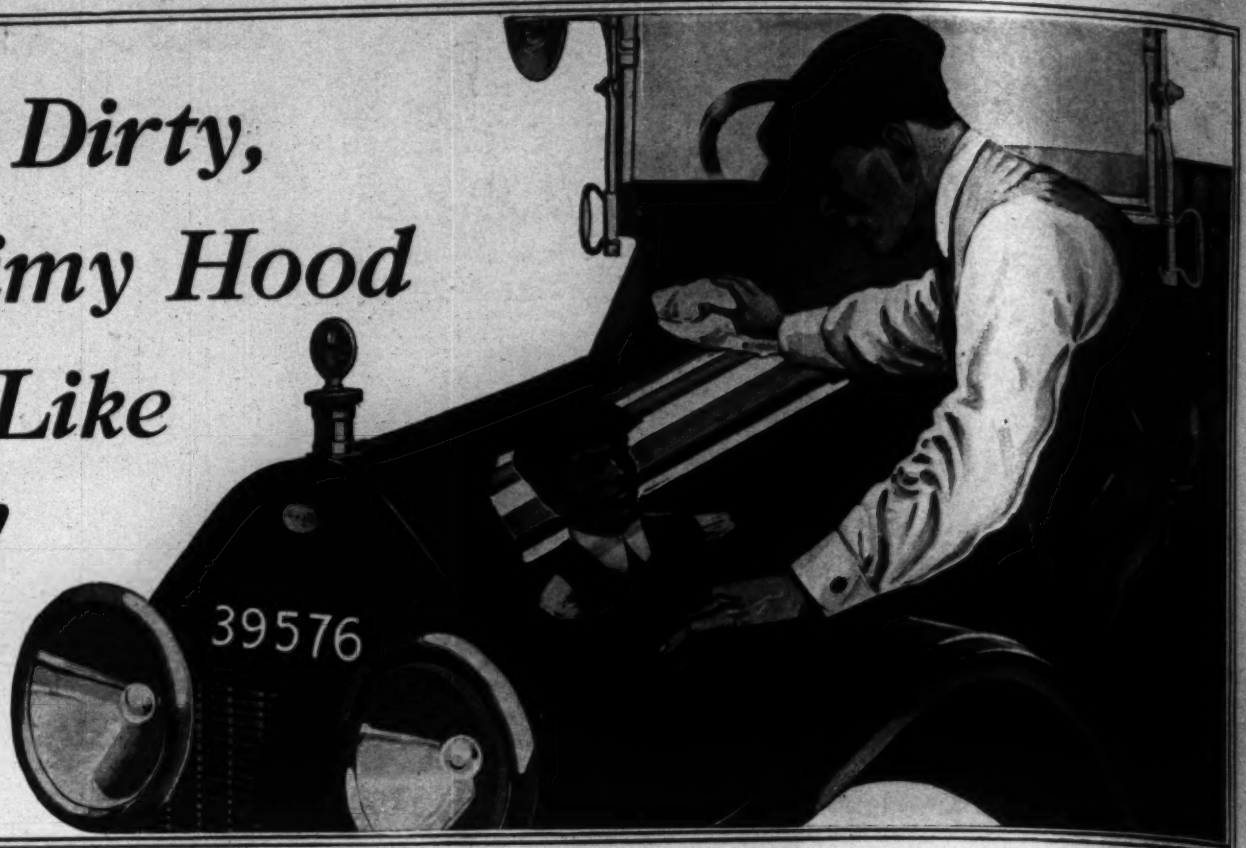
That Dirty, Grimy Hood Just Like New!



DO you know that you, yourself can make that dirty, grimy, old hood look just like new and save the cost of re-varnishing—all you need is Johnson's Cleaner and Prepared Wax.

JOHNSON'S CLEANER

really cleans—it entirely removes all stains, discolorations, scum, road oil, tar and grease from body, hood and fenders. Even those spots that are ground in—mud freckles—and surface scratches you thought were permanent—will disappear like magic under Johnson's Cleaner. And it doesn't injure or scratch the finest varnish—simply cleans and prepares it for the wax polish.

JOHNSON'S PREPARED WAX is the proper body polish to use on your car. It preserves the varnish and protects it from the weather adding years to its life. It covers up mars and scratches—prevents checking and cracking and "sheds water like a duck's back."

A Dust-Proof Polish

Johnson's Prepared Wax imparts a hard, dry, glasslike coating to which dust and dirt cannot adhere. After a dirty, dusty trip just wipe off your car—it isn't necessary to wash it. Many people even wax the under side of their fenders because the mud comes off so easily.

Makes a "Wash" last for Weeks

Johnson's Prepared Wax is a boon to the man who takes care of his own car as it makes a "wash" last twice as long. It will keep the body, hood and fenders of your car as beautifully polished as when it came out of the factory.

Johnson's Prepared Wax gives Craftsman furniture that soft, artistic polish so appropriate to this style. It entirely removes the "cloudiness" from Mahogany, restoring its original gloss. There is nothing like Johnson's Prepared Wax for keeping dining room tables bright and tempting—hot dishes have no effect whatever upon it.

Every family has dozens of uses for Johnson's Prepared Wax. It is just as necessary around the house as soap. Keep a can always on hand for polishing your

Trading Posts of Empire

Secretary of Commerce

BEFORE the war the Big Three, so to speak, in the international markets of the world stood in this order: Great Britain, Germany, and the United States. Today the United States is in the lead, Great Britain is second, and Germany, for obvious reasons, is doing little foreign trade. Can the United States hold first place when the war closes? If the answer is to be yes, how is it to be done? If the answer is to be no, why must it be so?

These questions require that we consider the basis for foreign trade. This basis is not merely the ability to undersell competitors. It is partly that, but there are many other things to be considered. There are such important matters as design, quality, and suitability as regards the goods offered, and promptness, packing, care, and credits as regards the way in which the business is done.

There is, furthermore, one very serious factor, perhaps the greatest of all the forces affecting the case, namely, the question whether there are customers abroad who want American goods so much that they will give them preference. There have been such customers for German goods in the past and there are such customers for English goods at present. There have not been many who have felt in that way about American goods. This, of course, has given our competitors a great advantage. The German and English salesmen have found all over the world parties who wished to buy German or English goods and gave them preference in specifications and in orders.

Why was this so? Because the buyers represented German or English capital or were in a measure dependent on German or English banks for loans and other financial support. They naturally bought in the country from which their money came or through whose banks they were favored. There were almost no American banks abroad and few or no American-owned concerns prior to this war, and hence comparatively little disposition to favor American markets. Our competitors sold in the easiest market. We sold in the hardest market. It is a great tribute to our producing and selling capacity that under these adverse circumstances we built up a great foreign trade before the war.

CAN we compete after the war? The answer is that we did compete in large part before the war. We had a good and growing trade. It did not come to us by favor but because we earned it, and as said, we earned it under the hardest conditions. These conditions are changing and getting better. There have come into being American-owned concerns operating abroad, and more of them are springing up. There have sprung into life American-owned banks abroad, and more are coming. Thus we are getting in our hands the two great tools of foreign trade, the very tools our competitors have used so effectively in the past.

It will no longer be always the case that the American salesman will only have a chance at such business as can not be placed with Germany or England. He will find now and increasingly hereafter buyers who want to buy the products of American mills, who like those products, understand them, do not have to be educated concerning them, and who will give them preference for the very same reasons that others have given preference to their own nationals.

We need have little fear about our competing power in foreign markets. The past history has shown that. As a matter of fact, we might have done a great deal more in foreign markets had we chosen to give the study and time to them that is necessary to win and hold them. We can make the goods the foreign markets want in many lines and make them suitable in price and quality and design and other things.

THIS is all good and necessary but it is not sufficient for the extending of the markets we have or for the acquiring of new ones. To do this work on a great scale we must put American money abroad where it is needed and build up lines of business that will not only return dividends on the capital invested in them, but will do also what is quite as important, return orders to American factories for the goods they need to use. We need abroad the American-owned bank, devoted to American trade, helpfully supporting the American investment and giving to the American-owned business operating in a foreign land that aid which has been the means of so greatly enriching our competitors.

This much may be said, therefore, as to what will happen when the war shall close. If and when our competitors seek to reassert their supremacy they will find our commercial intrenchments far stronger than they were. Every American-owned business in foreign lands is an outlying fortress of American commerce. Every American-owned bank in that foreign land is a reserve supply base for those fortresses. We shall be intrenched as we have not been, and shall have potent weapons in the peaceful commercial contest with which we have not heretofore been armed.

IT remains to be critical of ourselves at home. The best protection is care and criticism in our own shops. Cast out of them every old wreck of a machine by whose use we may have mistakenly thought to avoid purchasing a new one. Good commercial tools abroad must be matched by good industrial tools at home. The new day in the foreign field can not arise out of the old darkness in some home factories. We must criticize our methods unsparingly. If they are good methods they will stand the test. If they are bad methods they ought to be discarded. Toleration of them will remain an insuperable obstacle.

This, then, is the high and important time to prepare for peace. New tools and better ones at home and abroad, new methods and better ones abroad and at home. If this is done and well done and widely done we should be able to reckon upon a certain and a steady flow of business from abroad to keep our mills moving and our men employed.

THE KRYPTOK INVISIBLE BIFOCAL

The Perfection of the Eyeglass
Idea Originated Aº Dⁱ 1784 by Benj. Franklin

AN ILLUSTRATED STORY FOR FOLKS WHO NEED DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

"I am happy in the invention of double spectacles which, serving for distant objects as well as for near ones, make my eyes as useful to me as they ever were."

So wrote Benjamin Franklin in one of his letters. He it was who first conceived the idea of taking a near-sighted lens and a far-sighted lens, cutting each in half and fitting them in a spectacle frame.

If Franklin could see the perfection of his idea in the KRYPTOK (pronounced Crip-tock) Invisible Bifocal, he would be astonished. Instead of a jagged line separating the two lenses, KRYPTOK is one solid crystal-clear lens which cannot possibly be detected from single vision glasses.

The smooth and clear surface of KRYPTOK Glasses is entirely free from the disfiguring, age-revealing lines and seams of old-fashioned bifocals. Yet KRYPTOKS give you all the convenience of near and far sight in one pair of glasses. They put an end to the constant removing and replacing of your reading glasses — or fussing with two pairs. You can see both close and distant objects with equal clearness.

Write for Booklet "Eyesight Efficiency"

It explains how KRYPTOK Glasses give you comfort and convenience for near and far vision, keep you young-looking and preserve your eyesight. Please give name of your oculist, optometrist or optician, if possible.

THE FORTUNES OF LUCKY LOUNSBERRY

By RENNOLD WOLF

ILLUSTRATIONS BY ERNEST FUHR

IN the matter of bringing good luck to himself Lounsberry was a self-starting human horseshoe, a personally conducted four-leafed clover. He personified every talisman from Aladdin's lamp down to the last pin picked up by a superstitious pedestrian. A certain page in the Lounsberry family Bible referred to him as Robert; but in the law offices of Seward, Robbins, McLoughlin and Gluck he was known as Lucky.

It was nothing but luck, in the first place, that got him his position in this conservative office, whither every rich man of the community burdened with an LL. B. labeled son was endeavoring to smuggle his offspring. The firm was the foremost in that part of the State, and a connection with it was desirable socially and professionally. There was a long waiting list of expert tango-dancers, retired college glee club leaders and other embryonic but dormant Choates who hoped some day to occupy a desk in the outer room, and leisurely make their way to a private office, an individual push button and representation on the firm's letterhead.

And over the heads of that gilt-edged array of talent Lounsberry fairly hurdled into a clerkship. He had called one day, a stranger, without letter of introduction or influence, and sat waiting in the general office for an audience.

It was the luncheon hour. Nearly everybody had deserted the office, but Lounsberry stuck, hoping perhaps to attract the attention of some one in authority on his way back from the Business Men's Lunch across the street. He had sat there for nearly an hour when Old Seward, the senior member, whom digests and common law precedents had transformed from the most popular man of Yale '72 into an encyclopedic crab, and whose luncheon was always an apple at his desk, opened the door leading from the private hallway into the outer office.

He was in a rage. He had been pushing his button violently for five minutes without response. He grew more furious when he found neither clerk nor boy in attendance. Old Seward was opposed to every delay but the law's.

In his hand he held a long envelope, the kind in which legal documents are mailed. With it he beat a tattoo on his leg. Then he muttered, "Nobody here, as usual," and added a word current scripturally, but barred socially.

"You're not one of my clerks, are you?" he snapped at Lounsberry.

"Not yet," was the genial reply.

"Thought you might be—you look stupid enough."

"Could I be of any service to you?" the young man inquired.

"You could, if you knew enough to run over to the General Post Office, and not stop to look in windows or play pool, as most of my clerks do."

"You may depend on me, sir," said Lounsberry modestly.

"Well, this letter must be mailed immediately, so that it goes off on the one o'clock train. It's a legal notice, and tomorrow is the last day for it to reach New York. It's got to be mailed, and I've got to have an affidavit stating that fact. It's twelve-thirty-five now, Can you make it?"

"I made 440 yards in 51 once," declared Lounsberry proudly.

Old Seward handed him the envelope, and Lounsberry moved toward the door.

"Come back afterwards and sign that affidavit," called the senior member after him.

EXACTLY twenty minutes later the young man was standing, hat in hand, inside the door labeled:

MR. SEWARD
Private

"I'm here to sign the affidavit, sir," he said.

"You mailed the notice at the General Post Office—not in a letter box?" demanded the lawyer.

"No, sir," replied Lounsberry, "I took it to the mail clerk on the New York train to make sure."

"Could you do that?" inquired Old Seward, somewhat doubtfully.

"Certainly, I saw him postmark it and put it in the bag."

"U-m. By the way," rumbled the lawyer, with sudden recollection, "what were you doing in this office?"

"Looking for a position—clerkship."

"Well, I don't know how good a lawyer you'll make," with a still deeper rumble, "but you're the best messenger boy I ever had. Do you smoke?"

"Yes, sir."

"Drink?"

"Yes, sir—occasionally."

"Run after women?"

"Well, I never run away from them," replied Lounsberry.

"You're truthful, anyhow," commented the lawyer. "That's something. Report to Mr. Wells, our managing clerk, and tell him I've engaged you."

AND that's the way Lounsberry fell into a position—just luck, sheer, downright luck. All the other clerks said so when they heard of it. Then and there they dubbed him "Lucky" Lounsberry, and it stuck.

The name certainly was well chosen. Luck pursued its bearer with curious persistency. If he had tried to avoid it, it would have crossed the street and bumped into him. Why, one day he happened to be passing the door of the City Court when a case, which the firm hadn't expected to be called for a week, was, through a break in the calendar, suddenly reached, and pronounced ready by the opposing attorney. Lounsberry entered the court room, responded for his office and held his ground until reinforcements arrived, thus preventing a default and saving costs and no end of annoyance.

On another occasion when McLoughlin, the real estate member of the firm, was nearly distracted because he had been unable to locate a certain woman, the only defendant remaining to be served in an important foreclosure, Lounsberry chanced to come upon her at a roadhouse. The touring car in which he was riding with a party of friends had broken down outside. The woman's motor, too, had faltered in front of the same roadhouse, and she was waiting for it to be repaired. Of course, it was like Lounsberry to have a blank summons in his pocket, which he filled out and served on the spot. Was that anything but luck?

"Say," remarked the red-headed office boy one day, "if that guy was ever left to starve on a desert island, it would rain ham and eggs."

"You're right," chirped in Vera, the undisputed favorite typist in the Erie Bank Building. "And if he fell overboard in the middle of the ocean, Annette Kellerman would come swimming along and save him. I suppose they'd live happy ever after."

"Which might be a little awkward for Annette," remarked young Dodd, "considering that she has a perfectly good husband."

THERE was nothing prepossessing about the object of this discussion. He was tall and ungainly, and somewhat careless of his attire. Not a trace of brilliancy could any of his fellow clerks detect. But he was good-natured—exasperatingly so. He had a trick of whistling softly to himself—usually a strain of Rigoletto, in which he floundered badly toward the end. When he wasn't employed in copying documents or indexing papers it was his custom to sit with his chair tilted back, one foot supporting it and the other on the rung, reading Coke on Littleton and whistling. Nothing seemed to annoy him, but he seemed to annoy everybody. It was his duty to watch the petty cases on the Municipal Court calendar, to file papers in the County Clerk and Surrogate's offices, and make himself generally useful. However unpleasant or uninteresting his task, he never complained, but just whistled another stave and went at it.

His whistling annoyed "Pop" Johnson dreadfully. Pop was the oldest man in the office, coming there with Seward when the latter was fresh from college. He had never sought admittance to the bar, but his long experience had made him an expert in the forms of deeds, mortgages and other important papers, and, although the office was equipped with the customary force of typewriters, the more formidable documents, especially the ponderous wills of older clients, he wrote out in long hand. He was very proud, was Johnson, of his imposing penmanship, with every down stroke shaded. He stood for all that was most conservative in this most conservative of law offices, and his carefully parted white whiskers were irrefutable proof of the dignity and honor of Seward, Robbins, McLoughlin and Gluck. He also was the bookkeeper, whose accounts no auditor ever investigated. Among the clerks there was a saying that even members of the firm hesitated to inquire into financial matters which he had in charge.

"How much do you pay Pop Johnson?" a client once asked Gluck, the junior member.

"I really don't know," was the reply. "He was getting $1500 a year the last time he took me into his confidence, but that was six months ago, and he may have promoted himself since then."

Johnson, most of all, resented Lounsberry. Once the old man mislaid a document—almost a capital offense in his own eyes—and Lucky found it; stumbled upon it back of an old volume of admiralty reports that hadn't been consulted since the competition of railroads had reduced maritime practice in inland cities to mere cases of pleasure craft collision. Of course, it was only chance that took him to the hiding place of the document, and, though the dean of the clerical force was relieved by its recovery, he resented Lounsberry's luck. It was simply uncanny, said Pop.

Thus it came about that Lounsberry was in ill favor with the entire staff. It wasn't fair that one man should have all the luck—in law any more than in poker. Although he seldom talked much about himself, stray remarks gave rise to the belief that he had been lucky all his life. At college, for instance, he had gained fame by scoring a touchdown at a critical moment in a desperate game. That, too, his colleagues in the office learned, was only the result of his persistent good luck. A player on the opposing team had fumbled the ball; Lounsberry chanced to be standing near—when probably by all the instructions of the coach and the science of the game he should have been on the opposite end—and he grabbed the ball. Luck—that was all!

Old Seward made a sort of pet of him—as much of a pet as he ever made of anything except the wheezy, wind-broken mare, which, despite the family's supply of limousines, transported him to and fro. Ever since the first day when Lounsberry had mailed the legal notice Old Seward seemed to prefer him for his personal errands. Dodd, who previously had been assigned to answer Seward's ring, was now in charge of the commissary department—the blanks, the stationery, the seals and the paste.

"How does my father ever expect me to be an Elihu Root, messing about with all these sticky things?" growled Dodd. "I'll probably turn out to be a billposter."

The fact that Old Seward favored Lounsberry did not in the least enhance his general popularity, to be sure.

AND now for the most astonishing stroke of luck of all that befell him—a mere caprice of fortune that sent him to the head of the staff, and will probably mean a partnership before long. One of the most important of the firm's clients was a big life insurance company, The Frugality. Seward, Robbins, McLoughlin and Gluck represented that company in all litigation arising in a certain district. Recently the insurance company had inaugurated an industrial branch, issuing life policies of $1000 and less to the working classes.

Seward, who had specialized in insurance, attended to most of The Frugality's business, and, although gradually he had come to restrict himself chiefly to office work, he still personally conducted the trials in insurance litigation. The premiums on industrial policies were paid in monthly instalments to the agents who wrote them, and since the agents were compensated by commissions on their collections, they were not always careful in accepting a risk. In fact, the directors had discovered many instances of deliberate collusion between the agent and the insured which had resulted in an alarming increase of unsound risks. In order to dispose of a policy and earn a commission, an agent frequently permitted the insured to misrepresent his age, his medical history and other data important in determining his qualifications.

This sort of fraud appeared to be most flagrant in Western New York, and The Frugality, although a thoroughly stable and fair company, decided to contest vigorously all suspicious claims, and to set an example from which agents in other territory might take warning. Therefore, these cases waged on industrial policies were far more important than was indicated by the money involved.

Lounsberry had been in the office less than a year when one of these actions approached trial in a neighboring county. Old Seward always depended upon an underling to prepare each case for him, stepping pompously into court a few minutes before the beginning of the trial, and relying upon a carefully outlined brief and his own forensic ability to make a showy spectacle of oratory and learning.

This particular suit—known to the office as the Holden case—had proved troublesome. The misrepresentation alleged by The Frugality in contesting the claim was that of age. William Holden, the insured, had written down his age on the application blank as fifty years. He had died a few months later, of what apparently was old age. If the decedent had lied, and his misrepresentation could be proved, the Holden heirs would be defeated.

Any lawyer will affirm that it is difficult to establish a man's age under such circumstances. When Holden was born the statutory requirements concerning birth certificates had not yet been enacted. If any documentary evidence existed, it was probably the Holden family Bible in possession of the heirs who were fighting the insurance company. Relatives or boyhood associates, who had been reared with the dead man and were familiar with his youth, were competent to testify as to his age, but the relatives were prejudiced and doubtless prepared to commit perjury, else they would not have sworn to the complaint. As for Holden's boyhood associates, they were presumably dead or in parts unknown.

THESE various obstacles had all been canvassed by Old Seward when the case of Holden versus The Frugality Insurance Company was placed on the trial calendar the preceding term. In fact, it was because, in the absence of conclusive evidence, he had seemed to face certain defeat, that he exerted his ingenuity and imagination to find a pretext for putting the case over until the following term.

Now further attempt at delay was useless. The case seemed likely to be reached in a day or two, and without help from an unexpected quarter the senior member was doomed to meet either a default or an ignominious beating. In this emergency Lounsberry was assigned to "work up the evidence." Seward was to follow in time for the trial. The staff regarded the appointment as a gorgeous joke. Even Pop Johnson grinned broadly when he learned it, and that worthy hadn't been known to smile since the United States Supreme Court had pronounced valid a will he had written in his most florid penmanship twenty years previously.

If Lounsberry felt any qualms he did not betray them.

"All right, sir," he replied, when Old Seward passed sentence. "I'll leave for Lockport immediately, and wire you of my success."

"Success," chuckled Dodd. "Here's one time when Lucky stumps his toe—uh-huh."

This was in December, and any one familiar with weather signs in Western New York could have foreseen the blizzard sweeping over the Great Lakes. In fact, snow was already beginning to fall. Nevertheless, Lounsberry was as good as his word. Filling out a set of subpoenas, leaving blank only the space for the name, and reloading his fountain pen, he buttoned up his coat and started for the train which was to take him to Lockport twenty miles away. As he walked out of the door he whistled a strain of Rigoletto and skidded as usual.

Holden had not died in Lockport, which was the county seat. He had lived on a farm about eight miles distant in a section renowned chiefly for its huge boulders. Nature had not done much for the farmers in that section, and they hadn't improved on nature except to coax a scant livelihood out of the stony soil.

By the time Lounsberry stepped from the train at Lockport the snow was a foot on the ground, and falling faster. However, accompanying himself with his exclusive version of Rigoletto, he struck out for the main street, intending to inquire directions to the Holden neighborhood and to hire a conveyance to take him there. With head sunk deep in his upturned collar, he was pushing his way vigorously through the snow when a young woman in front of him slipped and fell to the ground with a cry of pain.

"Are you hurt?" asked Lounsberry, stooping quickly to help her.

"My ankle; I'm afraid I've turned it," replied the girl.

"Then you mustn't step on it. I know, because I've seen many a sprained ankle on the gridiron. Let's see where we are—if there's a drug store nearby."

The accident had happened in front of a narrow hallway leading to offices above. On one side of the entrance was the sign,

DR. HOWARD BAKER

"We'll try him," continued Lounsberry. "He may be a horse doctor or a chiropodist, but we'll take a chance."

With this he placed one arm around her waist, the other under her knees, and lifted her easily from the ground.

"Oh, you mustn't," said the girl.

"Yes, indeed, I must," declared Lounsberry, who had already noticed that she was pretty, and who, as he had confessed to Old Seward on his first day in the office, was not of a disposition to desert beauty in distress.

Into the narrow hallway and up a flight of stairs he walked briskly. On a door at the first landing he read again the sign, Dr. Howard Baker, and without further ceremony pushed it open and entered. The girl he deposited in the first convenient chair, cautioning her not to touch her foot to the floor.

By a window at the opposite side of the room stood the doctor, bending over a patient in an operating chair. He was a man of about fifty, with the typical facial upholstery of the country physician.

"Pardon me, doctor," said Lounsberry, "but if you can leave your case for a minute I wish you'd look at this young lady. I think she's sprained her ankle."

"Oh, you mustn't," said the girl.
"Yes, indeed, I must," declared Lounsberry.

"It isn't serious," murmured the girl, but tears in her eyes betrayed the pain.

"Anything that happened to your ankle——" began Lounsberry, laying emphasis on the personal pronoun. "That is, any accident to an ankle may be serious."

Doctor Baker laid down his instrument and crossed over to the pair.

"Let me examine it," he said.

Lounsberry turned away. You must know that in Lockport ankles are somewhat immoral.

"No bones broken," announced the doctor, pressing the ankle between his fingers. "Take off your shoe and stocking."

Lounsberry walked to the window and looked down on the street. He had set out to find witnesses in an important lawsuit, and thus far the total haul was a blizzard and a girl even of whose name he was ignorant.

Stephen Craves the Universal

By PARKER FILLMORE
Author of "The Rosie World," "The Hickory Limb," Etc.
ILLUSTRATIONS BY R. M. BRINKERHOFF

"Amelia Hard!" her brother shouted, "you stop talking to boys on the street! And what's more, you go on home!"

SMALL Truxtonians began by looking at Stephen in much the same manner that their parents regarded Stephen's parents. Yet they were franker in their curiosity about him and not so determined in their reserve. For two days they let him root for the balls that went over the fence but exchanged no words with him. On the third day when Stephen made his presence known by a cordial, "Hello, fellows!" Buddie Hard, the minister's boy, opened the gate, as it were, by returning a gruff, "Hello, yourself!"

Stephen promptly climbed the fence. Once on the other side he remarked in a tone unmistakably friendly "Glad to know you fellows."

Friendliness, no doubt, begets friendliness, but not necessarily on the instant. Four small boys gazed back at him glassily.

"Huh!" grunted Joe Webster.

"The cheek of it!" Ted Long ejaculated, and Harry Burns demanded roughly; "What do you call yourself?"

Though individually Stephen was a stranger, they knew his family name well enough as it was a familiar one in Truxton. Yet, like cautious lawyers they would not admit the knowledge of anything.

Stephen introduced himself with a graceful bow: "My name is Stephen Galt IV."

The trouble with Stephen was he was too graceful. In his place any of his interlocutors would have been selfconscious, rigid, apologetic. In a strange woman of open frank charm, their mothers would have suspected easy virtue. In Stephen's frankness there was something they likewise resented instinctively. So when he with all the ease in the world said: "My name is Stephen Galt IV," Buddie Hard demanded with withering sarcasm: "Fourth what?"

"Fourth in the line," Stephen explained. "The first Stephen was my great-grandfather. He founded the mills at South Truxton. He put up the Galt fountain down at the station. Rotten design, my father says. Then his son was Stephen the second. He's my grandfather. He built the library here. That's why it's called the Galt Library. First free library in Ohio, my father says."

Stephen paused and Joe Webster grunted: "Well?"

"Then my father is third. That's why we call him Tertius. You know my father is Stephen Galt, the painter. He's the greatest Galt yet."

"Huh!" sneered one of his new friends. "Greatest Galt yet! Then why do you live in a stable?"

"And why do you cut your hair so long?" another demand.

Both questions were equally surprising to Stephen. He ran his fingers thoughtfully through his heavy brown locks. "You see my grandfather said if we wanted to come home he would give us the old Galt place for five years. We couldn't think of living in the house—it has about twenty rooms!—but the stable's fine. We've made a splendid big studio for my father and besides that we have a little kitchen, a bathroom, and two bedrooms. We've never been so comfortable."

"Three rooms, a kitchenette, and a bath, for a family of three," Harry Burns remarked in disgust. Harry was the son of a real estate man, so his summing up of the situation was accepted as authoritative.

"Then about my hair," Stephen went on, "well, to tell the truth, I'd rather have it short myself, but Nancy likes it long. You see, we always let her have her own way in things like this."

"Who's Nancy?" Bud grunted.

"Nancy's my mother."

"What?" Bud's mouth dropped in amazement. "And do you call her Nancy? Gee!" He turned to his friends: "Can you beat it?"

"Nancy's her name," Stephen insisted. "Everybody that knows her well calls her Nancy, and of course I'm one of her best friends."

"I see myself calling my mother by her first name," Joe Webster remarked significantly, and each of the others snickered: "Me, too!"

"You see," Stephen continued, "the women always like us to have our hair long."

"They don't either!" Bud roared.

"I'll prove it!" Stephen said. "Here come two girls now. We'll ask them."

"Better look out what you say," Bud grunted warningly. "One of them is my sister Amelia."

"And the other is my sister Ruby," Joe Webster continued in the same threatening tone.

Two small girls, "dressed for the afternoon," and frightfully conscious of the effect they were producing on an admiring world, minced by.

"Hello, girls!" Stephen drawled out.

The two little girls nudged each other and giggled.

"Amelia," Bud commanded, "don't you talk to him! You don't know who he is."

The little girl who was fat and dumpy with light hair pulled back tightly in two small shiny pigtails, looked at Bud defiantly. "Do, too, know who he is. He's the new Galt boy, and he lives in the old Galt stable."

Now in moments of excitement Amelia had a very distressing mannerism. That is, it was distressing to her brother. Brothers, as every one knows, are more easily distressed than any other class of human beings. Amelia, as she declared Stephen's identity, quite unconsciously exhibited this mannerism.

"Amelia Hard!" Bud roared out, "you stop wiggling that way!"

AMELIA looked at her brother indignantly. "I'm not wiggling!" She squirmed like a little female spaniel in order to make her denial the more emphatic. "Am I, Ruby?"

True to the spirit of friendship, rather than the letter of fact, Ruby declared stoutly: "Of course you're not!"

"There!" Amelia cried, squirming triumphantly.

"Say, Amelia," Stephen began. He looked at her with that expression of fascinating amiability which the male of the species instinctively assumes when he addresses a female other than a sister. "Say, Amelia, do you like my hair?"

Amelia blushed and dimpled and squirmed. "Y-e-s; I like it! It's pretty!"

Stephen turned toward Ruby. "Do you like hair cut long, Ruby?"

Ruby was a dark slender little beauty in whom emotion expressed itself with downcast eyelids and a faint langorous smile. She dropped her eyes now and murmured: "Yes, I think——"

"Watch out what you're saying!" Joe Webster broke in rudely.

How seldom is brotherly advice accepted in a kindly spirit! Ruby's drooping eyes snapped open and her smiling mouth shut tightly. "I'll say just what I want to say, Joe Webster, and I'd like to see you stop me!" Then something in the expression of Buddie Hard's face and the sight of his close-cropped head made Ruby pause. She grew coy again and announced in a tone simply reeking with tact: "On some people I like long hair and on some people I like short hair."

Her tact got the reward it deserved. Bud turned coldly away and inspected the landscape and Stephen returned to Amelia.

"I knew what you'd say, Amelia. When I saw you coming along, I said to myself: 'There's a girl that's got some sense!' "

His flattery was so obvious that all the small boys present grunted in disgust, but Amelia only dimpled and squirmed the more.

"Did you really, Stephen?"

"Amelia Hard!" her brother shouted, "you stop talking to boys on the street! And what's more, you go on home!"

"Won't either!" Amelia declared, and having declared herself she started off. "Come on, Ruby, we're going."

"Good-bye, Amelia," Stephen called after her. "See you again some time."

Amelia trotted jauntily away, evincing her scorn of a whole world of brothers by many a saucy little squirm. Ruby followed her slowly. Nobody called good-bye to Ruby. She turned back once or twice but Stephen seemed not to see her. Bud continued his inspection of the landscape, and her brother met her each time with a stony scowl of disapproval.

"You see," Stephen remarked when the boys were once more alone.

"See nuthin'," Bud Hard insisted. "Every time I get a hair-cut my mother makes the barber run the clippers all over my head. Guess I know." He extended his smooth round little bullet of a head in evidence.

"All the ladies I know talk about my hair first of all." Stephen spoke simply as one merely stating a fact.

"No women ever said anything about my hair!" Bud declared proudly. He looked around challengingly but no one questioned his word. "Besides, I wouldn't have it long anyhow. If you have it long, they can always tell when you've been in swimming." He paused at a suggestion his own words gave him. He looked a moment at Stephen's shiny locks, then turned to the others.

"Say, fellows, let's go in today."

"It's pretty early," Joe Webster demurred, and one of the others said: "I don't think it's fun while the water's cold."

"Cold? The water's not cold! It's the air that's cold. Once you get into the water it's warm. What do you say, Stephen, will you come?"

"Yes, I'll come. I like the water."

The others still hesitated but when Bud, with a sly wink, patted imaginary locks and then, submerging them in imaginary water, shook them out in a shower of imaginary drops, they gave one glance at unsuspecting Stephen and agreed.

IN spite of the warmth of the late spring sun, the air was sharp and chill and three at least of the party began stripping on the banks of Goose Pond with unmistakable signs of reluctance. They pulled off shoes and stockings slowly and their timid toes, touching the cold ground, curled back in protest. Then instead of leaping quickly into the oily greyish water, they seated themselves on their piles of clothes in shivering little pyramids, hugging knees to chins. Stephen alone acted as though it were midsummer. He threw off his clothes in haste, performed a spontaneous dance of joy upon the chill mud of the shore, then rushed gleefully into the icy water. Bud followed him, not gleefully perhaps, but promptly.

"Hi, you fellows!" Stephen called to the shivering ones on shore. "Come on in! It's fine!"

They needed urging. "If only I was once in," Joe Webster explained, "I wouldn't mind it at all. But it's the getting in."

"Same here," the other two bleated.

Bud called out scornfully: "Say, what are you fellows waiting for? Summer?"

His sarcasm acted on them like a prod. They pried themselves slowly forward into the water. "Ugh! Ugh!" they shivered.

"Get wet all over," Stephen advised, "then you won't feel one bit cold. This way." He turned a sort of somersault in the water as a duck does when it sees a succulent morsel in the depths.

He came up blowing and spluttering with dripping locks plastered close over neck and face. These he shook out with exactly the motion Bud had used. "That's fine!" he shouted. "Come on! Try it!"

The others, showing signs of extreme misery, slowly submerged themselves.

Goose Pond lay in a hollow close to the Pike but not commanded by it. The crest of the surrounding ridge was a little higher than the road except in one place where there was a break. At this spot people riding by in wagons or autos could catch a glimpse of the pond. It was such a fleeting glimpse that ordinarily it was not fraught with peril to the swimmers. Today, however, more than one vehicle had stopped a moment at the gap while an anxious parent scanned the pond to make sure that no offspring of his was among the young daredevils braving the rigors of the season. Finally a parent arrived who saw what he expected. The sight put something into his voice that deepened the gooseflesh on his son's body.

"Buddie Hard, is that you in that icy water?" From its melancholy clerical tone the swimmers knew the voice even before they looked up and saw the minister's buggy standing in the gap.

In a moment the minister himself was scrambling down the hillside. Anxiety as well as annoyance showed plainly on his face. He reached the shore of the pond as soon as the swimmers.

"What do you boys mean?" he demanded sternly. "Do you want to get pneumonia? Get into your clothes as quickly as you can and I'll drive you all home. You'll have to take hot baths and go to bed."

Four of them obediently began the hopeless task of pulling underwear over dripping limbs. The fifth, when his hands had skimmed the water off his body, wrung out his hair and then began to slap himself vigorously. The sight seemed to enrage the minister.

"Do you hear me?" he roared. "Dress this instant!"

Stephen blinked at him politely. "I want my body to dry first. I should probably catch cold if I put my clothes on while I'm still wet."

"What!"

STEPHEN, taking the minister's exclamation to be a question, repeated himself and continued his exercises.

The minister turned an outraged eye on his son. "Buddie, who is this impudent boy?"

Buddie's relations with his father were evidently of a non-committal nature, for he answered vaguely: "I don't know. Some new fellow."

The minister returned to Stephen. "What is your name, sir?"

Stephen who was shaking out his locks to the sun, looked up calmly. "Stephen Galt, sir."

Like the rest of Truxton, the minister bowed to something in the family name. His manner changed. It was severe still, but with sorrow rather than irritation. "Well, Master Stephen Galt, allow me to say one thing: if you die of pneumonia tonight, you will have only yourself to thank." With offended dignity he turned to the others. "Come along, the rest of you. The sooner you get home the better."

He led the way up the shelving hillside and his four captives, sodden and shivering, followed meekly.

"So long, fellows!" Stephen called after them.

They glanced back covertly. Stephen was standing with legs wide apart, wind-dried and sun-kissed. His sturdy well covered little body was already in a comfortable glow, and his hair was beginning to stand out in a soft aureole about his head. He waved his new friends a cordial farewell but they, with no answering signal, turned hopeless heads and trudged on behind the minister.

As it chanced none of the five small boys died that night of pneumonia. Even Stephen escaped and like the others was able to be about as usual the next day. But unlike them he had no scars of battle to exhibit, no thrilling tale of suffering to relate. He listened interested and a little bewildered as the others outvied one another in their boasts of parental cruelty.

"Gee, but I got a walloping last night!" Buddie Hard announced. "The old man always takes a barrel stave to me because he says that's what he used to get when he was a kid. Last night he got a new stave that I hadn't had a chance to smooth down.

"After he finished with me, it took my mother an hour to dig out the splinters. Maybe you think it didn't hurt!"

"Why did your father do that?" Stephen asked.

"Why did my father do that?" Bud mimicked in great amusement. "Because he caught me in swimming, of course."

"What do you boys mean," he demanded sternly. "Get into your clothes and I'll drive you home"

"Bet you didn't get it any worse than I did," Joe Webster declared. "I'm all over blisters. My old man uses the sole of a slipper, but the blamed thing's got holes in it and every time he whacks me those holes suck up some fresh blisters. I'll show you if you don't believe me."

"Blisters is nothing to whelps," Harry Burns announced. "I just wish you could see the whelps on my legs. I tell you there's nothing like an old razor strop to raise whelps."

"Whelps!" gasped Stephen. "What do you mean, whelps?"

"I'll show you." Harry turned down his stockings and exhibited legs that were still swollen with red and white corrugations.

"Welts!" Stephen murmured.

"I call them whelps," Harry insisted; "and since they're on my own legs, I guess I ought to know."

As the general feeling supported Harry, Stephen had nothing more to say.

"What did you get?" Buddie Hard demanded.

"Nothing. When I told my father I had been in, all he said was, 'Pretty cold, wasn't it?' Then I asked him if he didn't think I ought to have my hair cut for summer and he agreed with me. So we've persuaded Nancy and she's going to let me have it cropped Saturday."

They looked at Stephen suspiciously unable to decide whether his simplicity was real or assumed. All experience was against its being real. "Pretty cold, wasn't it?" was not the remark a parent was likely to make on such an occasion. Stephen was probably lying, and if he was lying, it must be for good reason. You see, up to a certain point parental cruelty is a matter of pride, of emulation. Beyond that point it is so horrible that it becomes a matter of shame and any rightminded boy conceals it as best he can.

"H'm," murmured Bud thoughtfully, and each of his friends gave out a similar grunt.

"I suppose you fellows are not going in again?" Stephen ventured.

"Why do suppose that?"

"Are you?"

"Sure. We're going in this afternoon, aren't we fellows? It's warmer today and it's going to be warmer every day now."

"But won't your father give you another beating?"

"YES. He usually keeps it up for a week." Bud looked at Stephen knowingly. "See here, Steve, we're going in at three o'clock, but don't you come if you don't want to."

They scarcely expected to see him when the time came. but he was there. As he undressed they examined his body furtively. It was as smooth and rosy and unbruised as the day before. He likewise examined them and saw plain evidence of all they had said. The days went by and this evidence became ever plainer. As a matter of course, of principle, one might say, they went in swimming every day, and every night paid the price.

They did not for a moment doubt that Stephen also was paying the price. Though his body was untouched, his manner was troubled. In due time his hair was cut, yet in spite of this triumph something seemed weighing on his mind and weighing every day more heavily.

"Don't believe I'll go in today," he remarked one afternoon with an assumption of carelessness.

Bud pricked up his ears. "Why not?"

Stephen seated himself laboriously on a log before answering. "The truth is I've had a little accident. I've burned myself."

"Burned yourself! Where?"

Stephen indicated a spot on the lower side of his thigh well toward his knee. "That's why I have to sit down so carefully."

It was a strange place for one to burn oneself accidentally and his friends with ill-concealed curiosity urged him: "Aw, come on in! It won't hurt you!"

Stephen allowed himself to be persuaded. He undressed slowly and revealed at last not one burn but two, one on each leg, round as a cracker and painfully inflamed. His friends gave a whistling murmur of surprise.

"Golly!" Bud remarked, "I will say for my old man he never did anything like that!"

Stephen protested weakly. "I wouldn't have you think it was my father did it. Really it wasn't. I did it myself."

They did not argue the matter. Without words they let Stephen understand that they realized of course his point of view and would not question it, but at the same time they knew what was what. They liked him, too, for the stand he was taking and they began showing him a new consideration.

By the next day the fame of his burns had gone abroad and Bud's sister, Amelia, stopped him on the street to say: "Stephen, I'm awfully sorry and I think it's just mean, too!"

Stephen, pretending not to understand, smiled as a martyr might with a sigh of long suffering humility.

Later he met Ruby Webster who, with tears of sympathy, asked: "Does it hurt very much, Stephen?"

"Does what hurt?" Stephen (Continued on page 746)

FOR thirty years, in peace and war, Johnson & Johnson's Red Cross Surgical Dressings have been accepted everywhere as the standard of quality and purity. Through the work of the Doctor, the Hospital, the Nurse and enlightened Mothers, these dressings are making the application of surgical cleanliness possible in every home. The world knows today that in serious accident or minor hurt, the greatest danger comes from germ infection. Even scratches and pricks, when not cleansed with an efficient antiseptic or when bandaged with a cloth not aseptic (surgically clean), may develop inflammation, gatherings and grave illness. The keynote is Surgical Cleanliness—which means freedom from infectious germs in the injured flesh and in the bandage.

Equip your home with Johnson & Johnson's surgically clean Cotton, Gauze and Adhesive Plaster dressings, antiseptic cleansers and disinfectants. Be prepared for any emergency. The timely application of these dressings may mean the saving of life, limb and suffering, not only in war and hospital, but in the home, factory and camp.

Your druggist can supply you. We direct you to a drug store because a good drug store is a wonderful convenience and protection to any community and merits your support. Druggists universally dispense Johnson & Johnson's products because they know by professional training and long years of practical experience that these products are the standard in uniformity, quality and purity by which all dressings, antiseptics and disinfectants are judged.

Stephen Craves the Universal

said with an air of jocularity that failed to deceive Ruby.

"You know what I mean," Ruby insisted feelingly, "and I think it's terrible, too!"

By the third day Stephen was a marked character. People turned to look at him on the street and more than once he saw fingers pointing him out. Late in the afternoon he chanced to pass the Presbyterian Church just as the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary were dispersing. "There's that poor Galt child now!" he heard some one say. Instantly there was a chorus of "Where?" and then individually and collectively they looked at him with an expression of such compassion on their faces that in something like fright Stephen turned and shambled down the side street. He glanced back once over his shoulder. The women, still gazing after him, were talking and gesticulating in great excitement.

The experience was disquieting. "Don't see why they can't mind their own business!" he told himself indignantly. Then he added with apparent irrelevance: "What I'd like, would be to get away for a few days."

III.

PUBLICITY whether it be fame or notoriety is a bird shy of capture, but once snared it becomes as domestic as a family parrot. And as unescapable, too. There always comes a time when the object of its favor, like Stephen, sighs wearily: "What I'd like, would be to get away for a few days." Back of this wish there is, of course, an immediate as well as a general cause. In Stephen's case the immediate cause was the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church. The memory of their sympathy pursued him like a bad conscience, disturbing his waking hours and haunting his dreams. From the first he was sure no good would come of it.

The following afternoon instead of going to the pond he sought distraction at the Library. To his relief he found that Miss Bradin, the librarian, had not heard of his sufferings. She met him as a public character longs to be met—simply and as a mere human being. After they had chatted a few moments on the general state of literature, she told him about a book that she had been saving for him. It was an amazing book on the subject of Antarctic Penguins. Stephen went through the pictures carefully and dipped here and there in the text. Had he been able to lie on the floor, flat on his stomach, he would have stayed all afternoon. As it was, the necessary formality of sitting well forward on the edge of a chair was so tiring that by mid-afternoon it forced him to give up his reading and wander home.

His mother was alone in the studio. She was busied drying some curtains that she had just dyed. Stephen congratulated her on the lovely color she had succeeded in getting and then began telling her about penguins. His recital was interrupted by the thump-thump of the knocker.

Stephen went to the door and a moment later ushered in a visitor with the announcement: "Nancy, here is a lady to see you."

Neither Stephen nor his mother recognized the newcomer, but to Stephen at least there was something familiar about her. In type she was plainly the wife of a professional man who was either unsuccessful or underpaid. She had "position" in the community, as her manner declared, and she had to maintain this position against a fight with poverty that showed itself in the shabbiness of her appearance and in the lines of worry on her anxious little face. These two things had given her what might be called her class manner that pendulated between an aggressive assertiveness and a sort of wistful servility.

"I am Mrs. Hard," she said, "the wife of the Presbyterian minister."

Of course! Stephen saw at once the family resemblance between her and her children and even between her and her husband.

Stephen's mother received her cordially. "This is very good of you coming to see me. Our boys have become friends and I hope we shall be. Won't you be seated?"

Mrs. Hard sat down but not comfortably. She held herself straight and uncompromisingly. "I ought to tell you that this is neither a social nor a parish call. You have never been to our church and of course I call only on Presbyterians."

Stephen's mother bent slightly forward with an air of attention.

"I assure you, Mrs. Galt, I am not here because I want to be. My position in the community requires me to do many things which, personally, I should prefer not to do."

Whatever Mrs. Galt's surprise, she covered it in a soft flute-like, "Yes?"

"But duty is duty," the other continued, "and when the mothers of the neighborhood requested me to speak for them, little as I enjoyed the prospect, I felt I had to do so."

Mrs. Hard settled back stiffly and her hostess murmured another, "Yes?"

"I suppose of course you know why I have come."

"No."

"Then I shall have to tell you. I have come from the Ladies' Auxiliary of our church to protest in the name of American motherhood against the cruelty which your husband practices upon your little boy."

Mrs. Galt looked bewildered. "I beg pardon, Mrs. Hard. What are you saying?"

The minister's wife, feeling by this time somewhat at ease, repeated herself with platform precision and emphasis.

"Do you mean Stephen?"

"I think Stephen is the only little boy you have, is he not?"

"Yes."

"Then I presume it is Stephen I mean."

In spite of this assurance, Mrs. Galt again murmured: "Stephen? Do I understand that the Ladies Auxiliary of your church protest against the cruelty that my husband practices on Stephen?"

"That, Mrs. Galt, is exactly what I am saying."

"May I ask what form this cruelty takes?"

"A form of punishment that is brutal in the extreme—I might say heathenish."

"Punishment! Stephen has never been punished in his life!" Mrs. Galt looked at Stephen expecting the support of his denial. To her surprise he said nothing. Then something in his expression seemed to tell her that he was not altogether unprepared for Mrs. Hard's revelation. She looked from one to the other of them in puzzled thought.

"Steenie," she said at last, "I think Mrs. Hard would like a cup of tea. Will you please prepare the tea-tray?"

Stephen would have lingered behind the hangings that separated the studio from the kitchen had it not been contrary to code. As it was, in spite of his interest in Mrs. Hard's visit, he went straight on to the far end of the kitchen, put on the kettle, and prepared the tray. When he returned he found the subject of conversation had changed.

"I have been dyeing those curtains today," his mother was saying, as he handed Mrs. Hard a napkin. "Do you like them?"

"I think they're lovely. I've had snapdragons with just those shades." During Stephen's absence Mrs. Hard's manner had lost its aggressiveness and was friendly now and a little wistful. "We need downstairs curtains but I don't see how we can manage them this year. You know we've got four youngsters to think of and Mr. Hard's salary is not very big."

"Why don't you dye them yourself? They're not expensive then."

"I don't know how."

"I'll show you. Come here some afternoon and we'll have a beautiful time doing them."

"Wouldn't it be trouble for you?"

"Not the least."

Stephen was filled with amazement and also relief to see how easily women drift from one extreme to another. He was

When the baby can't sleep

It's in the long peaceful hours of sleep that your baby grows. When he can't sleep something is wrong. He may be nervous from too much playing—he may be too warm or too cold—something may be hurting him. But most likely of all—his food is wrong.

Perhaps his little system is desperately struggling with the heavy curd and the germs of cow's milk. Cow's milk is meant for the four big stomachs of a calf—not the one tiny stomach of your baby.

The baby will sleep as he should and grow as he should if you give him the food he needs. Nurse him if you can. If you can't, give him the nearest thing to mother's milk.

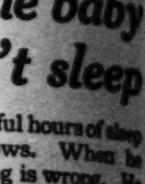
Nestlé's Food
(A complete food—not a milk modifier)

Because it has fresh cow's milk as a base, it contains all the good that cow's milk contains.

Because all the dangers are removed, the tough curd modified and other baby needs added, it is just what your baby needs to build a healthy body.

Because it is made scientifically—and reduced to a powder—because no hand touches it and it comes to you in an airtight can—because you add only water and boil—it is as free from germs as mother's milk itself.

Remember, it is raw cow's milk that so often brings germs of scarlet fever, diphtheria and summer complaint to babies. Keep those deadly germs away from your baby. Keep him safe on Nestlé's.



Send the coupon for free sample box of Nestle's—enough for 12 feedings—and the Specialist's book on the care of babies. Don't delay. Your baby's health depends on the food you give him now.

Stephen Craves the Universal

just breathing freely when his mother turned to him and from her expression he saw his mistake.

"Steenie, has Tertius ever been cruel to you?"

Stephen tried to toss the matter lightly aside. "What a question! Of course not!"

"Has he ever burned you?"

"No."

"Are there any burns on you now?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

Stephen indicated the two places with his hands.

"Why haven't you told me about them?"

"Oh, they don't amount to anything."

"How did they happen?"

"Well, you see I was experimenting. I made two little mustard plasters the way I've seen you make them and I put them on when I went to bed. They hurt a good deal but I left them on and after while I went to sleep. The next night I put on two more in the same place."

"And then you told the boys your father had burned you?"

"No, Nancy, I didn't. I said I had burned myself."

"Then why do they think he did it?"

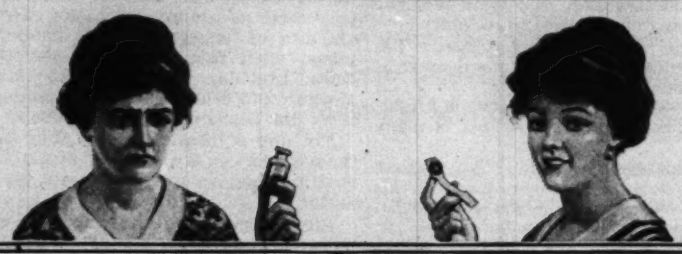
Stephen smiled at his mother with a frankness that he hoped would be irresistible. "I'll tell you how it was: I told them I did it but I spoke in such a way that they'd be sure Tertius did it."

"Well, I never!" Mrs. Hard gasped weakly. During the catechism she had leaned forward with interest. Now she lay back limply in her chair and took a last sip of tea.

"Steenie," his mother said, "truthfulness has been the one thing your father and I have always insisted on. You know that. You have never been punished, but you would have been for untruthfulness."

"But, Nancy dear, I told the truth!"

"Yes, but you made it appear an untruth. So the result was an untruth. That is the worst kind of lie."



My Corns
Are Eternal

I've pared them a hundred times. I've tried a dozen treatments which they told me would end them.

I've infected my foot by close paring. I've made my feet sore with harsh applications.

But the corns remain, as kill-joys for every occasion. And I can't believe that anyone knows how to really end a corn.

My Corns

Years ago I read of Blue-jay. One night I applied it and the pain stopped at once. In two days the corn disappeared. Since then I have done that with every corn, the moment I felt it. Then I forgot it.

In all those years I have never suffered an hour. I have never had a full-grown corn. I say it is folly to have them.

Stephen's face fell. "Nancy, I never thought of that."

"Think of it now. And think of how you have represented Tertius to the outside world. Here is Mrs. Hard who came here this afternoon supposing Tertius a monster of cruelty when the truth is he loves you so dearly that he has never punished you even at times when he should have done so."

Red shame mounted Stephen's cheek and the waters of humiliation, flooding his heart, began to overflow his eyes. "I didn't think about that side of it at all, really I didn't. I'm awfully sorry, Nancy!"

"What am I to do with you?" his mother asked.

Anything! Stephen wanted to cry. No punishment could be severe enough if only by enduring it he could prove his devotion to the father whom he had thoughtlessly slandered. But before he could express himself, Mrs. Hard spoke.

"If he were my boy," Mrs. Hard said, "I know what would happen to him. We'd give him a little of the sort of thing that he said we had given and it wouldn't be any more than he deserved, either!"

After that Stephen had nothing to say. His words froze and his heart froze and his face grew sullen and stony.

"You may go out," his mother said quietly. "Be back by half past six."

IV.

STEPHEN was grateful to escape and at the moment of escape decided to go and never to return. That would be the simplest plan, as affairs at home seemed bent upon shaping themselves unpleasantly. He knew that his father and mother would miss him and he felt a little sorry for them. But, he asked himself emphatically, if minister's wives and people insisted on stirring up trouble, what else could a person do?

Having come to this decision Stephen spent an eternal hour tramping the streets until, weary and hungry, he discovered that his feet were of themselves turning homeward. Stephen would have held back if he could but he could not. It was as though he had met an inviolable law of nature—one that asserts itself toward evening and that says plainly: So long as you have a home you've simply got to go back to it. Realizing the futility of argument, Stephen went.

Dinner for his parents and supper for Stephen went their allotted courses without mention of the afternoon's visitors. Stephen had always looked upon his parents as persons of discrimination and he felt that they were more than justifying his judgment. Yet one question remained: Had they reached such heights of understanding that they would ignore the subject of Mrs. Hard indefinitely or were they merely waiting until dinner should be over? The whole situation was a little puzzling as it was a new one for which the past held no precedent.

Throughout the meal Stephen was particularly anxious to help. He anticipated the wants of each parent, he saved his mother numberless journeys to the kitchen, he showed his father all the attentions of a careful host. Yet he made no effort to hide the fatigue which was weighing down his eyelids.

"Nancy dear," he remarked casually, "just the minute I finish wiping the dishes for you I'm going to hop into bed."

His mother looked at him a little quizzically. "Are you very tired?"

"I can hardly keep my eyes open."

"In that case, I'll do the dishes alone. There are only a few."

Stephen protested stoutly. "You'll do no such thing! Besides, it will be better for me to stay up a little while after eating."

"Do you think so?"

Yes, Stephen thought so.

"Well, then, Tertius," his mother said turning to his father, "that will give you just the time you want to go over with Steenie that little matter you spoke of."

Tertius looked as uncomfortable as Stephen but under his wife's scrutiny, he murmured: "Very well."

"I'll clear the table and leave you alone."

A sudden fear entered Stephen's heart. "Please, Nancy, don't go. You stay, too."

"No, Tertius doesn't want me."

With an air of bustling cheerfulness she left them. The two who remained looked at each other with much the same expression of awkward uncertainty.

"H'm," Tertius began at last. "I'm sorry, Steenie, but you know how it is: 'The time has come,' . . . "

Stephen took up the quotation brightly: "'The walrus said, to talk of many things,' . . . "

Tertius shook his head. "No, we shall have to do something more than talk this time." He gazed at his son with puzzled expression. "What made you do it, Steenie?"

"Do what?" Stephen began innocently. There are times when innocence is ill-advised. Stephen saw his mistake and with a change of front became all frankness. "To tell the truth, Tertius, I don't know why I did it myself." A frown of perplexity gathered between his brows. "You see, Dad, we're so different from the people around here. They think us strange and I'm sure I think the same of them. You know, Tertius, you'd never think of being rude to me. You'd never say: 'Now don't you do this, and if you do I'll beat you,' but that's exactly the way the fathers and mothers around here always talk. It's just as though they weren't good friends with their own children. So the children are always doing things they know their parents don't want them to do and the parents are always trying to catch them so's they can lick them. Now you know, Tertius, we're not a bit like that."

"Do you mean, Steenie, that you wish we were?"

"No, truly I don't! We three are just the same and that's why we love each other."

"Then why, Steenie——"

"It was this way, Dad: it was easy enough for me to go in swimming because you and Nancy let me do anything just so I take care of myself and don't get hurt or sick. But it's different with the other fellows. They're not allowed to do things. Of course they do them anyhow and they always get found out and then they get licked. Now it takes nerve to do a thing when you know you're going to get licked for it, don't you think so? I wish you could see Buddie Hard. He's all welts. The minister uses a barrel stave because he says that's what he used to get licked with when he was a kid.

How to be Well and Strong

By Homer Davies

HAVE you ever stopped to consider just what it is that keeps that most wonderfully delicate and intricate piece of mechanism—your body—working in harmony? If you have not, you should become acquainted without delay with the fact that it is your nerves.

Your nerves regulate and govern absolutely every process that goes on within you. Sever the nerves leading to the eye and not only would you be unable to move the eye, but your sight would be gone forever. Your nerves regulate the beating of your heart, one set making it beat and another keeping it from racing too fast. You breathe unconsciously, your digestion proceeds without your having to think of it at all. The glands create and distribute their secretions, all at the bidding of your nerves.

It has been definitely established that more than 99 per cent. of all humanity, past their majority, are deficient from a standpoint of nerve strength and, therefore, are deficient in nervous energy.

Nearly all functional weaknesses and disorders can be directly traced to weak nerves and depleted vitality.

Macfadden, who is probably the foremost general physical culture authority in the world, says of Energy: "The longer and more thoroughly we study the structure and functions of the human body, the more clear and absolute becomes the conviction that the secret of human strength and energy lies in the nervous system."

Were it possible to chronicle all the failures, not due to lack of brains, but to a lack of physical vitality, which is now recognized as an illness in itself, there would be a list so long as to appal the world.

Every great man of history—every highly successful man of the day—is possessed of more than an average amount of energy. Some have been gifted with this wonderful quality as were Lincoln, Napoleon, Rockefeller, Morgan and others; and some developed it as did Gladstone and Roosevelt.

Not one of these men, as they admit themselves, could ever have attained the position they occupy were it not for this factor.

Big muscles, unless accompanied by powerful nerves, are as useless as a trolley car without electricity. If your nerves are weak your every organ will be weak in exact proportion. If you are troubled with indigestion, constipation, a weak heart, weak kidneys, a torpid liver, or any of the functional ills that flesh is heir to, you should look immediately to your nerves. For unless your vital organs are receiving their due share of nervous energy they cannot possibly do their work. Advanced thinkers in the medical world as well as those who do not use drugs have sought in vain for some direct method for the strengthening of the nerves.

Exercise, Osteopathy, Deep Breathing, Chiropractic, Hydrotherapy, Electricity and other methods without end have been advanced at one time or another, as offering an ideal means for the building of vitality, or rather nervous energy, which is what vitality really means.

Many of these have much to commend them, but not one can benefit the nerves except in a most roundabout and uncertain way.

It has remained for one Robert Duncan to discover a method for direct nerve stimulation. By his methods he can build and create a degree of energy that you can actually feel course through your body within a few minutes unless you are horribly run down, and even then, it can be developed within a very short time.

By this method he is enabling people to absolutely overcome functional weaknesses and disorders without resorting to tortuous exercise, drugs, repulsive diets, and in addition build for themselves a degree of energy that will be the determining factor in their success in life.

He tells all about this discovery in his book "Building Energy," and has agreed to send a copy free to any reader of The National Sunday Magazine, who will write Robert Duncan, Room 403, U. S. Express Building, New York City.

Every man and woman in America should read this work, and every man, woman and child should follow its precepts.

This country is coming to be known as a country of neurasthenics. You should not be one of those who is a slave to his nerves. Develop them so that you may enjoy the health and the worldly success that is your birthright.

NOTE.—It will be impossible to have this offer continued for an indefinite period. So it is suggested that all readers avail themselves at once of this opportunity to obtain this unusual book while this offer prevails. Write direct to Robert Duncan, 403 U. S. Express Building, New York City, mentioning having read the offer in The National Sunday Magazine.

And Harry Burns' legs are covered with blisters because his father uses an old razor strop. Don't you see, Dad, when I saw how those fellows kept on going in even when they knew what was coming to them, it made me a little ashamed and I wanted to make them think that I had to pay up, too, only worse, and that it took more nerve for me to go in than for them."

Father and son regarded one another solemnly.

"You were ashamed not to be like everybody else?"

"Yes, Dad, I suppose that was it."

Tertius was silent a moment, gazing at the ceiling. Then he sighed. "Nancy and I rather prided ourselves on not having to punish you as most children are. But I see that in spite of us you will have to be standardized." He went over to his work table and found a stout ruler. "This is what my father used on me, only his ruler had a brass edge that was jagged in one place. This will do, though."

Stephen gasped and turned a little pale.

"We might as well get it over with," his father remarked.

Stephen temporized. "Let me see that ruler. It doesn't look to me quite straight." He squinted at it a moment, then turned to his father as with a sudden thought. "Tertius, I've been intending to talk to you about penguins. Have you ever looked them up? They're very interesting creatures. I've been reading a book about them at the library. You know they walk upright like little soldiers in white waistcoats. They have wings but they've lost the use of them. And, Tertius, they go joy-riding on icebergs! Think of that! And when the male penguin goes wooing, what do you think he offers the lady penguin?"

"Unbutton, Steenie," his father urged quietly.

"Why, Tertius! I was talking about penguins!"

"Yes, I know. But I'm talking about something else and I fear we shall have to finish my subject first. Unbutton."

"Tertius!" Stephen looked shocked and scandalized as though the suggestion were, to say the least, an immodest one.

His father glanced apprehensively toward the kitchen. "Don't you think we better get it over with before Nancy comes back? I don't care any more about it, Steenie, than you do. In fact, I think it was mighty thoughtless of you putting me in such an awkward position. You know I've always rather enjoyed being your father but I don't give a hang for this sort of thing. I'd let it slip in a minute if I could, but I can't. Nancy's too conscientious. She says it has to be done. Now frankly, Steenie, I think it would be better if we did it alone before she got back."

His father's distress was so genuine that Stephen felt sudden compunction. "All right, Dad," he said, going through the necessary preliminaries with no further protest. "And, Dad, I'm sorry you've got to do it."

He laid himself, a quiet victim, across his father's knees. "Please hit up a little high, so's not to touch the sore spots."

Tertius raised the ruler. "I'll lay on good and hard and you tell me when you've had enough."

"Ugh! Ugh!" Stephen moaned as the ruler descended.

"Enough?" his father asked, after half a dozen blows.

"Not—not quite," Stephen quavered truthfully. "And—and you better make them a little harder."

His father did as directed, working up gradually in speed and force until Stephen cried: "Now! I think that's enough!"

Tertius stopped and Stephen staggered to his feet. He was sobbing and shaking and his fingers tried in vain to find buttons and buttonholes. Tertius found them for him and then in both arms gathered Stephen to him.

"I'm sorry, old man, that I had to do it," he murmured.

Through his sobs Stephen flashed a smile at his father. "T-t-that's all right, Tertius. W-w-wasn't your fault." He drew himself away from his father's embrace. "W-w-wait a minute. I w-w-want to get a handkerchief. I f-f-feel a little snuffly. I'll be right b-b-back. Then I'll tell you some more about p-p-penguins."

The Fortunes of Lucky Lounsberry

for the time being," said the doctor. "Where do you live?"

"On Richmond avenue," replied the young woman. "I'm Miss Crandall."

"Crandall! Why," said the doctor, "I know your father well. You must go home in my car."

"What's the damage, doctor?" asked Lounsberry, aside.

"Oh, no, I couldn't let you pay anything," declared the girl, overhearing the question.

"That's all right," began Lounsberry. "I'm Lounsberry—Robert Lounsberry —I'm——"

"Father will pay for it," she interrupted, quietly.

Dr. Baker smiled.

"Let's not fight about my fee," he chuckled. Then, turning to Lounsberry, he said: "I'll let you work it out if you will. It's rather fortunate you came in, anyhow."

"I'm a lawyer, not a doctor," replied Lounsberry.

"When it comes to extracting things from people a lawyer is as good as a doctor," laughed the physician. "And that's what this case is. You see that man in the operating chair? That's old Ben Tousey—must be over seventy years of age, and been deafer'n a post half of it. I think the only thing the matter with him is some substance clogging the auricular canal. I might get it out if the old fellow would keep his head still. That's what I want you to do—hold his head."

"I'll keep him still if I have to choke him," responded Lounsberry.

The two drew near the chair.

"Now you hold his head—so," instructed the doctor, "and don't let him squirm. It won't take more'n a second —the darned old blockhead."

"Eh?" exclaimed Lounsberry.

"Can't hear a sound," explained the doctor.

In not much more than the time specified the operation was concluded. While Lounsberry held the patient in a grip like a vise, the doctor thrust his instrument into the old man's ear, gave it a deft turn or two, and triumphantly pulled out a hard mass of wax and hair almost the size of a marble.

"By George, you've got it!" exclaimed Lounsberry.

"That's all that's been ailing him," declared the doctor. "I'll wash out that ear, and he'll be all right."

TOUSEY was sitting bolt upright in the chair. His eyes were staring, and a broad grin was spreading over his face.

"By thunder, I heerd what you said," he almost shouted. "That's the first sound I've heerd in thirty years."

"Well, you can thank this young man as much as me," said the doctor. "If he hadn't held your head while I probed, you and I would probably by now be doing a turkey-trot over the floor."

"I do thank you, stranger," said Tousey. "Here's my hand on't."

The two shook hands. The old man, still grinning broadly, hovered near, longing to hear the sound of voices again.

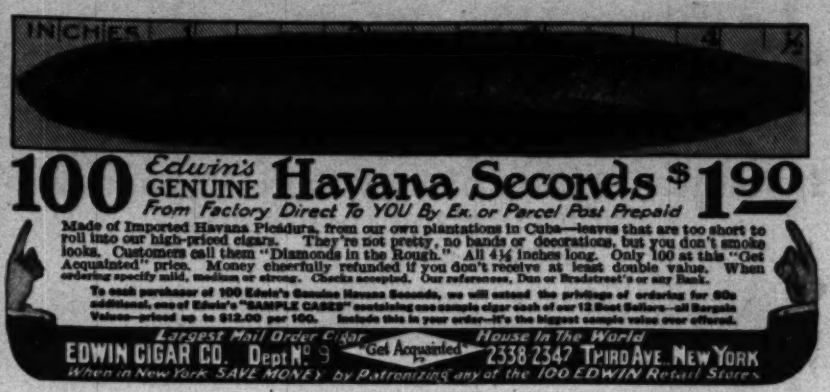
"And now I want to thank you, young man," said Dr. Baker. "You've brought me one patient and helped me cure another. What can I do in return?"

"Nothing, I'm afraid," replied Lounsberry. He smiled at Miss Crandall. "That is, except to see that this young lady gets home safely. I have urgent business."

"Don't worry," answered the doctor, "Dan Crandall'll get his daughter back, all right."

Lounsberry extended his hand to the girl.

"Good-bye," he said. "I should awfully like to learn how you get on. I'm with Seward, Robbins, McLoughlin and



"What! My Car?"

"Yes! Skidded—and it's up to you. You failed to provide the chauffeur with Tire Chains. Only good luck saved your wife from paying the supreme penalty for your negligence. She's on the way to the hospital, painfully injured, but the doctor thinks she'll pull through. You'd better hurry to the hospital and then report to Headquarters".

How strange it is that disaster must come to some men before they realize that all makes and types of tires will skid on wet pavements and muddy roads when not equipped with Chains.

These men do not appreciate, until too late, that by failing to provide Weed Anti-Skid Chains they expose their families to injury and death.

The time to provide against accidents is before they happen. Don't wait until after the first skid. Put Weed Chains on all four tires at the first indication of slippery going and you will have quadruple protection against injury, death, car damage and law suits.

JESS WILLARD SAYS "TAKE NUXATED IRON

If you want plenty of 'stay there' Strength and Endurance and Health and Muscles like mine"

A hitherto untold Secret of his Great Victories over Jack Johnson and Frank Moran

Ordinary Nuxated Iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks time.

I consider that plenty of iron in my blood is the secret of my great strength, power and endurance.

Jess Willard

SPECIAL NOTE.—Dr. E. Sauer, a well known physician who has studied widely in both this country and Europe, has been specially employed to make a thorough investigation into the real secret of the great strength, power and endurance of Jess Willard, and the marvelous value of nuxated iron as a strength builder.

NEW YORK.—Upon being interviewed at his apartment in the Colonial Hotel, Mr. Willard said: "Yes, I have a chemist with me to study the value of different foods and products as to their power to produce great strength and endurance, both of which are so necessary in the prize ring. On his recommendation I have often taken nuxated iron and I have particularly advocated the free use of iron by all those who wish to obtain great physical and mental power. Without it I am sure that I should never have been able to whip Jack Johnson so completely and easily as I did, and while training for my bout with Frank Moran, I regularly took nuxated iron, and I am certain that it was a most important factor in my winning so easily." Continuing Dr. Sauer said, "Mr. Willard's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old, and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron. —E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous rundown conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Gluck—you've heard of them. I'm here on business for them now."

"That so?" inquired the doctor.

"Yes," replied Lounsberry, "and I wonder if by any chance you could help me. I'm trying to find out something about William Holden. He's dead now—lived on a farm near here. Don't suppose you knew him?"

"No, I don't think I ever heard of him," answered the physician. "Most of these farmers around here would rather be killed by patent medicines than by us."

Tousey was showing signs of interest.

"You don't mean old Bill Holden, dew ye, young man?" he piped.

"I dare say he was called Bill," said Lounsberry. "His name was William."

"Lived out by the turnpike," declared Tousey. "I knew him well. He and I growed up together. Died kind of sudden, nearly a year ago."

"About how old was he?" asked Lounsberry.

"Le's see," replied the old man, "Bill was about two years older'n me, and I'm seventy-one."

"Are you sure?" asked Lounsberry excitedly. "This is important."

"Course I'm sure," insisted the old man. "Bill's father died when he was a kid, and his folks was very poor. My old man took him in to live with us. I'll never forget that, because Bill Holden made me my first bob-sled—made it himself."

"That's great," exclaimed Lounsberry. "Do you want to help me?"

"Course I do," said Tousey, "only I don't want to git in no trouble."

"All I want you to do is to conduct me around the neighborhood where Holden lived and point out to me some of his old acquaintances—no relatives, just neighbors and friends. Will you do it?"

"There can't be no harm in that," replied Tousey, "and I'm so tickled to hear talk agin I'll be glad of your company."

Lounsberry looked at his watch. It was noon.

"This is where I start my collection for the Old Men's Home," he thought.

Then, slipping one hand under Tousey's arm, and waving the other at Miss Crandall, he conducted the old man down the stairs and out into the street. Under Tousey's guidance they made for a livery stable. At a tobacco shop Lounsberry filled his pockets with cigars. In passing a bank he stopped and changed a ten-dollar bill into fifty-cent pieces.

"What's that for?" asked Tousey.

"Always like to have plenty of change," replied Lounsberry, fearful of frightening the old man with a reference to subpoena fees and knowing the suspicion with which farmers look upon other litigation than arises from a horse-trade.

Nearly two hours later, after a journey through the drifts at which even the horses, accustomed to the snowfalls of that section, occasionally balked, Lounsberry and his guide arrived at the turnpike where the Holden family had lived. The remainder of the afternoon was employed in rounding-up venerable, bewhiskered landmarks who had known William Holden through life.

In that particular district Tousey proved to be as communicative as a tourist guide. The joy of engaging in conversation again, with his hearing fully restored, made him eager to continue the hunt from settlement to settlement and from farmhouse to farmhouse, his wide acquaintance leading them almost invariably to the prospective witness Lounsberry was seeking.

It was past dusk when the round-up was completed. Nine farmers, all past their allotted threescore and ten, were by this time recalling with mingled emotions the bland stranger who had appeared so frank and sociable, and whose sole purpose had been to bring them to town on a lawsuit which could not yield any benefit to them.

Leaving Tousey at his own door, after filling his pockets with cigars, thanking him and taking the precaution to slip into his hand a subpoena and the required half-dollar, Lounsberry sought a hotel and wired his employer:

"Be here for trial at ten o'clock in the morning. We are ready."

RELUCTANTLY the ten witnesses had been shepherded into court, and were under the watchful eye of Lounsberry when his senior arrived and asked to see them.

C. A. BENSON, 703 Tower Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The young man opened the door of the witness room, and the lawyer peeked in.

"Old Home Week," chuckled Lucky.

"More like a G. A. R. convention," grunted the veteran attorney, keenly surveying the crowd. . . . Presently he closed the door, and stood for a moment in deep thought. Experience had taught him that an impressive stage setting was never lost on a jury.

"Keep 'em here till the trial actually begins," he ordered.

Court was now convening. Lambert, the opposing attorney, sat at a long table in front of the judge, with two of the Holden family by his side. A trace of a sneer, or was it pity? crossed his countenance as he arose and shook hands with Seward.

"Guess this will be a brief trial," he remarked confidently.

He had previously looked over the room, and had discovered no one who resembled a possible witness for the defense. Now that Seward had come into court alone, he felt convinced that his opponent planned to rely upon technicalities or the chance of an error of ruling that might lead to an appeal and a long delay.

The judge mounted the bench, the opening formalities were concluded, and the jurors were called. It was not until the twelve more or less tried and true arbiters of the evidence had taken their oaths, and Lambert was fumbling his papers preparatory to making his opening address, that Seward sent word to Lounsberry to bring on the witnesses.

In they filed. Seward had set his stage well.

The opposing counsel, who had half risen from his chair, looked, blinked his eyes, then fell back into his seat and began a whispered conversation with the Holden nearest him.

"We are ready to proceed," announced Old Seward testily.

"You may address the jury," said the judge, directing his remark to Lambert.

"Just a few moments, if the court pleases," objected the local attorney. "I must consult further with my clients before beginning the trial."

"Take your time," said Seward patronizingly, finding a newspaper in his pocket, and leisurely beginning to read.

Clearly the Holden contingent was alarmed. Now both the Holdens and their lawyer were conversing excitedly in whispers. After a few minutes of apparently heated argument, Lambert walked over to the counsel for the defense.

"Are these old men you have with you witnesses?" he asked in a low voice.

"All of them," replied Seward, not looking up from his paper.

"What will they testify to?"

"You really have great effrontery to ask that," replied Seward, "but you probably have guessed that they are qualified to testify as to the age of the deceased."

"I believe," said Lambert, his voice now trembling, "that if you would waive costs, I could induce my clients to withdraw."

"Just as you like," replied Seward. "I'm ready."

Another whispered conference with his clients, and the defense explained to the Court, through counsel, that the trial would not proceed.

"The parties have settled the case out of court," was his version of the catastrophe.

Lounsberry made a hurried departure, wishing to avoid the wrath of the ten veterans who had made the arduous trip from their farms without getting even so much as a day's entertainment in court. Seward joined him outside a moment later.

"That was a good job, my boy," he said. "The Frugality will be immensely pleased, and I shan't forget it."

THE next day the story of Lounsberry's round-up of witnesses was all over the office. Pop Johnson declared, without equivocation, "It just ain't natural."

Young Dodd grew almost ill when he heard it.

"I suppose," he muttered, "that it's just Lounsberry's luck to have that Crandall girl turn out to be an heiress and marry him."

"I don't know anything about her bein' a prospective Hetty Green, I'm sure," remarked Minnie, the switchboard girl, "but Lucky's already called up Lockport three times today."

Save the Babies

TANGLEFOOT

Catch the disease carrying fly that strays into your home with safe, efficient, non-poisonous TANGLEFOOT; not arsenic poison in an open saucer set within reach of the baby, or a can from which a poisoned wick protrudes, sweetened to attract both flies and babies.

Flies kill many babies, and fly poison more than all other poisons combined.

—But in homes where careful mothers have protected their babies from such risks by using only TANGLEFOOT, both dangers are avoided.

The Journal of the Michigan State Medical Society reports 26 cases of arsenical poisoning from fly destroyers in 1915 in only 11 states; in 1914 there were 46 cases in 14 states.

It states editorially:

"Symptoms of arsenical poisoning are very similiar to those of cholera infantum; undoubtedly a number of cases of cholera infantum were really cases of arsenical poisoning, but death, if occurring, was attributed to cholera infantum.

"We repeat, arsenical fly destroying devices are dangerous and should be abolished. Health officials should become aroused to prevent further loss of life from their source. Our Michigan Legislature, this last session, passed a law regulating the sale of poisonous fly papers."
